Red Tape Snarls Masako's Dream

By DESMOND BILL
Times Staff Reporter

VANCOUVER — A pretty, 20-year-old Japanese girl who hoped to spend the summer in Victoria has been ordered deported by Vancouver immigration officials.

Masako Endo was released on $500 bond in custody of the John Collins family, pending disposition of an appeal to the minister of immigration in Ottawa.

She was to arrive in Victoria this afternoon.

It was the same immigration officer who ordered her deported who released her on bond.

Miss Endo's "dream come true" turned suddenly into a nightmare Friday when she arrived on a flight shortly after noon.

She expected to go on to Pat Bay Airport to meet the Victoria family that had invited her to Canada for the summer.

It was the realization of a dream she has had for years.

Frightened and alone, barely able to speak English, she did not know what was happening to her or why the officials would not let her proceed.

Then a hastily-summoned interpreter soon explained the reason: She was coming to Canada for four months but did not have a visa, a requirement for Japanese visitors coming here for a period longer than three months.

Immigration officials sympathetically arranged to put her up in a Vancouver hotel instead of a jail cell while they looked at her case.

The Collins family met Miss Endo, whom they knew only by correspondence, in the corridor of the hotel about 7:30 p.m.

By then she had been in Canada seven lonely, upsetting hours and was close to tears.

By that time, too, Mr. Collins was in a rage over the foul-up.

The last-minute order was in keeping with earlier complications in Miss Endo's story.

★ ★ ★

They began earlier this year when she wrote to The Daily Times asking the paper to find someone to sponsor her on a visit to Canada.

Mr. Collins, a Liquor Control Board employee, read about her request.

The Collins, who have two children, Trudi, 7, and Deborah, 7, both students at Westerham Schol, felt they should make the offer to sponsor her.

Mr. Collins, a powerfully-built man with a personality to match, feels strongly that "the world has shrunk and we had better start making friends with the people in it."

But unlike others, he and his wife Myra did something about it.

They contacted immigration officials, found out the required procedure, and wrote Miss Endo, agreeing to sponsor her and offering to let her stay in their home and maintain her.

Then came word that she could not come because she did not have money for fare.

Friends who heard of the situation offered to assist financially to bring her here, but it transpired that the difficulty was not money but Miss Endo's father.

B.C. Ferries Face Tieup

FULL-SCALE STRIKE AHEAD?

Will it be a long weekend for woodworkers — or the start of a full-scale strike?

The answer will be known Monday morning.

By Friday, more than half the 26,000 coastal loggers and mill workers had gone on strike despite pleas from union leaders.

Saturday and Sunday, however, are days off.

The first indications will come Sunday midnight when graveyard mill shifts are due to report for work, followed by the 8 a.m. day shifts.

The contract between the International Woodworkers of America and Forest Industrial Relations, representing 120 companies, ran out last Tuesday midnight.

FOLLOWED ACT

The union had complied with all the terms of the Labor Relations Act, but leaders recommended the men take no action until the report of industrial inquiry commissioner Mr. Justice Nathan Nemetz is received next week.

But rank-and-file members said they were fed up with negotiation delays, and began walking out in growing numbers.

The union's 10-man negotiating committee met Friday and decided not to call a strike in the name of the IWA "until the commissioner's settlement proposals are available, provided such proposals are made within a week."

LEGAL RIGHT

The IWA said the men "voluntarily exercised their legal right to stop work" and blamed the spontaneous action of "aggravating delays in the negotiations for which the employers and not the union have been responsible."

An industry statement said the expired master agreement is still in effect.

"That master agreement says that the contract with the IWA shall remain in force until a new agreement is reached or until negotiations are discontinued by either party.

"The mediation process under Mr. Justice Nemetz is part of the negotiations which will continue until he hands down his report."

10 IN JAIL

In other labor news, 10 union leaders are in jail, negotiations, involving 4,000 men at Cominco in Trail have adjourned and Vancouver's 1,500 civic outside workers started the seventh week of their strike.

Other strikes include inside and outside civic workers in North Vancouver and car salesmen at Dominion-Vancouver Motors.

Ten officials of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union chose three months in jail rather than pay fines for contempt of court.

The jailed men included most of the union's negotiating committee. The present contract covering 2,800 longshoremen expires at the end of next month.

At Trail, the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers said contract talks with Cominco have adjourned to allow the union to advise its membership of the latest company offer.

The union wants an extra 50 cents an hour and has rejected 18½ cents. Basic rate is $2.24½. The current contract runs out July 1.

Five hundred ferry workers could be the next to go on strike in B.C.

The possibility of a strike against B.C. Ferries was raised today after deck and catering workers voted 78 per cent against recommendations of an employee-management committee on work schedules.

The vote was conducted over the last three days by secret ballot at meetings at the four major terminals—Swartz Bay, Tsawwassen, Horseshoe Bay and Departure Bay.

The committee's report was accepted earlier this week by the cabinet.

It recommended recognition rights for a union of unlicensed personnel, revised winter work schedules, a 10 per cent pay bonus for working the unchanged summer schedule, shorthanded pay, some extra staff and other benefits.

★ ★ ★

The employees told their representatives they want full collective bargaining "in its true sense," the union of their choice and dues checkoff.

This would mean bringing ferry workers under the Labour Relations Act instead of the Civil Service Act.

In the past, the provincial government has refused to give collective bargaining rights to the B.C. Government Employees Association.

The employees have sent a telegram to Attorney-General Robert Bonner, chairman of a special cabinet sub-committee dealing with ferry problems, advising him of their rejection.

There was no immediate reply from Mr. Bonner, who was travelling today.

Further meetings with the government will be sought.

Said one spokesman: "We are hopeful we can have further talks with the government and resolve this problem."

Earlier, unlicensed personnel agreed to strike next month to back demands for full collective bargaining rights, their own union and dues checkoff.

★ ★ ★

This date was changed to last Thursday but called off when the committee's report was announced last Monday.

Troubles on the ferries extend back over at least the last three years.

The latest round began in December when new schedules were announced—10 days on and four days off in winter and 12 on with three off in the summer.

On New Year's Day, two crews at Swartz Bay walked off forcing the cancellation of three sailings.

They complained to the Civil Service Commission, which recommended no change in the schedules.

The crews then appealed for a board of reference arbitration, but the government declined to establish one.

Later the four-man joint committee was appointed.

Civic Workers Set To Veto Wage Offer

VANCOUVER (CP) — A provincial government inquiry commissioner Friday night proposed a settlement that would give Vancouver's 1,500 striking outside workers a basic wage of $2.60 an hour by July 1, 1967.

The union executive announced immediately that it will urge rejection of the recommendation at a general membership meeting Sunday.

Basic rate now is $2.28½.

Professor Ray Herbert of the law department of the University of British Columbia, appointed last week to investigate the dispute recommended a 13-cent increase retroactive to Jan. 1, 1966, six cents more on July 1, another six cents next Jan. 1 and a final seven and one half cents on July 1, 1967.

The union wants a 70-cent increase over three years. It struck at midnight May 6, after rejecting a final city offer of 28½ cents over two years.

Labor Minister Peterson said the Herbert report was "fair and reasonable" and he urged acceptance by both parties "as quickly as possible."

ALONE AND MOTHERLESS, two-week-old, eight-pound fawn yearns for twin brother at SPCA shelter in Victoria. Fawns were found this morning by Robert Coburn, left, and John Lindsay beside body of mother on highway near Sooke. SPCA director Dave Beeching said: "People shouldn't pick up fawns, unless they are sure the mother is dead, but in this case, the boys did what they had to do." (Bill Halkett Studio.)

12 Men Missing As Trawler Sinks

HALIFAX (CP) — Twelve men from the Nova Scotia fishing trawler Reliance are missing and feared dead following a collision early today between the trawler and the Liberian freighter Bordapian off Nova Scotia's south shore.

The air-sea rescue centre here reported the trawler sank immediately after the collision, which occurred in dense fog about 40 miles southeast of Shelburne, N.S.

RADIOES NEWS

The 5,711-ton freighter, owned by Bordagain Shipping Co. Ltd., radioed first word of the collision at 12:30 a.m. today.

The Canadian Coast Guard cutter Rally was dispatched from Shelburne and reached the scene about 4:30 a.m.

She was being assisted in her search for possible survivors by an unidentified trawler, but dense fog shrouded the area and little hope was offered for the missing seamen.

The rescue centre here said an aircraft would be sent to help in the search as soon as visibility cleared, but an officer at the centre added: "It doesn't look too good for the rest of the day."

The Bordapian, whose port of registry is listed as Monrovia, Liberia, was headed for Halifax when the collision occurred.

The Reliance sailed from Lunenburg, 70 miles southwest of Halifax, at 7 p.m. Friday for a nine-day fishing trip to George's Bank, off the southern tip of Nova Scotia.

Robert Allan, owner of the 298-ton trawler, said he normally goes to sea as her skipper, "but I broke a couple of ribs ashore and so remained behind this time."

That Snap May Be a Passport To Trip Around the World

By CANDIDE TEMPLE

A picture of a baby, a puppy, a sunset scene — these or a host of other subjects caught on film could take you on a fun-filled, globe-circling trip for two with all expenses paid and $1,000 spending money.

All this just by entering the photo in The Times Amateur Snapshot Contest starting June 25. You could be the lucky grand prize winner, or take one of the weekly cash prizes in the six-week contest.

You could also come out on top in one of the three categories — The World in Which We Live, People of the World, and Animals of the World — which qualifies your picture in the national competition.

Only black and white prints will be accepted, made from any type of film.

You may develop and print the pictures yourself, or have them done professionally.

No pictures will be returned.

Mail the print or prints, with your name and address printed clearly on the back, to the Amateur Snapshot Contest Editor, at the Victoria Daily Times.

It's not necessary to send the negatives too, but if you are named final prize winner in one of the three categories, you will be asked to produce the negative.

The contest is geared for amateurs — photographers who do it just for fun, although they may have sold pictures to a publication or

SPY AGENCY ROW

CIA Director Resigns Post

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson announced today the resignation of retired Admiral William F. Raborn as director of the Central Intelligence Agency and said he will be succeeded by his deputy, Richard Helms.

There had been reports of unhappiness at high levels within the CIA about Raborn's direction of the super-secret agency.

As the new head of the CIA, Helms inherits a controversy between Raborn and Senator J. W. Fulbright (Dem. — Ark.), chairman of the Senate foreign relations committee. It was disclosed Friday that Raborn had refused to discuss CIA "sources and methods" at a briefing last February for the foreign relations committee.

His refusal triggered the current Senate battle over whether members of the Fulbright committee should be added to the existing Senate group which supervises the CIA.

Johnson also volunteered a new statement on the Vietnamese war and said that, as a result of almost daily reviews of the situation, "we sincerely feel that the national interest requires that we persist in our present policy."

He hinted at further intensification of U.S. military efforts by saying later that the Pentagon was trying to step up the pace of military hardware purchases this month. That way, he said, the United States could "get earlier deliveries and increase our efforts."

INSIDE CITY HALL

Real Dogfight Shapin' Up Over Stadium

By JIM HUME

"Dear Cousin Christobel:

"We should be having a little fun around here in a couple of weeks time when they open the bids for the building of the centennial stadium.

"That's the one the four municipalities are going to build out at the university as a centennial project. The provincial government and the fellows back in Ottawa have chipped in with healthy grants and Esquimalt Oak Bay, Saanich and Victoria are sharing the balance.

Hume

"The trouble is that even with everybody getting a finger in the pie there's only $519,967 in the kitty — and that isn't much to build a stadium. Royal Athletic is costing around $800,000 so you'll see what I mean.

★ ★ ★

"So what's to worry about if the bids are high? The municipalities will just have to up their ante, you say. Chris, have you ever seen the Intermunicipal boys when it comes to cost-sharing? They can't even agree on who's picking up the tab for a set of blueprints for the new family court building let alone settle fair-shares for an extra $300,000.

"And that's what the wise boys are forecasting when those sealed envelopes are opened revealing for all to see just what the stadium's going to cost.

"Oh, they may work it out, eventually. But you can bet there'll be a real dogfight before they do. And you can bet, too, that Reeve Ray Bryant of Esquimalt will be at his tight-fisted best when the discussions start.

"Not that you can knock Reeve Bryant too much, though his money-saving efforts are sometimes a shade picayune. At least he's trying to hold the line which is hardly the impression you get around city hall at times where they sometimes regard money as an unlimited commodity.

"As a matter of fact another newspaper chap and myself have become so impressed with the city's openhandedness when it comes to dishing out grants that we're thinking of applying for one ourselves. Sort of contribution to daily culture.

★ ★ ★

"I'm just joking, Chris, though such a request would be as deserving as some of those already approved by our beloved city fathers.

"One of these days they might wake up and realize that the many thousands they disperse with heavy-handed largesse each year could be better spent in other ways.

"Like on the Rose-Blanshard urban renewal program.

"The city has $360,000 in the pot for that one. It needs around $500,000 before the federal and provincial boys produce the other $1½ million to complete the job.

"I don't think there'll be too much trouble with the federal boys when we get down to the wire, but I have my doubts about the lads down by the Inner Harbor.

"They never have been completely sold on urban renewal and are already making rumbling sounds which would indicate they're not exactly doing joyous handsprings over the Rose-Blanshard project.

"Remember that one of the big items in the scheme is a six-lane highway replacing what is now Rose Street? Well neither senior government regards the highway as part of urban renewal. That means that the city would have to go it alone on the road-building costs.

"There is a chance that the federal boys can be persuaded that the road — dividing a residential area from an industrial area — is of vital importance. But I don't think there's a hope of convincing the province.

"But the road is a minor issue compared to getting the provincial government to agree to sharing a quarter of the cost of the urban renewal program proper. Once Mr. Bennett does that the road business can be straightened out — no pun intended — later.

"The city may have to go for a four-lane highway instead of six for a couple of years, or it may have to adjust its capital budget and divert funds secheduled for other projects.

"Chatted with Dennis Young about it and he doesn't anticipate any major problem — providing the province goes for the over-all scheme.

"If it doesn't, well that's kaput on a fine idea.

"Went to my second Regional District meeting this week. It was worse than the first. Up there in a stuffy room where if you open the windows you can't hear for the trucks rolling down Government and if you close them you sit in an uncomfortable Turkish bath.

"Can't understand why they don't hold their meetings at city hall where there's lots of room and the surroundings are pleasant. Maybe they haven't got around to that stage in their planning yet.

"I couldn't quite understand your query on the assessment on the Protestant Orphanage. I'd suggest you write Ald. Cecil Parrott. He's on the directorate. I'm sure he would be able to tell you why the assessment is low and why it hasn't been increased in recent years.

Funeral Held For Mariner

Funeral services were held at Sands Mortuary Friday for Capt. Stanley Edward McNeill, a descendant of Capt. William H. McNeill of the SS. Beaver, a Hudson Bay Co. fur trading vessel. He died Sunday at Powell River.

Born in Victoria, he was a resident of the west coast all his life.

His ancestor, William, was a Boston trader who joined the Hudson's Bay Co. in 1832 and became the first master of the historic Ss. Beaver.

McNeill (Shoal) Bay in Victoria was named after him.

The deceased is survived by his widow, Dorothy; two sons, Patrick, Vancouver, and Michael, Queen Charlotte Islands; and three grandchildren.

. . . MASAKO'S DREAM

The downcast little Japanese girl was confused and depressed by the events of the day. The Collins tried to break the langage gap to reassure her that everything would be alright. She had not eaten since having breakfast on the plane and had not slept on her 19-hour journey, her first visit outside of Japan and her first air trip.

That difficulty was resolved when Tom Goodridge, 910 Forshaw, got to know the Collins family through publicity in the paper.

He wrote a friend of his in Japan and got his friend to contact Mr. Endo and reassure him about the Collins family.

Miss Endo was due to arrive on a CPA flight at 12:10 Friday. Mr. and Mrs. Collins waited until 1 p.m. for confirmation that she had arrived, but it was only after a series of frantic telephone calls they learned of her detention.

Mr. Collins reacted instantly. He got the afternoon off work and when he was unable to get a relative to look after his two children he drove to their school, picked them up, put them and his wife in the car and tested the speed limit to catch the 4 p.m. ferry.

On arrival in Vancouver he went straight to the airport and heard from embarrassed officials what had happened.

As authorities explained, Miss Endo had run afoul of a rule they could not waive without a departmental inquiry.

The Collins family went from the airport to the hotel where she was staying.

When should a tree retire?

Nature is reluctant to put old trees out to pasture. So they grow older: prey to fungus, insects, decay. By harvesting mature trees before this happens, we make full use of a resource that would otherwise be wasted.

At the same time, we set the stage for a vigorous new growth from those seedlings we plant in their place. When should a tree retire? When it's time to make way for the forests of your grandchildren.

Soviet Gagging Castro To End More Feuding?

By BEN F. MEYER

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some U.S. analysts believe the Soviet Union may have ordered Cuban Premier Fidel Castro to stop talking and take a back seat in his countrys affairs.

Whether he has been stripped of power, the analysts say, remains to be seen.

The U.S. state department took public notice Thursday of reports that Castro's regime faces "growing popular dissatisfaction." Press officer Robert McCloskey also noted that "it is a fact that Castro uncharacteristically has not been in the foreground of events since May 1."

Analysts here are basing the theory that Moscow may have gagged Castro on persistent reports that the Soviet Union has found some of his recent activities troublesome.

Earlier this year Castro engaged in a prolonged feud with Yugoslavia, a nation that has shown signs of independence from the Communist bloc. The Castro regime's outbursts against Yugoslavia came as the Kremlin appeared to be making a concerted effort to avoid further breaches among bloc nations in light of its continuing battle with China.

SIGNED TRADE TREATY

Only last month the Soviet Union signed a trade treaty for the exchange of $2,000,000,000 worth of goods with Yugoslavia through 1970.

But Romania and Poland have given indications lately that they would like closer ties with the West, particularly in trade. And Premier Chou En Lai of China now is visiting Romania.

Thus the Soviet Union, weary of prolonged aid to Communist Cuba and disturbed by its worsening economy, may have decided to clamp down on Castro to avoid the possibility of his stirring more rifts.

Some Cuban experts also say that Castro's blast at Yugoslavia may have been really aimed at Moscow, which the premier couldn't mention by name because the Soviet Union is keeping his regime afloat with an estimated $1,000,000 in aid a day.

The opinion here, however, seems to be that the Soviet Union is stuck with Cuba and would not cut off its aid after investing as many dollars, men and material as it has in that country.

Another theory heard here is that Castro may be ill. But it's noted that his illness—if true—all but coincided with Moscow's recent dispatch to Cuba of many technicians and financial experts who are seeking to bolster the Castro regime's economy.

Cardin Latest To Get Letter

TORONTO (CP) — The Telegram says Justice Minister Cardin has received a letter from Mr. Justice Wishart Spence concerning allegations made against him during the jurist's one-man inquiry into the Munsinger case.

In a report from Ottawa, the newspaper says that the Supreme Court of Canada justice apparently wrote Mr. Cardin when he wrote Opposition Leader John Diefenbaker, Davie Fulton, former justice minister, and Pierre Sevigny, former associate defence minister. Mr. Justice Spence's letter to Mr. Fulton was dated June 7.

During his inquiry, Mr. Justice Spence said he would notify in advance anyone he intended to criticize in his report. The inquiry ended hearings last month into the relationship between the blonde German woman, Mrs. Gerda Munsinger, and members of Mr. Diefenbaker's cabinet.

The Telegram says that neither Mr. Cardin nor his lawyer, Jack Campbell of Montreal, would comment on receipt of a letter.

Monday, Mr. Fulton made public an 11-page letter he had written in reply to Mr. Justice Spence. The blistering letter was shot through with criticism of the commissioner and the way in which he handled the inquiry.

CHINA BRANDS PARLEY AS SOVIET-U.S. PLOT

PEKING (Reuters)—China today branded a meeting of nine Asian and Pacific countries in Seoul, South Korea, this week as a U.S. bid to set up an Asian anti-Communist military alliance, with Japan as its core.

The meeting was also part of the Soviet-U.S. plot to intensify their collusion against China, The Peoples Daily says in an article signed by Observer, usually the pen-name of a high-ranking Peking official."

'Cultural Revolution,' Says Chou

BUCHAREST (AP) — Chinese Premier Chou En-lai told Romanian leaders Friday the current purges in the Chinese party hierarchy are directed against "bad elements and anti-party intellectuals."

In a speech made available today by Romanian and Chinese official sources, Chou also levelled a sharp attack at the Soviet Union, accusing the Moscow leadership of "great-power chauvinism" in the Sino-Soviet conflict and of "capitulating to American imperialism."

He said the purges were being carried out in the course of a "cultural revolution" and directed against a handful of anti-party, anti-socialist and counter-revolutionary bourgeois intellectuals.

He did not name any of the victims of the purge.

Radio Peking, monitored in Tokyo, said Chou assured the Romanians Friday that their wish not to be tied down to Moscow "will always have the firm support of the Chinese people."

The Romanians have also demanded that East European Communist states have a greater voice in decisions of the Soviet-dominated Warsaw pact military alliance.

The Chinese premier met with Romanian leaders Friday for eight hours. A communique described the atmosphere as "cordial and comradely."

MEETS CEAUSESCU

Informed sources said they believe the No. 1 topic is the Peking - Moscow struggle for world Communist leadership.

Chou and Ceausescu also are expected to take a long look at the troubled Warsaw pact. The Romanians are reported to have opposed any Soviet efforts to drag Warsaw pact members into the dispute with China. Romania also rejects Soviet moves for tight integration of the member nations' defence policies.

Voice From Afar

THE VITRIOLIC ATTACK ON Premier Bennett and his Hydro empire which is published in the latest issue of Barron's, the very conservative, highly regarded New York financial and business weekly, raises some questions which British Columbians have long been asking.

Much of the Wall Street newspaper's anger, of course, stems from the B.C. Electric take-over of five years ago — a closed chapter for most residents of this province. But the paper's comments on the costs and prospects of the vast Peace River and Columbia hydro complex echo those of many local observers over the past few years.

In his latest essay into the New York money market, Mr. Bennett is seeking funds at a time when he must offer very high interest rates. Almost coincident with the Hydro issue, for instance, was an American utility offering which reportedly yielded a record high return to investors. A day later came a $530 million issue of United States government securities which will pay 5.75%. Mr. Bennett must be feeling a financial pinch to be driven to enter such a race for funds. Local investors will recall that his last issue here dropped $2 almost before the certificates were mailed.

In recent months Mr. Bennett and his colleagues have been voicing rather unusual warnings about rising costs, particularly in connection with the Peace and Columbia River projects. This is as close as the ebullient premier can come to a public expression of concern, and we should take it as a fair indication that there are problems ahead, dynamism or no.

The Barron's editorial raises the question of the eventual price of Peace and Columbia power in the light of the increasing cost of financing the projects. Much of the power rate must be dependent on the cost of borrowing capital—and the latter cost is rising steadily. The New York paper complains that the premier's submission is not very informative — a complaint which British Columbians have long been uttering. We have only Mr. Bennett's optimism to satisfy our worries about the disposal of the eventual power output, and the rate which we will have to pay for it. Meanwhile the debt for which the people of British Columbia are responsible is rising to unprecedented heights, and the annual charge for interest increases in proportion.

Discounting some of the journal's attack on the grounds of undying resentment of the B.C. Electric expropriation, there is still much in its criticism which demands close attention. In any case Mr. Bennett's position in the bond market has by no means been improved by the widely published attack. Is it not time now for some frank and candid answers?

A Far East Council

ALTHOUGH CAREFULLY avoiding any reference to China, a 10-nation conference has established an Asian regional organization which could be the stiffest roadblock yet erected in the way of Communist expansion plans.

The Asian and Pacific Council, as the organization is to be known, was formed at a meeting last week in Seoul, South Korea, for the purpose of "a continuing process of consultations, on a regular basis on political, economic, technical, social and information matters," according to the official communique.

At the insistence of Japan and several other nations—and against the wishes of South Korea, South Viet Nam, The Philippines and the Nationalist Chinese regime on Taiwan—there was no mention made of a formal military alliance, and the organization is to have no formal charter and operating secretariat.

In hard cold war terms this may seem to be a disadvantage in some respects, but it also is useful in that the council cannot easily become a focus for Chinese attack on the grounds that the member nations are conspiring against the dominant Asian power. It is one of the facts of life that Asian nations must come to terms with the continued presence for many years of a Communist-ruled China and provocative acts are definitely out of order. Australia and New Zealand, along with Japan, are reported to have brought this wise counsel to the meeting.

The primary job of the council, in fact, should be to promote not military alliances in Asia but economic and social progress which should form a far more solid barrier to Communist expansion. Militarily the area is now dominated by United States power and a military alliance of the council's member nations could only serve to put the council under American hegemony, thus increasing the tensions.

The council hopes in the future to attract other "free countries in the Asian and Pacific regions to participate in future consultations" and the sentiment was expressed that some day it could even include Communist nations.

This organization deserves the whole-hearted support of the West—but in practical ways suited to the area it is intended to serve. The time has passed when the West could impose on Asian countries the type of dominance in military and economic matters inherent in an organization such as the South-East Asia Treaty Organization. Asians must be free to take the lead in handling their own affairs rather than be led in ways which outsiders think would be best for them.

B.C. and Air Pollution

THE BRITISH COLUMBIA branch of the Canadian Bar Associaion sees some deficiencies in the recent laws against air pollution passed by municipalities. For that reason it seeks provincial legislation on the issue, assuming that the senior government is in a stronger position to make such laws stick.

That, at least, seems to be the point made by the sponsor of the recommendation passed by the bar association. "Present regulations passed, but not always enforced, by cities and municipalities do not really solve the problem," he says.

The spokesman has some justification for his statement, though as far as this region is concerned, tardiness in enforcement does not appear to be the wilful intent of the city or municipalities. It is possible to bring an offender into court under regulations now established here. The offender seldom is so summoned. In the first instance, few municipalities wish to jeopardize the payroll of an operating plant in their jurisdiction. They exercise a leniency that blunts and frequently removes the penalty implicit in their laws. Prosecution is delayed to permit installation of proper burning equipment. The offender keeps on offending often beyond the deadline prescribed for him.

Passage of an appropriate provincial law could eliminate delay in enforcement. Moreover, as the sponsor suggests, industrial expansion in British Columbia creates an air pollution problem that extends beyond municipal jurisdiction. Only provincial authority would be broad enough to cover it.

The points are well taken. This community has had enough experience with the difficulties of curbing air pollution to appreciate the need for a strong provincial law covering the problem.

At the last session of the provincial legislature Mr. Tony Gargrave's advocacy of such a provincial law was side-tracked by a ministerial reference to the possible outcome of a pollution conference in eastern Canada this summer. With or without the findings of such investigation, the province should be prepared to act.

"First we wanted to give it to you at 5 o'clock, but we decided to let you sleep in for half an hour more."

A "Thank-You" to School

A little while ago, one of your staff members, Desmond Bill, wrote an article with a rather cynical outlook on graduation. Many of the students at this school, Victoria Senior Secondary, if not all, were somewhat irritated to find a mere spectator voice what seemed to be the indifferent attitude of one student as representing the whole of the sentiments of the '66 graduating class.

It would be somewhat naive not to expect criticism from some students, but they are by no means the majority. To a grade 12 boy or girl who has contributed both a part of his personality and his efforts to a high school, graduation is the culmination of a long and tedious process of growing up. Granted for many the process will continue for years to come, while for others it only lacks practice and experience. But at least, the race has begun and everyone is running.

As for the "flunkies" who stand up and receive recognition, their fate has yet to be determined by examinations and after all if we are to base an entire law system on "the benefit of the doubt" why not practice what we preach. They have as much right as anyone to be there.

Graduation is the grand expression of a thank-you, not only for what we have received in 12 years of school, but also to those people who have given it to us. You wouldn't criticize a church for the same thing.—A Grad of '66.

Waiting, and Waiting, to Be a Canadian

NEXT to getting married, the most important step that a British citizen is ever likely to take is to walk into one of the immigration offices scattered about the country. If he decides on a Canadian immigration centre, as close to 100,000 are expected to do this year, and if he lives in the London area, the adventure—for it is an adventure, no matter how we pad the corners—will begin at the entrance to a large, multi-windowed building that looks across Grosvenor Square to the gleaming, glassy expanse of the American embassy.

Dewey

If his notions are typically British, and if he stops to think about it, he might find that these two buildings and their juxtaposition are peculiarly appropriate to his own ideas about the North American relationship. The American building, its ultra-modern facade surmounted by a great golden eagle, strikes a note of brash irreverence amid its genteel surroundings. With its traditional design, the Canadian building is more familiar and comfortable. Yet it lies so very close to the American building—not in its shadow, perhaps, but appearing to bask in its boldness and strength.

That same British citizen will find, too, that meeting his first Canadian is not all that easy. Inside the main doors he will be directed by an oh-so-British commissionaire to the immigration centre on the first floor (it is not yet time for him to learn that Canadians call this the second floor). There, after queuing up in the best British manner, he will be asked in the best of British accents to fill out a preliminary form.

This done, and because it is now the busy season for immigration, he will take his place is the waiting room among hundreds of his countrymen and their ever-restless children and their ever-squalling babies and he will wait. And wait. He hasn't brought anything to read (that might look off-hand) so he will likely go to the pamphlet-rack in search of clues about what could well be home for the rest of his life.

Clues About Canada

What he can't know is that the waiting room itself holds at least some of the clues about the Canadian way of doing things. It is in fact a distinctively Canadian place, decorated in a style that might be called Unemployment Insurance commission Modern.

A little stiff and hungry, perhaps, our British citizen is finally called by an immigration officer. He has been observing his first live Canadians as they scurried about the waiting room with files under their arms and overwork on their faces. He has noted the youthful short-back-and sides and the occasional crew-cut, the snappy North American cut of the jackets and, occasionally, the North American waistline. But he is totally unprepared for the overwhelming North American folksiness of the greeting: "I guess you must think it's time to put on the feedbag!"

[illegible] follows the officer into a glass-enclosed cubicle. He sits, trying to look twice as sincere as he did in the waiting room, while the Canadian satisfies himself that this particular candidate has the necessary high school education, that he has a skill that is required in Canada (only two per cent are admitted from Britain without such skills) and that he is, in general, the kind of person that will "fit in."

Mutually Impressed

The immigration officer likes what he sees and the candidate likes what he hears about his own particular prospects in Canada. At one point, it is mildly suggested that the candidate's intention of settling "somewhere in the Ontario area" is not as precise as he might have thought. Too, the plan to "drive around Canada to get an idea of the country" might be a little ambitious, but the interview goes well and both agree that the candidate is now ready for the next step in the immigration process.

Another session in another waiting room (he learns from a glass case on the wall that bus drivers hand out things called transfers and that Canadian coins are few and tiny) and he is led into a cubicle for a medical examination at Canadian government expense. Having been pronounced healthy enough to enjoy the Canadian way of life without clogging up our hospitals, he reports back for a final interview where he is told, yes, Canada would like to have him. He agrees to a suggestion that he keep his little nest egg intact and that he accept a travel loan to be repaid, interest-free, within two years of getting a job in Canada.

One of the Multitude

It is done. In the space of one day, our British citizen has become one of the 500,000 who are expected to arrive in Canada this year as immigrants. But he has been lucky. He was not sent home for additional documents. He filled out his forms correctly and passed his medical. He was not among the 40 to 50 per cent of initial inquiries who, for one reason or another, fail to complete the immigration process.

More to the point, he was not among the 10 to 12 per cent of applicants who are turned away outright for reasons of poor health, inadequate qualifications or because of what might be called sociological factors (for example, it is not unknown for colored applicants to be advised that they would find it hard to pursue this or that particular calling in the Canadian environment).

He is, for all practical purposes, a new Canadian.

FROM JACKSON

By CHARLES BARTLETT

Problem of the Alien 'Helpers' in Mississippi

THE raciall ice is melting in Mississippi and the most immediate sign of it is the ill-concealed unhappiness of the state's native Negro leaders at the intrusion of the Meredith marchers.

"We're tired of being everybody's good thing," said Charles Evers of the state NAACP in echoing the solid view of leading local Negroes that the march carries a potential for damage which is unmatched by its constructive possibilities. Mississippi has quietly moved beyond the stage in which outside militants are useful.

This mood was implicit in the memorial march for Medgar Evers in Jackson last Sunday. Some 1,000 Negroes, who endured the broiling sun with little decomposure of their spruciness and dignity, seemed to be saying that this was their struggle and that they are confident of its outcome. Their most emphatic chorus of "amens" underscored Roy Wilkins' admonition: "When it is all over, we must live with the white people in mutual respect."

The summer of 1966 seems in Mississippi to be almost a generation removed from the summer of 1964 which was the last grim stand of the irreconcilables. The fact that much must still be done before the races live in mutual respect does not shatter the broad recognition that immense strides have been accomplished, thanks to the new civil rights laws and the subtle efforts of thoughtful men.

In these circumstances there is an instinct to tone down the stridency of the freedom movement. Projects like the Delta Ministry, whose white staff members seem to be telling rural Negroes to work for a future in which they are free of dependence on white men, are attracting heavy criticism from Negro leaders and white moderates.

Tougaloo, a private Negro college, is losing some of its reknown as a flaming activist center under an impressive new president, Dr. George Owens. The Negroes' indisposition to cut loose from the white race was empahsized by the low vote for FDP candidates — only some 40,000 of the 120,000 Negores who are registered turned out for the primary on June 7.

The civil rights push is still on because the Negroes know they must keep pushing or their momentum will cease. But much of the preoccupation has been diverted into the opportunity of the poverty programs and even into a new campaign to forge a political alliance between the Negroes and organized labor.

Those working on both sides recognize that from this point extremists of the left can menace progress more severely perhaps than extremists of the right. Thus the mixed couples who made a point of attending the first bi-racial services of the Gallaway Methodist Church last winter enlarged the shock of the transition and discouraged its imitation by other churches .

Having moved to take absolute control of the Mississippi freedom movement away from radical outsiders, the Negro leaders are dismayed at the slowness of the whites in realizing that they must build up the stature of the local leadership in order to keep out the aliens. "They talk of dealing with responsible leadership," the complaint goes, "but they don't give us anything to show for our responsibility."

The moderate whites recognize that these Negro leaders need far more recognition than they have been given. They need, in order to hold their standing among their people, to sit on bi-racial committees with leading citizens and to be able to show evidence that their opinions are counted as signficant.

Unhappily this is a stage in the evolution of Mississippi in which manifestations of this kind are difficult. "Segregation is still fashionable," as one man put it, and the important citizens working against it will sacrifice their effectiveness if they show their hand too blatantly.

Mississippi is balking at the step of open bi-racial consultation which the Negroes desire as the next tender of their equality. But the atmosphere is ripening and the step will not be delayed for long because it is essential to the bi-racial goal of allowing Mississippi's problems to be negotiated by Mississippians.

FROM SASKATOON

By JAMES H. GRAY

An Indian Shrine Unknown to the Indians

ONE of the quickest ways of getting an argument going in Saskatchewan today is to stand up in a meeting and shout: "Mistaseni!" For those who came in late, Mistaseni is the name of a 5,000-ton boulder sitting in the valley of the Saskatchewan River. It is allegedly a Cree Indian shrine which will be buried under 100 feet of water with the completion of the Saskatchewan River Dam.

Gray

The argument swirling around the rock is quite simple. Is the rock in fact an Indian shrine or an elaborate practical joke? The resident Indian expert at the University of Saskatchewan department of anthropology says it's a shine. He is Professor Zenon Pohorecky. Most other people seem inclined to the notion that the uproar over the stone may be somebody's practical joke.

Whatever the answer, some huge sums of money are being talked about. A Committee - to - save - the - Mistaseni has been organized in Saskatoon. It wants somebody to pick up the rock and move it to higher ground ten miles away. The Committee even rounded up comedian Dick Gregory to headline a protest meeting and raised $1,500. Other donations totalling $2,000 were scrounged and the Saskatchewan government kicked in $3,000.

Most of the money has been spent on telegrams, telephone calls and publicity in a drive to get the federal government to contribute $75,000 or $200,000 which it will cost to move the rock. Estimates of the cost of the movement vary widely, depending on the estimaters. Thus the Prairie Farm Rehabilitation Administration, the federal agency building the dam, placed the cost at $200,000 while local committee members favor the smaller figure.

Meanwhile the Canadian Historical Sites and Monuments Board has been called in, probably to try to authenticate the claims that the big rock has some religious significance to some Plains Indian tribe. This is likely to take some doing.

The Saskatoon Star Phoenix, for example, sent a correspondent out to interview the Indians in the area. She got nowhere, and could find only a single Indian who had ever heard of the big rock. And his memory of it was exceedingly vague. He thought he recalled having heard that the rock meant something to the Assiniboines. It meant nothing to the Crees. On that all the Indians were agreed.

In Alberta, Indian lore buffs seem agreed that the Plains Indians, being nomads of the first order, were not given to shrine building or shrine worshipping. If the big rock had any significance, it might have been as a meeting place where the bands of a tribe could come together.

As against this, however, is the experience of the Palliser expedition which found it difficult to talk any Indians into venturing into the South Saskatchewan River country on any pretext. It was a sort of no-man's-land between the Cree and the Blackfoot and discretion was regarded as the better part of valor on both sides.

The big stone is probably a glacial erratic, dumped in Saskatchewan by the last retreating ice age.

Perhaps the most curious aspect of the whole agitation is this — the only people getting excited about the Mistaseni are the white people of Saskatoon. The Indians are reacting to the uproar with stoical indifference.

Nature Rambles

By FREEMAN KING

FOR a rugged afternoon's scramble go to Matheson Lake at Metchosin. On the dry banks beside the lake you can find the Commandra growing. This plant has a woody stem and is not very common in this part of the Island.

Along the shallow marshy edges of the lake you can find the Marsh Cinquefoil with its dark purple flowers that have sharp pointed petals and long pinnated leaves. Strange as it may seem, this plant belongs to the Rose family.

Growing on some very old logs that reach out into the water there are a number of Sundews. This plant is an insect-eater and captures its prey by the sticky hairs on its spatulate leaves.

There is a bay in the lake that is covered with the Pond Lily, about three acres in extent. The pads form an almost complete cover over the water.

On the pads there are hundreds of cases from which dragon and damsel flies have emerged. Some of the adult dragon flies are of normal size, others with almost black wings are extremely large.

Also on the pads are many tiny beetles with brilliant metallic green wing covers. If you turn them in the sunlight they seem to change to a purplish red. There are very many other fascinating insects around this lake.

Frogs and salamanders abound. This is a very "rich" piece of water, for there are many gullys leading into it which add minerals and other material from the higher ground during the rainy seasons.

Swimming on the lake you may be lucky to see a pair of Grebes with their young, like a string of tiny tugs.

U.S. LABOR ROLE IN DOMINICAN AFFAIRS QUERIED

By DAN KURZMAN
The Washington Post

SANTO DOMINGO—When the Dominican revolution broke out early last year, one of the first places sacked by angry mobs was the headquarters of the AFL-CIO-supported National Confederation of Free Dominican Workers (Conatral).

AFL-CIO and Conatral officials claimed that Communists had directed the destruction. But many leaders in other anti-Communist labor confederations doubt this. So many anti-Communist workers "hate" the AFL-CIO and Conatral, they say, that it is more likely that the attack was "non-partisan."

Whatever the truth, a large segment of anti-Communist Dominican labor is violently anti-American as well. This bitterness is likely to continue, according to neutral labor experts here, long after the Inter-American Peace Force leaves the country.

Dominican organized labor is split largely into four groups. The largest is prob- groups. The largest is probably the Autonomous Confederation of Christian Unions (CASC), with ties to the revolutionary Social Christian Party. Another is Foupsa-Cesitrado which, after recently coming under Communist control, is very weak. A third is a group of unions attached to ex-president Juan Bosch's Dominican Revolutionary Party (PRD). And the fourth is Conatral.

All these confederations are in bitter competition with each other. The first three have one thing in common. They accuse Conatral of being a tool of the AFL-CIO, the U.S. state department, and the Central Intelligence Agency.

Small Group

Victor Reuther, head of the United Auto Workers' International Department, charged recently after a trip to the Dominican Republic that the AFL-CIO was backing a small, unrepresentative labor group while ignoring the mass organizations.

AFL-CIO and Conatral officials deny that Conatral is any less representative of labor than the other organizations, claiming 30,000 members. Nobody can prove who is right, since figures on union membership are simply unavailable.

Conatral had gained considerable power under the de facto regime of President Donald Reid Cabral, who came to power after the military ousted the democratic government of President Juan Bosch in 1963. But when Reid Cabral, who had close ties with the AFL-CIO, was himself ousted at the start of the revolution, Conatral lost control of most of its important unions.

Although labor as a whole violently opposed the U.S. military intervention, Conatral leaders welcomed it. These expressions of welcome coincided with an AFL-CIO announcement condemning Bosch, the symbol of the revolution, as friendly to Communism, and praising Gen. Elias Wessin y Wessin, who tried to crush the revolution, as an upright, incorruptible man.

Nor did the AFL-CIO or Conatral complain when Bosch's democratic government was overthrown by Wessin in 1963.

"The AFL-CIO is supposed to represent democratic labor," commented Gustavo Salazar, an adviser to the Boschist unions sent here by the anti-Communist Venezuelan Confederation of Labor. "But it backs dictators and militarists against democrats and sets worker against worker, all in the service of the American embassy, which wants to control foreign labor."

U.S. labor experts say that the AFL-CIO is simply trying to foster the independence of Dominican unions. They maintain they are opposed to the other anti-Communist confederations because they are attached to political parties, and are therefore more interested in political than economic ends.

Not Impressed

The argument that, in most democratic countries, labor organizations have ties with political parties does not impress them.

To induce new unions to join Conatral, the AFL-CIO is working through the American Institute for Free Labor Development. The institute, financed largely by the U.S. government and sponsored by leading U.S. businessmen as well as the AFL-CIO, is teaching union leaders the essentials of American-style trade unionism, and building houses for "friendly" sugar workers.

The owner of one $3,800 three-bedroom house built under AIFLD auspices maintained typically that he was glad to have the house—and that he was delighted that the American troops had come. Other workers condemned such new homeowners as "Yankee puppets."

Chinese women still perform arduous and heavy labor but among some clans, such as the proud Hakka of Soochow, such work is regarded by the women as a right. The Hakka men seem content to perpetuate the time-honored custom.

CHINA DIARY

Birthplace of Confucius Still Proud Showplace

By FRANCOIS SULLY

(Newsweek correspondent Sully recorded his on-the-spot impressions of China during a recent extensive tour of the country.)

TSINAN — Surrounded by the boundless wheat plains of Shantung, the ancient city of Tsinan is getting a beauty treatment.

Money is being lavished on a new boulevard along the old walls circling the city and willow trees are being planted along a canal where women scrub their laundry.

Yet in the same city — and in other overcrowded cities of central China — you see thousands of men and women pushing and pulling carts loaded with stones, coal or even raw materials for the factories.

Chinese officials deplore this but say that there are just too many of them to be replaced by vehicles in the foreseeable future. Driving in a limousine past these unfortunates, I felt guilty.

CHUFOU: The Chinese are proud to show a visitor Confucius' birthplace, where his works were compulsory reading four centuries before Christ. The village of Chufou has not changed much since. Farmers still grind their wheat on centuries-old millstones.

I spent the night in a charming pavilion of the 350-room Confucius family mansion. The authorities are transforming the place into a 50-room motel for foreigners (20 to 28 dollars a day with meals).

The only concessions to the 20th century are plumbing, central heating and a bathtub. (In the morning, I had a hard time convincing the servant that I didn't really care for a seven-course breakfast a la Confucius.)

ANNA LOUISE STRONG

One-fifth of Chufou's population is 76th generation descendants of Confucius (being buried in the K'ung family graveyard is still regarded as a great honor) and carry the patronimic name of the K'ung.

One who does is 46-year-old K'ung Chien-wu, the tough leader of the Gong Kuo Workers' Brigade, whose 232 families till 290 acres of wheat.

K'ung, the father of seven children, tells me that at the age of 12 he was a beggar. Today, he runs his brigade with an iron hand.

"We study politics every evening," says K'ung. "We have done away with the system of private plots. They were no longer needed. What counts is to deliver as much grain as possible to the state."

"The state is good for us. It brought us electrification. With our 25 electric pumps, we can beat the terrible drought and double the yield. The average yearly income of a brigade member is 73 Yuan in cash ($29.20) and 548 pounds of grain.

Strategic Reserve

"Some of the grain we eat; some we store for bad years and as a strategic reserve in case the imperialists attack us. If this takes place, every adult in this brigade is a militiaman."

SOOCHOW; A silk and light industry town known for its beautiful gardens and Buddhist temples, Soochow has only recently been opened to foreign visitors. Wherever I went, I was followed by a crowd of the curious as if I had just landed from Mars.

Yet in a public garden I saw white-haired Anna Louise Strong on a sightseeing tour with a Caucasian friend and a Chinese couple. A long-time American resident of China, the dignified Mrs. Strong wears gray Chinese style clothes and is obviously treated with respect by her hosts.

Soochow is another town where China is spending large sums to restore tea house pavilions and lotus ponds filled with giant century-old golden carp. Along the Great Canal (China's main man-made waterway), a different scene shocks the visitor. Women harnessed like mules pull, how infinitely slowly, heavy barges; their men idly chat on the deck.

"The women belong to the tough Hakka clan, which regards itself as the original Hans," argues a young Chinese woman. "They have been doing that since time immemorial. It's their way of life. They would probably resent motorization, which would deprive them of their livelihood. Among the Hakkas, women perform the heavy work." Then she proudly adds, "I am a Hakka myself."

In the evening, I join a group of overseas Chinese invited to watch a documentary of China's march toward progress. Chairman Mao appears on the screen delivering a speech. He speaks with a strong, high-pitched, Hunanese peasant accent (he and Liu Shao-chi are from poor, landlocked Hunan province). Mao has a slow delivery and glances at his text after every sentence.

The film includes a scene of China's first atomic explosion in the Nevada-like Lop Nor desert. Soldiers leap in joy at the sight of the churning mushroom rising in the sky.

Next: Shanghai, a brand-name city.

THE GALLUP POLL

Only Third of Canadians Want Stricter Labor Laws

By The Canadian Institute of Public Opinion

Despite the current labor unrest in Canada, there has not been much change, over the past five years, in public opinion regarding the laws regulating labor unions. A third of the people say these laws are not strict enough.

In 1961, 38% felt the laws were not strict enough and 11% said they were too strict. Today 33% want stricter laws for labor unions and 15% say the laws we have are too strict. Thirty per cent of the people have no opinion on this subject.

Not unexpectedly, members of labor unions are less likely to say the laws are not strict enough than are non-union members.

The question: "Do you think the laws regulating labor unions are too strict, or not strict enough?"

	Total	Union Members	Non-Union Members
Too strict	15%	21%	13%
Not strict enough	33	25	36
About right	22	29	19
Undecided	30	25	32
	100%	100%	100%

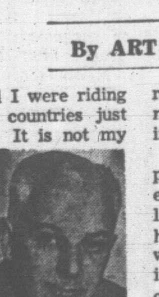
You Can Feel the Unrest, And It May Be Explosive

By ART STOTT

About a month ago Pat and I were riding a bus through parts of those countries just south of the English Channel. It is not my idea of a holiday tour to probe the economic and sociological factors in play among countries we visit and we made no investigation in depth. We had neither the time nor the inclination and it wasn't our business.



Stott

But passing through, you gather certain surface impressions. They can be quite incorrect. They can be distorted by personal reaction. And the casualness with which they are acquired leaves little opportunity for penetrating inquiry. Still, you get a feeling about things, superficial and fleeting as your contacts may be.

It wasn't particularly disturbing, as we slid through an underpass before we reached Brussels to see, painted carelessly in white on the wall, a legend preceded by a swastika, carrying the word "Nazi" and identifying it with the United States. The lettering was as amateur as some of the "Ban the bomb" slogans painted on rocks and abutments by well-meaning, if untidy, pacifiots here. Still, you noticed it.

You might discount it, as you could the paintings on barricades around construction work at The Hague—in the recent idiom of youth, the home of some of the old masters ain't doing so good in plywood art, not as well as our boys and girls at the museum site.

You might also discount the banners which decorated the town square of Bonn, where a political meeting, heavily attended, had just ended as our bus drew up to the hotel facing it. The banners, mostly in German but one in English telling Mr. Johnson that Germans also wanted the right of self-determination, were not complimentary to the United States. And the town was roused. When the boys later in the evening settled down to a little serious drinking, one or two ugly incidents occurred. Nothing like a fist to settle an argument.

Elsewhere, and again it was superficial, we received an impression of unrest and restlessness, some of it constructive, some of it carrying the potential of a time-bomb.

In Holland we were told with considerable pride of new reclamation efforts and soil sweetening processes that will produce more arable land in much less time than the laborious and historic manual work of years gone by. We were told of new building procedures—the sinking of hollow steel piles later filled with concrete that permit the erection of skyscrapers and high-rises where instability of foundations on silt below sea-level formerly restricted the weight of the structures.

We had explained to us the manner in which a syndicate of French financiers had bought up and developed the smaller farms of families whose holdings were destroyed during the war and the German retreat eastward from Paris. These are now big, highly-mechanized holdings on which the former farmers, or some of them, work, but not as owners. They let their land go because they could not raise the money to rebuild and re-establish themselves.

The farm combine, as we understood the story, increases French agricultural efficiency. It also changes independent owners into employees, with a wage scale that could be low.

That, it seems to me, sows seeds of more unrest in future.

We didn't see youths rioting in Amsterdam. They showed us a diamond factory and beautiful gems which we did not buy.

But in an age which is disturbing through the very nature of its radical change, we gained impressions of a surging vitality that could produce a tide of unrest, hostility and aggressive self-expression.

It may be entirely subjective, but my feeling was that the former war-ravaged or defeated countries were not going to behave like house-broken, well-trained and affectionate spaniels toward friendly helpers from outside. The brew, it seemed to me, was simmering. It could be explosive.

NEWS HIGHLIGHTS OF THE WEEK

Reviewed by Peter Murray, Times Wire News Editor

A glimmer of hope that Viet Nam peace negotiations are still a possibility came with the disclosure that Canadian diplomat Chester Ronning is making a second trip to Hanoi.

Ronning, a former ambassador to China and expert on Far Eastern affairs, first went to the North Vietnamese capital in March to sound out the attitude of President Ho Chi Minh on peace talks.

Canada took this initiative as a member of the South-East Asia International Truce Supervisory Commission. It was hoped to arrange a reconvening of the Geneva Conference through the auspices of the Commission.

There were no apparent results from Ronning's first mission, but the fact that he is going back again indicates a willingness on the part of North Viet Nam to continue exploratory talks at least.

At the same time Prime Minister Harold Wilson hinted that Britain is also engaged on a new behind-the-scenes Viet Nam discussions, and President Charles de Gaulle dispatched former French cabinet minister Jean Sainteny to Hanoi. He will make stopovers at Moscow and Peking en route.

●

Meanwhile the U.S. announced a further buildup of troops in Viet Nam. Another 18,000 troops will arrive by the end of July, raising the total of U.S. forces to 285,000.

Officials predicted the total will reach 400,000 by the end of the year.

South Viet Nam Premier Nguyen Cao Ky was forced to put more of his troops in the struggle against dissident Buddhists determined to topple his regime.

New Buddhist riots erupted with confirmation by the ruling military junta that it will delay transfer of power to a civilian regime until next year. The assembly to be elected in September will be restricted to writing a constitution.

In Geneva, the Soviet Union reversed a previous position and declared the Viet Nam conflict is blocking an agreement to halt the spread of nuclear weapons.

Until now the Russians have said Viet Nam should not get in the way of the 17-nation disarmament conference. The Soviet attack on U.S. policy in Viet Nam was coupled with criticism of the role of West Germany in Western defence strategy.

British delegate Lord Chalfont warned that China will be a major nuclear power within 10 years and urged the conference to work harder toward an N-ban pact.

●

Meanwhile nine of the smaller Far East nations formed a new regional association to co-operate in economic and political affairs.

They are South Korea, Japan, Nationalist China, the Philippines, Australia, South Viet Nam, Thailand, Malaysia and New Zealand.

At a meeting of foreign ministers in the South Korean capital of Seoul it was agreed not to set up a formal treaty organization or military pact.

●

The federal government, through direct and indirect mediation, succeeded in averting two strikes and ending a third.

Workers on the St. Lawrence Seaway agreed to stay on the job after Sen. Norman MacKenzie mediated an agreement providing a 30-per-cent wage increase over two years.

Sales employees of Air Canada also called off a strike minutes before deadline when agreement was reached on a 15-per-cent boost.

And dock workers in Quebec voted to accept terms reached through the offices of Prime Minister Pearson ending a 39-day walkout.

Still to be settled is a threatened strike of the CNR by the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers.

Take a Good Look At Your Youngster

By DOROTHY RICH

As the school year ends, parents as well as teachers need to take a good, hard, appraising look at their children.

The teacher looks at the child to categorize him as a student. The parent, however, has the harder job of looking at the total child, not to classify, but with the aim of helping him see himself and cope with the world better.

This kind of report card is not easy and it's not usually done because what parents must look for are signs far less obvious than a score on a test.

Here are some guidelines to help parents take this look at their child:

Candid Looks

First, take some candid looks — not in adoration or anger — at your child. Look at him working or playing alone and with friends. Be aware of his responses to you and other adults.

What differences in his attitudes and actions do you detect between this year and last? Is he optimistic and eager or is he discouraged about himself and his possibilities for achievement?

What does he enjoy now that he didn't like before? Conversely, what does he dislike now that he liked doing last year?

How well does he use school skills? He may receive an "A" in writing but never write a word at home. Then again, he may have done poorly in school math but sit in his room working out intricate math games.

How flexibly does he react to new ideas and experiences? For a nursery school child a big accomplishment of the past year may be a willingness to try new foods. For a high school student, it may be an openness to a differing opinion about the Beatles.

How well does the child know himself: What has he learned this year about his strengths and weaknesses? Can he face up to his problems and either ask for help or seek ways to help himself?

How is he enjoying life? Can he relate to others, have friends, share love?

The fact that there is a future and that growth and change are always taking place should provide the keynote for this summer at home.

This is the ideal time for parents and children to work together on the shortcomings and strengths revealed in the home report card.

What parents must remember is that one can overcome weaknesses and strengthen strengths in exactly the same way. This way is to provide the child with possibilities for achievement.

This home report card may uncover what schools have overlooked or are not interested in — the individuality of your child.

And although your child may not be saying it aloud, he beseeches you to look — and look hard — at him.

Owner-publisher of the Oak Bay Leader Lance Whittaker told the club the local weekly is "moving in underneath to pick up local coverage the dailies, at an increasingly rapid pace, are obliged to drop."

Victoria is one of the few cities whose daily papers still have a policy of publishing all wedding pictures submitted, he noted to illustrate his point.

Community papers are springing up all over, in many cases outstripping the metro papers in advertising and circulation, he said.

Mr. Whittaker, a former news editor of The Times, said the large papers were being forced to regroup and consolidate their losses.

Only 151 of the 1,850 cities in the U.S. have more than one newspaper he pointed out.

Mr. Whittaker took over the Leader in 1961, and later expanded his operations to include the Esquimalt Sentinel and the Saanich Dogwood-Star.

Island Delegate

William Hickey, 17, of 863 Craigflower Road, has been chosen as the only Vancouver Island delegate to the Church of the Nazarene at its international institute in Estes Park, Colorado, from July 5 to 11.

He will leave to drive to the conference with six teen-age delegates from the mainland.

THIS CHARMING quartette is about to become a team of recruiting sergeants to enlist some 2,000 United Appeal canvassers together by fall. They are Mrs. J. B. MacLean, division chairman for Oak Bay-Saanich; Mrs. C. R. South, Mrs. Nirmal Sundher and Mrs. W. Alan Blair, area chairmen, who met with team captains and 1966 campaign co-chairman Mrs. Phoebe Noble at University faculty club. Greater Victorai residential canvass starts Oct. 17.

Police Union Asks:

FORGET PERSONALITIES; JUST PUBLISH CONCLUSIONS

Esquimalt council has a public duty to divulge at least the conclusions of recent studies of the municipality's police-fire department, the local police union claims.

Replying to Reeve Ray Bryant's contention that discussion of "personalities" in the police report precludes its release, the union in a written statement, stated:

"Our union is not concerned with any aspects of the police report dealing in personalities. We are concerned with the recommendations contained therein.

"In light of the recent public controversy, we ask the police commission, does the police study recommend separation of the present dual-capacity department?

"Keeping in mind the fact that approximately three months has expired since the fire marshal's report was handed down, we ask the fire committee the same question.

"The union has in the past made presentations to the police commission whereby separation could be brought about on a step-by-step basis over an extended period of time for a fraction of the cost stated by the reeve.

"The commission has been adamant in its refusal to discuss these proposals with the union.

"If the commission refuses to make public the recommendation contained in the two reports, the union can only conclude that both reports recommend separation."

The controversy erupted into the open last weekend when the B.C. Federation of Peace Officers announced its intention to ask the B.C. Supreme Court to rule on the legality of including firefighting among the duties of Esquimalt policemen.

The union claims the practice is legally untenable because the police commission hires and fires constables, whereas only the municipal council can deal with firefighters.

Reeve Ray Bryant challenged the union, Monday, to make it a political rather than a legal issue by fielding a candidate in the municipal elections. The separation of police and firefighting functions would cost "two or three hundred thousand dollars," the reeve said.

He had been assured by the municipal solicitors that the council's position was legal, Mr. Bryant said, and they intended to oppose the separation bid in court if the union put it to the test.

Marijuana Use Gains In Canada

OTTAWA (CP) — Abuse of barbiturates and stimulants is on the increase in Canada, especially among women, but addiction to narcotics is declining, the Commonwealth and welfare committee was informed Thursday.

R. C. Hammond, chief of federal narcotics control, said there also has been a sharp rise in use of marijuana although not among young people.

"We are very fortunate that we definitely are not faced with the same problem with respect to marijuana as exists in the United States," Mr. Hammond said.

Abuse of barbiturate and stimulant controlled drugs, particularly among women, appeared to be "rather general" across Canada.

As for marijuana—classed as a narcotic although it differs from the other addictive narcotics such as heroin—its use seems to be centred in Vancouver, Toronto and Montreal.

DECLARED NARCOTIC

Mr. Hammond said marijuana does not create a physical dependence such as heroin or other narcotics do.

"But it does create a psychological dependence. Because of this and the problems it has created in other countries the United Nations narcotics commission a few years ago decided unanimously to class marijuana as a narcotic.

Mr. Hammond said addiction to controlled-drugs, so called because legislation controls those who may possess and use them, is not yet a serious problem.

Control practices had been stepped up to the extent possible with the control staff. Education of the public must play a large part in combatting the trend.

A PLACE FOR NIMMOS

House of Stone Holds Old Memories

By ELIZABETH FORBES

Take a run out the old East Saanich Highway to Prosser's Corner. Look up the hill on the left and you'll see a house built entirely of field stone.

Forbes

There's a turret topped with a weather-vane and the deep-set windows have diamond panes.

Moss roses grow close to the door. Humming birds sip nectar from foxgloves that are tall beneath the windows. Close by is an old pump-house and a peaked-roof well, both built of the same field stone.

It's a house that is full of memories. A house that was built by the late R. E. (Dick) Nimmo and his wife Lilith ("Sis" to everyone she knows) because he remembered a small stone croft in Scotland where he was born.

"He talked and talked about that little stone house near Cumrey and nothing would do but he must build one like it," Mrs. Nimmo told me the other day when I visited her.

So they turned the "big place" farther up Prosser's Road over to a son, built a "small cabin" on the crest of the hill above the road and set to work.

Dick Nimmo was not a stone mason. He was a Central Saanich works foreman. In one way this was a help for he was able to gather much of the stone for his house from places being cleared for projects.

On the other hand, it meant that he was an amateur at placing stone. He worked with a wooden cribbing for a guide and he used a 16-inch stick to keep his walls a uniform thickness.

Mrs. Nimmo sorted the smaller stones. She mixed "plaster" to hold the bigger ones. And, as the walls got higher, she carried the mixture up a ladder in a bucket to her husband.

"It saved time," she told me.

The place was completed in 1940 after three years of work. It had grown from the four square walls Dick Nimmo visioned to include the turreted corner and a windowed embrasure built especially for a dining table that came from Mrs. Nimmo's childhood home, across the old highway and not far from the stone house. (She is a MacKenzie and a granddaughter of the pioneer William Thomsons of "Bannockburn," first settlers on the Saanich Peninsula.)

Finishing inside the stone house is of wide-board knotty pine.

"It was cut up the West Coast," Mrs. Nimmo pointed out. "When it arrived it was a dirty pale yellow color and we had to sandpaper it, add shellac, sandpaper it again and finish it with flat varnish."

Her fingers ran over the satin smooth wood. "It took a lot of work," she said quietly.

Dick Nimmo retired in 1947 and in the next few years, he and his wife travelled a lot in their car. Each time they went away they came back with a stone or two for the big fireplace that was in the making in the living room.

The other day we had our tea close to that fireplace. And Mrs. Nimmo told me something of its story.

A small white stone, polished and smooth, is from the Mendenhall Glacier "away up north;" a rough, grey and white monster from the Grand Coulee Dam. Another smaller stone is from Kiska, Alaska, and still another from the Snoqualmie Pass in the United States where on one trip Dick Nimmo stopped his car to speak to road workers and found that, quite by accident, he had stopped right at the summit of the pass.

Two large stones, one on either side of the fireplace, were brought from Extension on Vancouver Island, where Dick and Lilith Nimmo first met.

Another is from the Langford Lake area. When Mrs. Nimmo was a girl her father worked on construction of the E and N Railway.

"I went back to look for the little house where we lived," she told me, "but all I could find was the remnants of a garden that my mother planted. The stone came from there."

Before I left that afternoon, we walked around the outside of the house and out back to see a 95-foot well that long ago replaced the peak-roofed one near the door.

"Dick used to say he was building the place for Nimmos," his wife said softly, as she looked back at the home she helped to create and where she is living out her years.

With the grandchildren and great-grandchildren that are growing up around her it looks as if that is the way it will always be.

Keep Squabbles on Own Stage Committee Tells City Guild

Victoria's Recreation and Community Services Committee Friday told the Victoria Theatre Guild to keep its internal squabbles on its own stage.

The Guild, in a letter which sharply criticized the Bastion Theatre Studio, asked the city for a grant matching the $185 a week received by Bastion.

After brief discussion the committee decided to ask the Guild to present detailed reasons as to why a grant was needed and suggested that criticism of a fellow theatrical group be forgotten.

"After reading their letter I'm not sure just what they want," said chairman Ald. Michael Griffin.

"They want money," said city treasurer James Bramley.

"It isn't until the second last paragraph of their letter that they hint at what they want," said Mayor A. W. Toone. "City council should ask them to make a detailed presentation on their needs and tell them to keep their quarrels to themselves."

The Guild's letter suggested that the Bastion group, after three years in McPherson Theatre, was not doing the job it promised to do.

"If they are not aware that the McPherson didn't open until February, 1965, they're not too close to the situation," said city manager Dennis Young.

HAVANA (AP)—Nearly 1,700 women have replaced bus drivers in Havana so the men can help repair fields damaged by Hurricane Alma 10 days ago, a government announcement said Friday.

Burns Prove Fatal

WEST VANCOUVER (CP) — Mrs. Laurie Kerns died in hospital Thursday a short time after being severely burned in a fire at her West Vancouver home. She was the daughter of Vancouver chief magistrate James Bartman.

About 12,000,000 American children have been vaccinated against measles since 1962.

POPE OUTLINES DECREE

Broader Powers Granted Bishops

VATICAN CITY (AP)—Pope Paul laid down guidelines Friday for Roman Catholic bishops, allowing them limited powers to make exceptions to church rules on celibacy, marriage and the life of priests and nuns.

Vatican sources said the decree granted the bishops broad powers they never had before. The Pope's decree spells out what bishops can and cannot do under general changes proposed by the Vatican ecumenical council to give bishops a larger voice in running church affairs.

Vatican spokesmen called the degree the most important papal guideline so far putting council decisions into force.

In the degree, which goes into effect Aug. 15, the Pope granted bishops the right to make minor exceptions to rules on celibacy, age limits for marriage and for the priesthood, and on the outward style of life for nuns and members of religious orders.

But he reserved solely for the head of the church the right to make any more basic changes.

On celibacy, he ruled that local bishops could decide whether to lift the celibacy requirement for a sub-deacon who abandons his priestly studies. But the Pope reserved for himself the power to make exceptions to the rule for deacons and for priests who become laymen.

Sub-deacons and deacons have taken vows and exercise some priestly functions. But deacons are farther along the road to priesthood.

The Pope also ruled that only he could decide whether to allow priests to practise certain professions such as medicine, run for public office and work in business or trade.

Pope Paul granted local bishops the right to permit changes in the garments and style of living for nuns and religious orders in their areas. But he said that only the pontiff could permit changes in the vows taken by religious orders and in their regulations.

On marriage, Pope Paul permitted local bishops to make one-year exceptions in the present church minimum age limits of 16 years for men, 14 for women.

Thus, when he deems necessary, a bishop could decide on his own to lower the age limit to 15 years for men and 13 for women.

But any greater change must have papal approval.

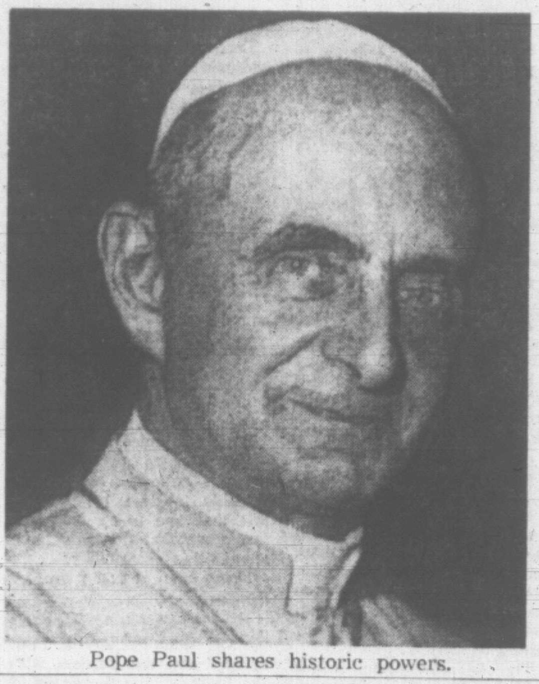
Pope Paul also granted bishops the right in some cases to approve marriages between second cousins, reserving for the Vatican the power to approve any marriages between closer relations.

The Pope left it up to the individual bishops in exceptional cases to lower by one year the minimum 24-year age limit for the ordination of priests.

Vatican spokesmen said that in fact the decree opened a broad new field of powers that the bishops had never had before.

In the introduction to the decree the Pope said that the bishop's powers in his own diocese derive not from the papacy but from God.

The Pope added that such powers must be exercised within the over-all framework of the Church with the guidance of the papacy.



Pope Paul shares historic powers.

Jesus Stood Here, Joseph There Temple Model Makes History Live

By DON JOHNSON

MONTREAL (CP)—Backtrack 2,000 years of human history in an instant. Jesus preached here, sat on that bench and talked with Joseph over here.

It all seems so real, yet it is only a large, colorful and impressive model of the Holy Temple of Jerusalem—rich in history, romance, plunder and religion.

Today the site of the original temple is occupied by the Mosque of Omar in the Jordanian side of the Holy City. The mosque was built in 667 A.D.

However, the first temple on the site was built by King Solomon almost 1,000 years before Christ. The temple was to undergo destruction, reconstruction and modification during its history.

Finally, in 135 A.D., the Romans plowed over the ruins and the temple disappeared.

The model, measuring 16 by 16 feet, is a painstaking reproduction of the temple as it stood after 20 B.C. when King Herod rebuilt and embellished it.

The model builders, Dr. Lazare Halberthal and Suzette Halberthal, estimate they have invested 15,000 hours in its construction. Numerous materials went into the task, copper, marble, stone powder and glue, plywood and cedar wood, and thin sheets of silver.

Its value in dollars is anyone's guess.

YEARS IN RESEARCH

Pre-construction research required consulting Talmudic scholars the world over; Rome, Paris, London, and of course, Jerusalem. Dr. Halberthal, when a young lawyer in Bucharest, Romania, wrote hundreds of letters and read many books on his subject.

The Halberthals do not claim their work to be microscopically accurate. But it does answer, or provide logical solutions to 107 problems of historical detail which have been lost through the decades. Authentication is left to the world's experts, says Dr. Halberthal.

His interest in the temple dates back to 1937, when he lived in Bucharest. The hobby—as he describes it—grew daily, but was interrupted by the Second World War.

In 1950 the couple fled Europe to Israel, from which they came to Canada two years later. In Montreal they began their construction program—a way of showing thanks for escaping the Nazis.

The model includes the temple proper, the high court of justice, various courtyards, the sacrificial altar, the money-changers' tables, and even miniature copies of the rings used to hold animals being sacrificed.

CARVED TINY FIGURES

Built in sections, the completed work is meant to be place in the backdrop of the temple's surroundingss, a model of Mount Moriah.

Mrs. Halberthal carved all the 500 tiny and delicate figures, of wood and ceramic, which dot the model. She also painted it.

Dr. Halbertha built the remainder, in scale of 1 to 70, for which he had to teach himself, among other arts, the hammering of copper bronze.

Briefly, here is the temple's history: After King Solomon built it in 986 it lasted intact until 586 B.C., 400 years, when Nebuchadnezzar, King of the Babylonians, destroyed it after invading the country. He took the Jews into bondage.

Fifty years later, in 536, Cirus, King of the Persians, conquered Babylon, and liberated the Chosen People. The Jews led by Zerubabel rebuilt the temple.

Then in 165 B.C., Antioch, king of part of the Greek empire, invaded but did not conquer the land. The Jews succeeded in driving him off, but the temple was damaged in the fight.

DESTROYED BY ROMANS

Herod the Great repaired and embellished the temple in 20 B.C. The Halberthals' model is of this period, when the temple was in its greatest hour.

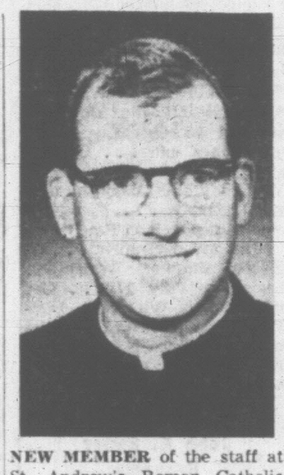
Jesus came and went. The Romans in 70 A.D. destroyed the temple again. Sixty years later they plowed it over.

Dr. Halberthal, who works currently at a "bread-and-butter job" as a salesman, says his work is not finished.

"You see, we can't say we have finished making the model, because as new findings come to light, we have to alter details," says Mrs. Halberthal.

Dr. Halberthal says he does not want to sell the model. His aim is to have it seen by as many persons through as many public exhibitions of it as possible.

He does not describe himself as deeply religious: "I believe in God and good morals."



NEW MEMBER of the staff at St. Andrew's Roman Catholic Cathedral is Rev. Richard J. Caldwell, a native of Victoria who was educated at St. Louis College. He was ordained priest by Bishop Remi De Roo on May 19.

Alberta Trio To Sing At Parkdale

Rev. Alban Douglas and a ladies' trio from the Prairie Bible Institute, Three Hills, Alta., will be at Parkdale Evangelical Free Chruch, 3281 Harriet Road, for the 7 p.m. Sunday service.

The trio — Ruth Charter, Janet Kennedy and Margaret Jesperson — will be accompanied at the piano by Charlotte Kinvig.

Mr. Douglas, a former missionary in China and the Phillipines, now teaches in Prairie's Missions Department.

The institute, which began in 1922, with an enrolment of eight students, now has more than 1,000 in the Bible and high school departments.

Prairie has made a vital contribution to the ministry of the Church through the training of more than 1,400 foreign missionaries and nearly 800 pastors and Christian workers in North America.

Following the evening service, Parkdale will have a family fellowship with refreshments to allow the congregation to informally meet the team.

In the 11:15 worship service, Pastor Lloyd Mackey will speak on What Makes a Man, a message particularly geared to be helpful to fathers in the congregation. Stewart Bell will be soloist.

Atomic Force Lecture Topic

Is the Universe, Including Man, Evolved by Atomic Force?—this is the question explored in the Bible Lesson to be presented at all Christian Science churches this Sunday.

The Golden Text is from I Samuel: "The pillars of the earth are the Lord's and he hath set the world upon them."

Opening the lesson-sermon will be Paul's statement in Hebrews: "Through faith we understand that the worlds were framed by the word of God, so that things which are seen were not made of things which do appear."

SOLOIST in First United Church Sunday morning will be popular Victoria soprano Alice Waddell. With the choir, directed by W. H. Gregory, she will sing Caesar Franck's anthem O Lord Most Holy. The choir will sing Praise God in His Holiness (Shaw).

Apartment Dwellers Hunt Answers

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — Clergymen of five faiths, their backs against a cocktail bar, answered questions fired at them from the 20 young men and women in the crowded party room:

"How can I know that God exists?" asked a pink-cheeked man in a blue blazer.

"How do you find God — how do you make contact?" asked a coiffured redhead in suit and gloves.

"What about the 'God is dead' theory?" asked a blonde in a blue dress and pearl necklace.

To the clergymen the questions were not as important as the fact they were being asked here, in the window-walled recreation room overlooking the swimming pool of the 144-unit Toll House apartments.

They are working together trying to find a means of maintaining religious values among the young adults for whom the modern apartment complex has become a way of life.

District Nurses Asked to Attend

A symposium on professional hospital procedures and techniques will be held at St. Joseph's Hospital Monday and Tuesday.

Presentations will be made by a lecture group from the education and research division of the American Sterilizer Co. of Erie, Penn.

The symposium is primarly for nurses and invitations have been sent to all hospitals in the province. Between 75 and 100 people are expected to attend.

Dr. John D. Stenstrom, vice-president of the hospital's medical staff, will give the opening address Monday. Question and answer periods will be conducted each day.

GOSWORTH TO FEATURE ILLUSTRATED LECTURE

An illustrated lecture entitled Is God Dead? will be presented in Gosworth Road Community Church, corner of Gosworth and Burton Avenue, Sunday at 7 p.m., by Rev. C. Hutchinson of Berean Bible College, Calgary.

Mr. Hutchinson will also preach at the 11 a.m. service in Gosworth, a non-denominational church in the Oaklands residential district.

NEWS FROM CITY CHURCHES

Family Services Honor Fathers

Honoring Father's Day, there will be a family service in St. Paul's-Gorge-Erskine Presbyterian Church at 9:30 Sunday when awards will be presented to pupils of the church school.

At 11 a.m., Lt.-Cmdr. C. W. Montgomery will give a report on the 92nd general assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, which was held in Toronto last week.

Mr. Montgomery was one of four commissioners from Victoria Presbytery who attended. The assembly agreed to admit women into eldership and ministry of the church; discussed the war in Viet Nam; and the problems of unions and the closed shop.

Rev. Alexander Calder will speak on Glory of the Common Place in Oak Bay United Church Sunday morning.

The choir, directed by Robert Kroeger, will sing the anthem Had We But Hearkened.

Population Explosion Featured in Lectures

Dr. Glenn V. Tingley, world traveller and speaker, will conduct a prophetic conference in the Alliance Church, 1039 Yates Street, Monday through Sunday, June 26.

Dr. Tingley will be speaking on prophetic themes nightly at 7:45. They will include world population explosion, space travel and atomic discoveries, social disturbances and racial strife.

Dr. Tingley is author of some 50 books and pamphlets and his interdenominational ministry has taken him to England, Germany, Belgium, France, Austria and Italy as well as Bible lands, Africa, the West Indies, Canada and the United States.

Travelling with Dr. Tingley and to be heard nightly is Prof. Gilbert Hynes, baritone soloist. Prof. Hynes, who studied voice at the Boston Conservatory of Music, received his master's degree from Boston University College of Music and has taught voice at Barrington and Houghton Colleges.

This prophetic conference is the first of its kind to be held in the Alliance Church in Victoria and the public is invited to attend.

Sunday at 11 a.m. the Prairie Bible Institute ladies trio, with Rev. A. Douglas, will minister in the church while at 7 p.m. the pastor will bring a special Father's Day message.

45-Year Odor To Be Removed

A 45-year odor in the ladies dressing rooms at Crystal Garden has been uncovered.

Within the next two weeks it will be eliminated for ever.

The odor, source of many complaints over the years, was created by lack of normal traps in the drain system.

Branchlines from wash rooms ran straight into the main sewers with no traps to cut off noxious gases.

CHAMBERS

PALMER

Organist, Singer Join for Concert

An organ recital sponsored by the choir of Fairfield United Church will feature gifted organist David Palmer with assistant vocalist, baritone Martin Chambers.

It will take place in the church sanctuary, Tuesday, at 8 p.m.

Victoria-born Mr. Palmer will be leaving the city in August to undertake his final year toward a Bachelor of Music degree at the University of Michigan.

Local teachers who have directed his music studies since the age of 10 have been Mrs. B. A. Mitchell, Miss Noel Smith, Graham Steed and Richard Proudman.

He has been organist at St. Paul's Naval and Garrison Church and is now organist-choirmaster at Fairfield United.

Martin Chambers is also a native Victorian. He graduated this spring with a Bachelor of Music degree from the University of British Columbia and plans to teach for two years before going to Europe for further vocal training.

A collection will be taken.

Festival to Feature Canadian Composers

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — A special feature of the Charlottetown Festival's Sunday night concert program this summer will be the premiere performances of works by young Canadian composers commissioned by music director John Fenwick.

The festival runs from July 1 to Sept. 4.

Composers who have accepted commissions are Norma Beecroft, Toronto; Anne Egglestone, Ottawa; Serge Garant, Montreal; Irving Glick, Toronto, and Murray Schafer of Simon Fraser University.

Mr. Fenwick, who is also conductor of the Halifax Symphony Orchestra, will contribute a work himself, and he expects another French-Canadian will accept a commission.

Each overture will be three to four minutes long, Mr. Fenwick said in an interview.

He said the composers have been given complete artistic freedom as to style and form, although it is expected that due to the length of composition, terseness and forthrightness will be a characteristic of most of the works.

The compositions are being scored for the instrumentation of the Atlantic Orchestra, a 32-piece ensemble formed specially for the festival and drawn largely from the Halifax Symphony.

EXCITEMENT

"I am looking forward with a great deal of excitement to this project and feel it will be an extremely valuable addition to our programs," Mr. Fenwick said.

"The Charlottetown Festival is a unique event involving an all-Canadian program of theatre, art and music," he added, "and the participation of talented Canadian composers will be a vital contribution to it."

He said that after the festival ends it is expected the new works will be made available to other orchestras across the country.

Bewitching Comedy By Bastion

A "bewitching" bit of comedy will make lighthearted entertainment for the latter part of July, when Bastion Theatre presents Bell, Book and Candle as the company's summertime special at McPherson Playhouse.

Starring in John van Druten's long-running comedy success will be Ann Purdon, Gertrude Ball, Lawrence Eastick, Hugh Henderson and Robert Lutes. Pye-wacket the cat has also been cast. A Siamese named Vicki will play the role.

Bell, Book and Candle will play July 22 to 30, with any seat in the house, $1.50, and two for one on opening night.

Full-Page Ad Protests Firings

ST. THOMAS, Ont. (CP)— A St. Thomas industrialist has taken a full-page advertisement in the St. Thomas Times-Journal appealing to people to tell the CBC how they feel about the firing of Patrick Watson and Laurier LaPierre, co-hosts of This Hour Has Seven Days.

Stewart Lare, president of Brown Fintube Canada Ltd., said in his advertisement:

"We, the people of Canada and co-owners of CBC, feel the firing implies a restraint on the sacred right of Canadians . . . to inquire, to expose, to express frank opinion concerning vital social and political issues."

FOCUS

By BRAD NUGENT

This week I'd like to put the focus on Canadian groups—since recently a Canadian invasion of the U.S. on the disc has been forecast.

Now assessing the beat scene the time is almost ripe for the all-out effort.

Let's take a look at some of the groups who will be in the forefront when the race is really on.

Vancouver is ready to offer The Chessmen, who played in town Friday night, and The Nocturnals. The latter group's first major disc, Because You're Gone, was an excellent example of what we can offer the teen beaters.

In Winnipeg there is the Guess Who, alias Chad Allen, whose Shakin' All Over dented the U.S. hit lists not too long ago.

In Toronto there are all sorts of groups with their eyes on the U.S.

Little Caesar and the Consuls scored with Hang On Sloopy and will be there fighting at the finish. The Big Town Boys are consistent on wax with David Clayton, Thomas and Robbie Lane strong as singles.

The Sparrows—now minus Jack London—are better than ever and one group to watch could be Paupers who have had two discs out meeting with a fair amount of success.

The nation's capital, Ottawa, has never had it so good. Three acts are represented on the Capitol roster—The Staccotos, The Esquites, and Dave Britten. Both groups have achieved a great deal of recognition nationally while Dave has just made his debut with a session cut in Detroit.

Back at home, old Victoria has got some great sounds too. Our own R. P. M. and the Regents, the Blues By Five and the new Bakerloo Line all should be out on wax within a short while.

It would be impossible to list all the talent in Canada and some teen-agers are bound to feel hurt because their favorite group or singer has been omitted from the above collection.

After the British conquest has subsided, the U.S. is ready for another trend. The Beatles are great. But so are some of our groups. Have you ever listened to them?

Lend your ears. You might be surprised.

Scholarship Students To Perform

In 1965 the Scholarship Committee of Victoria School of Music collected $3,405, of which amount the Women's Committee contributed $1,000, the proceeds of the spring book sale.

Scholarships thus made possible last year totalled 30 and they were awarded in amounts varying from $30 to $250.

At the year-end concert of the School of Music at McPherson Playhouse Sunday at 3 p.m., a number of these scholarship students will be heard.

Champion Cult Value Doubted

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — All of his life Kirk Douglas has believed in the cult of the champion, whose only success lies in constant victory.

Lately, however, the actor confesses to having some second thoughts on the subject.

"Something happens in this quest for success," he remarked. "Sometimes you can lose yourself along the way.

"I'd like to be able to afford the luxury of failure. You have to feel free to do what you want to do, although this is hard to attain in any field.

"But I feel most people can come pretty close to getting what they want out of life — if they are really ready to pay the price."

After acing in some 40 pictures — his latest is Cast a Giant Shadow — Kirk would like to gamble, win or lose, on becoming a screen and Broadway director.

The odds are that he'll do as well behind the camera as he has done before it. The drive to win has been a part of his nature ever since, as the son of immigrant parents from Russia, he worked his way through college.

He became a top debater, president of the student body, and a champion intercollegiate wrestler. "I really wanted to be a poet," he said. "I even went around with my shirt collar open as a Byronic gesture. But I gave it up — I couldn't stand my own poetry."

After slinging hash part time here and appearing in several Broadway plays, Kirk did a wartime navy hitch, then went to Hollywood and quickly became a star.

"She exposed me to things I had never known — poetry and plays. I came from a tough part of town. She convinced me I should get an education.

Among the keys to any man's nature are his likes and dislikes.

"Excellence . . . the ballet grace of athletes . . . being alone and surrounded by music . . . peasant food of almost any country but particularly plain spaghetti with butter . . . yellow, because it's supposed to be the color of friendship . . . contrasts, such as sunny and rainy days . . . big storms, because they make me think there's somebody up there really running things."

These are his dislikes:

"Mediocrity in myself or anybody else . . . the taste of turnips . . . exercise, which I do as a form of penance . . . critics, because they can make me feel so good or so lousy . . . shopping . . . double-breasted suits . . . pompous people."

Probation Ordered For Fraud

A 19-year-old youth who pleaded guilty to seeking a cash refund for a stolen tie was put on probation for a year when he appeared for sentence in central court Friday.

"You've been slowly drifting into trouble for some time, haven't you?" Magistrate Ostler asked Richard Magee, 1137 Rockland.

He approved of the accused's plan to go to work in northern Alberta. Magee had earlier admitted that a $5.25 tie he tried to return to the Bay June 1, had been stolen.

Panel Talk on Piano

A panel discussion on piano class teaching will be held June 27 at Victoria School of Music.

Panelists will be Mrs. Doreen Hutt, Supervisor of Piano Classes in Toronto Schools; Harry J. Bigsby, Supervisor of Music in Greater Victoria Schools; R. Berod, principal of Mackenzie Elementary School, and Miss Noel Smith, local representative of the Royal Conservatory of Music, Toronto.

Robin Wood, president of the Victoria Branch, Registered Music Teachers' Association, will act as chairman.

Mrs. Hutt, sponsored by the Canadian Bureau for the Advancement of Music, came to Victoria last October to give a first course in piano class methods.

She will return to Victoria in a few days to continue this training and to repeat the initial course for newcomers.

Courses will be held at Victoria School of Music commencing June 25.

Anyone interested may attend and further information may be had from the Canadian Bureau for the Advancement of Music, CNE, Toronto, or locally from Mrs. Joan Bulmer, 479-2363, or Mrs. Betty Mack, 382-6810.

The Sounding Board

By AUDREY ST.D. JOHNSON

The culmination of a long campaign came this week when a freighter docked at Ogden Point and a huge zinc-lined case was swung ashore.

At last there had arrived in Victoria for the use and enjoyment of its artists and audiences, a piano that could reasonably be described as an instrument of the immortals.

Friday, uncrated, sleek and elegant, the full concert grand from the Steinway craftsmen in Hamburg, had taken up residence in its new home in the Victoria School of Music.

When I dropped in, the beautiful creature was undergoing the loving ministrations of its tuner, Laurence King, surrounded by a circle of admirers.

One almost felt like bowing in the presence.

Robin Wood, who had made the selection in the Steinway house in London last November, was plainly aching to get his hands on the keyboard.

The rest of us were just as eager for him to do so—but first the precise and careful tuning. It is significant with regard to the quality of the piano that Mr. King found it not at all badly out of tune despite its long trip across two oceans.

●

Public debut of the new Steinway will come without delay, for it will appear on stage at the McPherson Playhouse Sunday afternoon when the School of Music presents a number of students in the annual end-of-term concert.

Mr. Wood told me that the students will in all probability use one of the other pianos to which they are accustomed.

But he plans to partner Vivienne Abbott in her Brahms' D Minor Sonata and Kreisler Preludium and Allegro on the new piano.

Almost all new pianos must be "played in," Mr. Wood points out. "The tone is apt to be a bit fuzzy until the felts have become grooved to the strings and firmed a little."

But he stresses that tone and action are beautifully balanced throughout the octaves of this Steinway.

Mr. Wood feels that the piano's home must be the school where it will be treated royally, as it requires.

"But it will be available to all responsible organizations for concert use," he adds.

Money for its purchase has come largely through School of Music patrons, the Women's Committee and a faculty concert.

But there have also been donations from citizens and organizations outside the school, such as the Victoria Operatic society; $1,300 was provided as a result of the Norma MacDonald Memorial Concert arranged by Jerry Gosley at the McPherson Playhouse last March.

It is the intention of the school's president, John Graeme, and its directors, to place another of the school's smaller grands permanently in the McPherson.

●

Keeping to the theme of "piano," it is interesting to know that pilot projects of teaching piano in small classes was initiated this past winter in four Greater Victoria elementary schools.

This was done with the approval of the School Board and endorsation of the local Registered Music Teachers' Association.

These classes are held outside school hours and cost parents a minimal 50 cents a lesson.

Beginning pupils from school Grades Two and Three in two years are given a basic foundation in piano, reaching what approximates Grade II, Royal Conservatory of Music, Toronto.

They also gain a sound introduction to the theory of music and are then ready to proceed with private study of piano or any other instrument.

It cannot be too much stressed that a knowledge of piano is mandatory as preparation for the study of any other instrument, including voice.

The group lessons, in addition to making music a financially feasible proposition for many more children, has other, more psychological, benefits.

Early music training in a class with other children provides a stimulus for the desire to get on, creates enthusiasm and reduces an element of boredom and sense of isolation connected with individual instruction during the first year.

All things considered, it is fine to be able to report that the plan will probably be expanded next fall to include more schools.

MADAME X
Lana Turner
Royal Theatre

Much of this film is tawdry and unsavoury, but the story holds interest for at least three parts of the way.

It is what we used to call a tear-jerker. Most of us like to weep now and then, and the hanky-holders have a swell time in the last reel when Lana Turner winds up in a hospital jail, having shot a man and signed a confession as Madame X.

Personally I would rather weep over Madame Butterfly than Madame X—and Charlie Chaplin's Limelight is a favorite tear-jerker, too. But it must be conceded that Lana Turner (once a beauty queen) does a fine job as the debauched Madame X and Keir Dullea is excellent as the young attorney who defends her.

★ ★ ★

The story, based on a play by Alexandre Bisson, presents Lana as the bored wife of John Forsythe, a wealthy and aspiring politician. Boredom settles in while he is away on government missions, and Lana takes up with Ricardo Montalban, a bachelor friend.

Her mother-in-law is none other than our old favorite, Constance Bennett, still very attractive. She becomes suspicious and engages a private detective.

Lana goes to see Montalban for the last time (it was all a mistake, of course), but he refuses to let her go. There is the old familiar struggle at the top of the stairs and he falls to his death.

Lana runs off, but leaves her scarf behind in a generous little gesture to the movie police. Over in Europe she meets concert pianist John Van Dreelen, who proposes marriage. But she refuses and runs away.

Now poor Lana takes to drink and becomes involved with several unpleasant people. She is befriended by a confidence man (Burgess Meredith) and lives with him in a sleazy hotel where the main pursuits seem to be guzzling brandy, falling over beds and making love (when you are sober enough).

The confidence man takes Lana to New York to blackmail the Forsythe family, and from then the action is in high gear. The story is well acted by a cast of well-tried professionals, responding to efficient direction by David Lowell Rich, and the photography is excellent.

That's about as far as it goes.

YOUNG ACTORS DEVELOP SKILLS

Play Not the Thing at This Workshop

The play is a by-product for the young actors and technicians enrolled in the Summer Theatre Workshop at University of Victoria.

"For this reason," says their director, Robert Hedley, "we can afford to gamble."

At present, a theatre season in Victoria caters mainly to those who want a relaxing and diverting evening. Community theatre groups almost always choose plays purely for their entertainment value, having an eye firmly fixed on necessary box office revenue.

EDUCATIONAL

The logical place for a play which involves and unsettles an audience is the educational theatre.

"Educational," says Mr. Hedley, "doesn't mean humorless or distressingly intellectual. But it does describe a kind of theatre which says important things to an audience and which challenges actors and technicians."

Mr. Hedley has chosen A State of Siege by Albert Camus to climax the Summer Theatre Workshop. "It took me several months of reading and thinking," he confesses, "to settle on this play."

Technically it is demanding. Film clips, projections, weird sound effects and free-form lighting will give the young technicians plenty of room to develop basic knowledge and skills.

The actors will also have a difficult but worthwhile job to do.

"Every role should teach the actor to create character," says Mr. Hedley, "but plays like A State of Siege add something further to this process by forcing their characters' statements out beyond the bounds of the play."

In the two years since he joined the staff of Uvic's Theatre Division, Mr. Hedley has presented to Victoria audiences an astonishing variety of plays.

He has seemed equally at home in the comedy of Fry or the farce of Gogol; in Yeats' poetic drama, in Miller's hard-hitting realism, in Ionesco's biting Theatre of the Absurd.

A State of Siege, his final project before he leaves Uvic for Villa Nova University in Pennsylvania, where he will supervise graduate directing students, is more important to him than any of the aforementioned kind of plays.

"Camus makes the audience aware of themselves. He stimulates them to take a stand on the economic, social and political problems in the world around them. The best phrase I can think of to describe this play is theatre of communication," Mr. Hedley comments.

LOGICAL PLACE

The university is the logical place for "theatre of communication" since one of its classic functions is to ferment discussion, he points out.

"Theatre of communication" makes demands not only on audience, actors and technicians, but also on the director himself.

Mr. Hedley's record of academic and creative achievements augurs well for his success.

He finished his Master of Fine Arts degree at the University of Texas in 1963 at the top of his graduating class and earned a membership in the American Honor Society, Phi Kappa Phi.

An important ingredient of his subsequent success as a director has been his commitment to the play in hand.

He chooses plays that give actors and audience something to chew on and his own sense of the importance of what he is doing is a contagious and stimulating thing.

If his own excitement about the Summer Theatre Workshop is any indication, A State of Siege will benefit from this same energetic commitment.

NORTH BREEZES

When you order London Broil at IMPERIAL, a flavor-filled steak marinated in red wine and served on a plank, you carve it yourself at the table. That's what our Eastern guest was doing when Maitre d' Les Szabo commented on his deft knifework.

"I'm a surgeon," the man chuckled. He went on to say he was from Montreal, where McGill University is located.

He said the first McGill graduate in medicine to practise west of the Rockies, came to Victoria almost 100 years ago.

"His name was Israel Wood Powell. He was an officer in the militia and was a superintendent of Indian Affairs—and Powell River was named after him."

Our guest paused to taste his steak, then added, "No wonder he came to Victoria." Les went away beaming.

Reviewed by Grant McOrmond

If Robin Maugham had discarded the first half of Somerset and All the Maughams after writing it, he would have produced a much better book.

For most readers, this first section, tracing the Maugham family back through all its elaborate ramifications in England, Ireland, America, Australia and New Zealand, is interesting in places, but far too complicated.

Somerset Maugham is the justification for this work by his nephew, but to extract Somerset Maugham from the 95 different Maughams mentioned, and to attempt to keep the relationship between them all clear, is a task that defeats even the most enthusiastic.

There is justification for Robin Maugham's excessive enthusiasm for genealogy. His family is a distinguished one. He is the 2nd Viscount Maugham of Hartfield, and a successful writer himself.

His father, Frederic Herbert, Somerset Maugham's older brother, was a writer, lawyer, and Lord Chancellor of England.

Robin Maugham's position also made it possible for him to gain access to documents and people that other biographers might not have. Also, his concern for family detail can be justified on the grounds that it does give additional insight into the character of Somerset Maugham.

However, had Robin Maugham restrained his enthusiasm and shown more discrimination in his use of detail, the focus on Somerset Maugham would have been clearer and the work as a whole far more successful.

SOMERSET

Indeed, the final section of Somerset and All the Maughams is the only effective one. Here Robin Maugham draws on his own personal knowledge rather than upon anecdotes and documents.

He shows his uncle as a foul-mouthed senile creature mumbling obscenities and self-ridicule in a corner of his luxurious Villa Maresque on the French Riviera.

Students will find useful information concerning both Liza of Lambeth and Cakes and Ale in this book. The autobiographical element in both works is given in some detail.

The general reader will find Somerset and all the Maughams both interesting and confusing. It will probably linger in the memory as a work that penetrates sharply at one or two points, but fails to give a coherent picture of one of the great authors of the twentieth century.

Crow's Ghost Haunts U.S.

THE STRANGE CAREER OF JIM CROW: Revised edition, by C. Vann Woodward. Oxford University Press, 1966. 200 pp., $1.65.

Reviewed by Anne E. Olsen

The problem of race relations, now of world-wide concern, is a paramount issue of our time. We on this continent are particularly involved with the dilemma of racism in the United States, where democratic processes must somehow contain and eventually resolve the Negro revolution.

Racism strikes deep into human emotions. Fears, aggressions and prejudice too often overwhelm reason. Too many of us base our opinions concerning the American Negro problem upon mistaken assumptions and shaky historical foundations.

GUIDE

In the current edition of his authoritative work, Vann Woodward has provided an essential guide for placing contemporary race relations in factual perspective.

There are many surprises in store for the reader! Certainly there is much evidence that the debate now raging over segregation is against a background of faulty historical information.

One of the strangest things about "The Career of Jim Crow is that the system was born in the North, and reached an advanced age before moving South. Slavery was abolished in the North in 1830; but it was made painfully clear to the Negro that he lived in a society dedicated to white supremacy.

SOCIAL CHANGES

With profound knowledge of Southern history, the author develops his account of rapid social changes in the Southern States after the Civil War. Each phase offers new and pertinent insights for the understanding of present day events.

After the Civil War, he tells us, the Southerners soon relaxed their fears of freedmen. Legally enfranchised, many held public office. Until about 1890, when power politics and social turbulence turned the Negro into a scapegoat.

With the launching of American expansionist adventures in 1898, the doctrine of Anglo-Saxon superiority became a national sentiment. The growing racist feelings seemed justified; and Jim Crow moved South.

TENSIONS

Mr. Woodward gives us a stirring account of the mounting tensions through the first decades of the 20th century: the rise of aggressive racism, total disfranchisement of the Negro and the savage turn of events that followed.

He traces the racist problem through two World Wars, when large numbers of Negroes migrated North. Against a background of social and economic turbulence, Hitler's racism is shown to have stirred the American conscience into action.

The Civil Rights Movement and federal reforms are analyzed as contemporary events. In summarizing the revolutionary decade of 1955-65, the author states: ". . . Jim Crow was a thing of the past . . . but his ghost still haunted a troubled people."

Writer Tried To Sift Fact From Fancy

Reviewed by M. Schienbeck

This biography of Mata Hari is the newest of several and may be the one that comes nearest to the truth.

If is still debated whether she was only a very beautiful but sexually quite unrestrained woman or whether she combined sexuality with espionage and richly deserved her fate — execution by the French, in 1917.

RESEARCH

Sam Waagenaar has collected the material for this book during several years after his interest was first awakened by research for a film of Mata Hari in the twenties.

During this research he was fortunate enough to find and acquire her scrap books which she meticulously kept during a quite fantastic life.

She was born in Holland and after an unhappy marriage which took her to Java in the Dutch East Indies, she came to Paris where, after a few years, she became famous for her Eastern dances.

BEAUTIFUL

She was a beautiful and promiscuous woman and made no secret of her innumerable affairs with prominent men, preferably military personalities.

Her vivid imagination, to put it politely, made such an intricate web of her life that it is well nigh impossible to get a true picture of what actually happened.

Mr. Waagenaar conscientiously tries to straighten out the threads, but after reading his book one is still uncertain whether or not she was a spy and, quite frankly, one feels that she was so deeply involved in dubious affairs during the First World War that her tragic fate was well deserved.

Reviewed by Ernie Fedoruk

For those of us who are rooted and reared in the West, Great Canadian Sports Stories seem to be an accurate account of memorable moments in Toronto.

Published by an Ontario house and co-authored by Toronto writers, the book neglects the rest of Canada.

Seven of the 10 features are devoted to Ontario favorites — swimmer Marilyn Bell; speedboat pilot Bob Hayward; golfer Sandy Somerville; sculler Ned Hanlan; Northern Dancer, the horse; hockey star King Clancy, and Red Storey, an all-round athlete whose greatest moments were enjoyed on the football fields.

The rest of Canada is represented only by the Edmonton Grads, Vancouver boxer Jimmy McLarnin and Quebec strongman Louis Cyr.

Perhaps unintentionally, but co-authors Trent Frayne and Peter Gzowski would have you believe that the important happenings and personalities are exclusive to Toronto.

Frayne and Gzowski, despite attempts to avoid it, can not escape argument.

It must be acknowledged that theirs was a difficult task, trying to squeeze 100 years of Canadian sports happenings into 125 pages.

It is an interesting book, despite the Toronto favors, extremely well-illustrated and compiled after obviously exhaustive research.

The authors dodge the trap of trying to run up a list of Canada's greatest sports heroes. (Their list of the last century's best was "chosen by a national poll of sports editors.")

Instead, their book is broken down into 10 categories — endurance, nerve, finesse, team-play, speed, strategy, inspiration, guts, strength and showmanship.

It is this fact that makes the book interesting, if you can overlook the fact that Victoria's Torchy Peden was mentioned only briefly or that the famed "Miracle Mile" between Roger Bannister and John Landy at the 1954 Empire Games in Vancouver was omitted entirely.

Also neglected was the sad saga of marathoner Jim Peters' collapse in the same Empire Games.

Only in the department of illustration will Great Canadian Sports Stories escape any argument, in both East and West.

Poet Anthology Well Selected

POETRY OF OUR TIME, ed. by Louis Dudek, MacMillan Co. of Canada, $2.95. Paperback.

Reviewed by G. V. Downes

This is an unusual and useful anthology arranged by Louis Dudek, the Montreal writer who edits Delta. It is obviously intended for students or the general reader wishing to guide himself through the maze.

Biographies of poets are given before all the selections, and there are 60 pages of questions at the end with suggestions for study.

The field which Mr. Dudek tries to cover is so vast that one marvels at his courage. However, he does limit himself to work which, in his opinion, illustrates the most characteristic features of modern movements since Whitman and Hopkins.

Naturally, he must include the well-known anthology pieces which are part of modern literary history, such as D. H. Lawrence's Snake, or the Eliot poems which appear everywhere.

But there are many others from lesser known writers which afford an excellent introduction to their work — Wallace Stevens or Robert Lowell for example.

The originality of Mr. Dudek's approach is evident also in his arrangement of material. He places a Canadian section by itself after the English-American one, and includes in it French-Canadian poems with translations attached, some of which he has prepared himself.

However, I did find the introductory essay on the subject surprisingly superficial in its approach and downright misleading in some of its statements. Both William Carlos Williams and Yeats deserve better of a fellow poet.

And no one ever agrees with an anthologist's choice of poems — that is why, no doubt, Mr. Dudek was driven into making his own.

Early Defeats Of Air Ships

"THE AIRSHIPS AKRON AND MACON THE FLYING AIRCRAFT CARRIERS OF THE U.S. NAVY" by Richard K. Smith, United States Naval Institute, Annapolis, Maryland, 1966. $12.50. 228 pages. Photographic illustrations.

Reviewed by Eric Henderson

Probably the most overworked platitude of the 20s and 30s was: "The next war will be fought entirely in the air!". This profound observation was constantly parroted by all manner of "experts" ranging from ambitious air-marshals to your Aunt Betsy.

The German Zeppelin had proved ineffective in 1914-18, but the American navy attempted, in the years following, to explore and develop the potentialities of "rigid" aircraft as plane carriers and in reconnaissance roles.

The project was abandoned after two giant airships had plunged to destruction with a total loss of 75 lives.

This book recounts the unlucky careers of USS Akron and Macon to their tragic fate in 1933 and 1934 respectively. It is a story of experiment, progress and disappointment.

Pleasant Side of Life

Reviewed by M. Schierbeck

It leave the reader with a vivid picture of a woman, who, during a happy eventful life developed a character of great integrity and a philosophy that enabled her to give generously to her home and family and to the world at large.

Her gifts of joy were many and varied; they include a good marriage and a happy home life as well as artistic appreciation and own to funny incidents as when she nearly neglected to read the manuscript for Victoria Regina, which later, became her best role.

And as her own ideas remind her of the words of poets and other writers she quotes them.

World's Hunger To Be Studied On Human Camera

The daily struggle of about half of humanity for enough food merely to subsist, is the subject of One Man's Hunger, to be telecast on the Human Camera Sunday at 10 p.m. on Channels 2 and 6.

Award-winning Canadian producer-director Beryl Fox selects the programs for showing on The Human Camera.

One Man's Hunger, an Associated-Rediffusion production, is introduced by its executive producer David Windlesham on the CBC series. The film, made on location in India, focuses on the continuous battle against hunger waged by an Indian peasant-farmer. This man, points out commentator James Cameron, is representative of millions of others in Asia, Africa and Latin America. His daily efforts to obtain enough food to sustain himself and his family and at the same time preserve his dignity as a human being are constantly repeated throughout the world.

India is the second most populous nation on earth. The majority of her people live in some 700,000 villages and rely on the arid, overworked land, sucked dry of its fertility over centuries, for their living. Much of the land is a hungry as the people, many of whom live on a minimal cereal diet, with a little milk as a nutritious 'luxury.' Despite the efforts of the United Nations and various levels of the Indian government, the relentless spectre of starvation is rarely further than the next sunrise for many Indians.

NDP Leader

Tommy Douglas, leader of the New Democratic Party, recently granted a personal interview to three young student representatives of the CBC-TV youth show Through the Eyes of Tomorrow.

The informal chat with Mr. Douglas, filmed in Ottawa, will be seen on Channel 2 at 2 p.m. Sunday. The socialist chief talks about his early attraction to politics and social welfare, the problems of a politician and his personal life and interests.

On the same program, 18-year-old Vancouver-born Wayne Harris is the subject of Portrait of a Jockey. The youngest rider in Canada when he started racing professionally in April, 1964, Harris is a high-school dropout who is regarded as one of the outstanding jockeys to appear in recent years.

Meet the Press

James H. Meredith, who was wounded by a shotgun blast from ambush while walking through Mississippi, on June 6, will be the guest on "Meet the Press Sunday at 1 p.m. on Channel 5.

Meredith was shot two miles south of Hernando, Miss.

Interviewing Meredith will be Wallace Terry of Time Magazine, Haynes Johnson of the Washington Evening Star, Claude Sitton of the New York Times, and NBC News correspondent Herbert Kaplow.

Lawrence E. Spivak, producer and permanent panel member of "Meet the Press will moderate.

McGee Report

Reactions of America's major European allies to U.S. policy in Viet Nam will be the subject of a special report on NBC News' "The Frank McGee Report," Sunday at 6 p.m. on Channel 5.

Four NBC News correspondents stationed in Europe will report on how the mass media of England, France, Gemany and Italy portray the American effort in Viet Nam.

Country Calendar

"You're out of your mind . . . why that's ridiculous!" These are the remarks Russ Rowntree of Woodbridge, Ont., hears quite often these days. But all he does is grin and shrug his shoulders.

Why the remarks? Recently Russ and his friend Bob Lowe of Maple purchased a Holstein cow at what is said to be a new world's record price for a cow—$42,000.

On Sunday, at 1:30 p.m. (Channels 2, 6) Country Calendar visits the Rowntree farm to find out why two successful businessmen would invest $42,000 in one cow.

Sportsman Holiday

"Sportsman's Holiday" will present exciting scenes in color of wild animals in Alaska, trout fishing in Argentina, and fishing for bass in New England, when the NBC-TV outdoor sports series premieres on Sunday, at 5:30 p.m. on Channel 5.

Host Curt Gowdy interviews Dick Borden, wild-life photographer, about hunting with a camera instead of a gun. In a special film sequence, shot during a camping expedition in Mt. McKinley National Park, Alaska, Borden and his son capture close-up pictures of bull caribous, grizzly bears, moose and mountain sheep.

In another segment of the program Gowdy talks with expert fresh-water bass fisherman Bill Plummer on his technique and some of the special baits he has originated. Then on film, Plummer demonstrates his ability by catching several large-mouth bass in the Quabbin Reservoir in Massachusetts.

"Sportsman's Holiday" color cameras also focus on two American businessmen in the great lake of Lago Palena in Argentina as they fly-fish for trophy-sized brook trout.

10:00: Channels 2, 6: Human Camera. India's problems of hunger and poverty are dramatized.

RED SKELTON wins award for being the world's ugliest man and is congratulated by his guest, Tina Louise, of Gilligan's Island on the Red Skelton Hour, Monday at 7:30 p.m., in color, on Channel 12. Also joining Miss Louise and Skelton as guests is Herb Alpert and the Tijuana Brass.

ASK RITHET'S

Q. A friend of mine lost a diamond from a ring and was told that she could not claim under her Homeowners policy. Is this correct and is there insurance to cover this kind of loss?

A. Yes. A Homeowners policy does not cover mysterious disappearance. However, an all risk rider insuring specific items of value can be added to the policy which would provide cover for this loss.

TV DRAMA

Optimism Key Word For Future

By RICK DU BROW

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — There is optimism in some significant television quarters that two factors may soon help end the long-time famine of serious drama on the three major networks. The factors are:

The unexpected reasonable rating garnered recently by CBS TV's brilliant version of Death of a Salesman. And more importantly, the fact that the now-desperate shortage of new movies for television soon may provide an opening for good dramas to be slipped in among the two-hour features to be made for video to fill the motion picture gap.

The reasoning behind this latter point — which sponsors must be sold on — is that the audiences that watch movies are not tied to the running-character situation series elsewhere on the networks, and are the best bet to stick around and watch.

There is talk that if the sponsors can be made to believe this, a sort of formula might be worked out so that there would be, say, one drama a month along with three movies (some of which may be the made-for-video two-hour motion pictures).

NEW LEAF

It is always difficult to take the networks seriously about any new leaf they promise to turn over. The constant viewer gets the feeling that they are mostly icy opportunists who milk a piece of prestige to death when it comes along to try to make the public forget the awful stuff they put on day to day. In short, "Death of a Salesman" has allowed for a lot of puff-type promises of quality.

However, the weekly show business newspaper Variety has come up with some sound practical points about why the once-a-month drama notion just might shape up:

"The way theatrical film prices are mounting, the economics of studio drama and features on TV are just about at the point of equalizing. If a drama costs $400,000 for a single run and can carry the rating momentum (and advertising lineup) of a feature showcase whose celluloid fare is $500,000 a shot, it becomes almost a bargain . . .

"There are, of course, all those "ifs" centering on sponsor disposition and the rating returns on future TV ledgers. But necessity is working very much in drama's favor, for the two-hour studio shows could cut any network's need for feature product by 25 per cent, and therein lies the real hope for a revival of what is termed the 'golden age'."

OPTIMISM

There are, of course, other reasons for some optimism about future video drama specials — the foremost of which is the fall's new series, "ABC Stage 67," which is already a reality and has scheduled some original plays that promise genuine interest, successful or not.

In addition, in the wake of the "Death of a Salesman" coup, some of the plays being mentioned as possible network special include "The Crucible" by Arthur Miller, "The Glass Menagerie" by Tennessee Williams and "Othello" (with Sidney Poitier and, perhaps, George C. Scott).

Wayne, Shuster End Season

Affectionate Look At Mae West On Show of Week

Wayne and Shuster take an affectionate look at Mae West when CBC-TV's Show of the Week winds up in its current-season Monday at 9 p.m. on Channels 2 and 6.

". . . A reincarnation of the scandalous Gay Nineties; a 20th-century Floradora girl who emerged in the tomboy 20s to remind men what curves were really like!

Thats how Wayne and Shuster describe Mae West, one of the screen's great sex queens, and, not incidentally, one of its most accomplished comediennes.

Mae West's exuberant spirit and opulent figure were ideally suited to the Nineties period in which many of her plays and movies were set. Johnny and Frank show scenes from She Done Him Wrong, the film version of Diamond Lil, Mae's first great stage success, which she also wrote. This film and I'm No Angel, shocking to 1932 audiences (though they seem tame enough by today's standards) quite literally, were responsible for the formation of the Legion of Decency; they were also responsible for saving Paramount Pictures from financial disaster.

Other classic moments from Mae West films to be seen in this Affectionate Look are from Klondike Annie and My Little Chickadee, with W. C. Fields. Mae's individual way with a song is displayed in a number with the Duke Ellington Orchestra.

Gideon's Way

From the pages of detective fiction, Commander George Gideon returns to CBC-TV this summer for a new series of Gideon's Way. As in past series, Gideon is played by the English actor John Gregson.

Gideon's way makes its summer debut Tuesday, at 9:30 p.m. on Channels 2 and 6.

Gideon of Scotland Yard is the phlegmatic detective hero of a dozen novels by John Creasey, who used the pen name J. J. Marric for his early books.

In the first episode, Commander Gideon flings out a net to catch an escaped prisoner and his buddy. Titled The Tin God, the story concerns the escapee's determination to seek revenge on his wife, who reluctantly helped Gideon arrest him in the first place. Derren Nesbitt plays the vindictive jailbird, and Jennifer Wilson is seen as the wife.

In the series, Alexander Davison has the supporting role of Gideon's right-hand man, Detective Inspector David Keen. Daphne Anderson appears as Kate, Gideons wife, and Andrea Allen, Richard James and Giles Watling play the roles of Gideon's teen-age children.

John Gregson, who stars in the title role of this summer series, is a Lancashire-born actor of Irish ancestry who played a Scot in one his most successful early film roles, in Tight Little Island. He also starred in one of Britain's funniest film comedies, Genevieve. He and his wife, former actress Thea Gregory, have four children ranging in ages from five to the middle teens.

Gideon's Way is filmed mainly on London locations, the orbit of the Metropolitan Police, although occasionally Commander Gideon is called to other parts of England on cases.

Science Programs

Did you know that if it weren't for forest fires, new generations of jack pines wouldn't grow?

This is just one of the many odd discoveries forestry experts have made in their continuing efforts to insure that our vast Canadian forests will continue to flourish. Let us hasten to add that this doesn't mean they plan to run around setting fire to stands of jack pine.

Forest succession is just one of the topics to be examined when the Edison Award-winning The Nature of Things returns to CBC-TV for a new season of programs focussing on the season of summer.

The first of the series, to be seen Monday at 7:30 p.m. on Channels 2 and 6 concerns the sun and what it has meant to man—including a look at sun worship through the ages.

Succeeding programs are concerned with the physics of sailing, the psychology and physics of rest and exercise, Canada's national parks, fluctuating water levels in the Great Lakes, summer storms, air conditioning — both natural and mechanical — and the battle against harmful insects.

NFB Presents

Life in the outports of Newfoundland goes on as it has for generations but many of the younger inhabitants are now looking to the city for their future.

Bauline, a fishing settlement of about two hundred and fifty persons, on the east side of Conception Bay is one such outport. Here the National Film Board filmed the story of the hardy baymen.

"The Baymen," a half-hour visit with the people of Bauline, will be seen on NFB Presents at 10:30 p.m., Wednesday, Channels 2 and 6.

The film focusses on the King family, three generations who represent the continuity of life in the community and the changes which have been affected over the years.

The older generations were educated on the sea. Their world was bordered by the Atlantic and their village. As the years went by, the methods of fishing improved but still life was hard and the recompense slight. Sons began to look elsewhere for their livelihood and trades, other than fishing, began to draw the baymen from their settlements. Today, the children of Bauline and the other outports turn evermore to a life outside the fishing community.

All generations however have one thing in common. They are, above all else, Newfoundlanders and, not matter where they choose to make their way, they will always be baymen.

BOB CRANE (right) and Richard Dawson set up a German general (Leon Askin) for a fall on Hogan's Heroes, Wednesday at 9 p.m., in color, on Channel 12.

Julie London

Julie London stars on "Something Special" Thursday, at 8:00 p.m., in color, on Channel 7.

One of the most sought after personalities in show business, Julie was working in a Hollywood store when the late Alan Ladd's wife, talent scout and former actress, Sue Carol, spotted the attractive girl. A screen test quickly brought her a contract and she appeared in six pictures with notable advancement for her career.

At the request of friends, she turned to singing. Her opening at Johnny Walsh's chic Hollywood night club was a sensation. She introduced her big hit, "Cry Me A River," and appearances followed in New York's Cameo Room and on the Ed Sullivan TV shows.

In this hour special Julie performs such blues melodies as "Blues in the Night," and "I Gotta Right to Sing the Blues," as well as the standards "Bye Bye Blackbird," and "My Baby Just Cares for Me."

Starring with Julie is popular pianist Bobby Troup, who presents "Lemon Twist," "Their Hearts Were Full of Spring," and "Please Won't Someone Belong to Me."

MONDAY

7:30: Channels 2, 6: Nature of Things. The sun and what it means to man is examined. Also a look at worship.

HINTS FOR THE HOME GARDEN

Plants Tie House to Nature

By JACK BEASTALL

Jack

A log cabin in a forest clearing is, to my mind, the nearest man has come to making a structure in harmony with its surroundings.

Our city and urban homes, regardless of beauty in design, in some way offend our senses, otherwise we should not recognize the need for what we call "foundation plantings" designed, as we say, to tie the house into its surroundings.

These plantings are basically a transition from the severe lines of the building to the softer, rounded forms of nature, and when designed by a trained landscape architect who knows local conditions and, more important, recognizes the limitations of the plant material that will thrive under local conditions, we see a soul-satisfying composition we long to duplicate on our own property.

Sometimes we may go as far as determining the plants that were used and the positions they occupied with the view of producing exactly the same picture on our own lot, and here our problems begin.

PROTOTYPE

First, we have to make sure the soil of the prototype is the same as our own soil, because plants like some soils and dislike others. Whether or not the same plants can be used will, in many instances, depend on the soil.

Plants which revel in well-drained soil on a hilltop location do not take kindly to the heavier, wetter soils of a lowland.

Then again there is the aspect to be considered. The type of plant material that enjoys an easterly aspect is quite different from the plant material that thrives facing the west. And the same applies to the north or the south.

In other words, it is almost impossible to successfully duplicate in detail an existing planting unless all the conditions, including the microclimates of the two areas and the exposure to wind, are identical. And this is a state that rarely, if ever exists, even on adjacent properties.

OTHER TYPES

We can duplicate the effects using other types of plants, but it is difficult to get a gardener to compromise. He will insist on the same plants in the same positions often against the advice of an experienced plantsman and the end result is a garden of problems which never gives complete satisfaction.

Whether we are duplicating another planting or not there are a lot of things requiring consideration if a foundation planting is to be successful.

Three of these are overhanging eaves, concrete foundations, and subsoil back-fill.

Starting with the soil, If the house is stucco finished, there will be considerable lime in the soil which will slowly become available to plants for five years or longer and since few of the desirable plants for foundation work will tolerate free lime, you can readily see why so many plantings fail to succeed as expected.

The foundation itself, the concrete, has an affinity for moisture, drawing it out of the soil for a distance of at least two feet. Therefore any plant set less than three feet from the foundation is going to have difficulty finding enough moisture to make normal growth and flowers.

WET BASEMENT

Theoretically, this is a minor detail to most gardeners, because they feel that adequate moisture can be supplied with the hose and sprinkler but, as soon as we apply enough moisture, we have another problem in the form of a wet basement.

For this reason, all basements should be completely waterproofed if plans call for plants adjacent to the foundation.

Wide overhanging eaves are a feature of modern architecture, a design borrowed from houses in semi-tropical climates where the wide eaves keep the walls in partial shadow during the hottest part of the day, and lessen the heat indoors.

The plants that grow in these semi-tropical climates are those which thrive in heat and dry soil and the wide eaves are no detriment, but the plants of the temperate zone, especially the north temperate, love neither heat nor dry soil and wide eaves prevent even the normal rainfall from reaching the soil around a foundation. This means that watering is often needed every week of the year, summer and winter, if the plants are to thrive.

HOUSE DESIGN

Two things emerge from the problems we have so far mentioned. One is that the design of the house and the planting which complements that design must be considered as a whole, not as two different things one of which can be completed before the other is thought about.

And the second is that for success with foundation plantings the soil left by the builder must either receive extensive modification to make it suitable for growing plants, or, it should be completely removed and a suitable soil (containing quantities of humus to hold moisture) put into its place. This sounds, and is, expensive, but when compared with the cost of plants and planting, is an investment that will save dollars, and problems, later.

LITTLE SKETCHES

Most of us are influenced by those wonderful little sketches showing the finished house complete with a mature planting. In the sketches, the architect shows the shapes of plants that complement the house design and they are depicted in the exact size and shape to make a perfect picture.

We must remember that plants are living things which grow and change from year to year. When the planting is made, the plants will be small. If they are quick growing, they will soon reach the size depicted by the artist, but they will not stop at that point.

On he other hand, if we use naturally slow-growing plants, they may never outgrow their space but they could take 25 years or longer to make the picture the architect depicted in his sketch.

Another thing which affects plants in a foundation planting more than the average home gardener suspects is the material of which the walls are constructed and the color when they are finished.

REFLECTS HEAT

White reflects heat which scorches the foliage of plants and can even give a local temperature higher than the plant can tolerate. When stucco and a white finish are combined, we are limited in the plants that can be used anywhere near the wall.

Other light colors are not so heat-reflecting but still need care in the selection of plants. Wooden walls finished in dark colors are the best as far as plants are concerned.

WEEK'S WORK

By JACK BEASTALL

Be sure that soil is damp beneath peat moss mulch around small azaleas, rhododendrons and similar shrubs. Don't assume there is moisture from the showers of the past week.

Lilacs with long unwanted shoots should be pruned back, but leave the shorter ones untouched or there will be no flowers next year.

Spring blooming rockery plants can be increased by taking short pieces of new growths to insert into flats of sandy compost outdoors in a shaded spot.

Picking of sweet peas every other day either for bouquets, or the faded flowers, will bring quantities into bloom at one time.

Keep vegetable rows weeded but do not disturb roots of crops.

QUIZZING THE GARDENER

By JACK BEASTALL

Q When do I cut back the azaleas? They are growing a lot. Mrs. T. G., Fairfield.

A. Azaleas are a section of the rhododendron family, none of which need regular pruning as do many other shrubs.

The only pruning is to remove a complete branch which may create an unbalanced appearance, or to cut out a dead or damaged portion. Small azaleas need the seed pods removed after petals fall, to prevent waste energy.

New growths appear at the base of this year's flower stems and will be lost if the shrub is cut back on every branch. In fact, there will be no blooms if an azalea (or a rhododendron) is pruned every year.

GUARANTEED
YOU HAVE EVER USED—
or your money back!

Let you—and your roses—be the judge! Watch Gardal go to work on insects, black spot, mites and mildew. And if it isn't the best rose spray you've ever used, tell us so. Write to Green Cross Products, P.O. Box 489, Montreal. Send us the bottle with label, and we'll send you your money back.

Applied as a liquid spray, Gardal leaves no visible powder or dust deposits. Its systemic insecticide and systemic fungicide go right inside the plant. The systemic insecticide distributes itself throughout the entire plant, protecting tender new growth from insect damage for up to two weeks after application. Systemics cannot be washed off by rain, since they are within the plant.

A KINGDOM OF FLOWERS
CREATED BY CRAFTSMEN

During the past 50 years more than six million people have viewed the glories of Butchart Gardens. During the next 50 years more than triple that number are expected to walk through the breath-taking beauty of 25 acres of exotic flower beds and velvet lawns.

Each in his turn will admire the vision of Jenny Butchart who first thought of turning an ugly gash in the landscape into a garden of world-wide renown. Each will comment on the fine skill of the gardeners and the landscape artists which attracts 350,000 visitors a year.

Few will appreciate the fact that all the skill of those master-craftsmen would go for nought without one vital ingredient—WATER.

Butchart Gardens has that life-giving liquid in abundance, piped to every corner of that fabulous kingdom of flowers by the Journeymen Mechanics of the plumbing and pipefitting trade.

You may never be able to afford a garden as glorious as the one Mrs. Butchart started 50 years ago. But you can afford the skills of the technicians who make sure water is where you need it.

Summer Slump Hits Early

By GORDON GRANT
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Investors showed interest in specially situated issues on Canadian stock markets this week, but paid little attention to the market in general.

Speculative issues were all but dormant, although there was sporadic activity in one or two issues which made news.

There were the usual reasons advanced for the markets' indecision — labor problems in Canada, a weak and vulnerable New York market and the war in Viet Nam. But it appears the summer doldrums, which usually hit markets in July, have come early this year.

Among industrials on the Toronto exchange, wine - maker T. G. Bright, a closely-held issue, jumped $5 to $80 after increasing its dividend to 50 cents a quarter from 25 cents and reporting sharply increased earnings.

Chateau - Gai, another wine company, was unchanged despite showing earnings of 96 cents a share for last year compared with 83 cents in the previous year.

SALADA ADVANCED

Among foods, Salada jumped 2⅛ to 12—it was up 1⅞ Friday —on rumors that it will receive a takeover bid from Atlantic Sugar. Atlantic fell ¼ to 29.

Utilitities were fairly active. Northern and Central Gas said it was considering a share-exchange offer for Quebec Natural Gas and also received shareholder approval for a 2-for-1 stock split.

Northern and Central fell ⅝ to 27 and Quebec Natural was up ½ to 14⅝. Northern is also in the process of a takeover of Canadian Industrial Gas and Oil which dipped ¼ to 13⅜.

Northern Telephone dipped ⅜ to 13⅞ after directors advised shareholders to accept an offer of $14 a share from Bell Telephone which lost ¾ to 52.

Toronto Iron A jumped 3⅛ to 52⅞ after the company proposed a stock reclassification, an increase in dividend and a 2-for-1 stock split. Under the proposal, class A shares would become common shares and the dividend would be increased to 90 cents from 60 cents on the old shares.

GRABBED SPOTLIGHT

Among speculative mining issues, Consolidated Halliwell grabbed the spotlight, sagging 48 cents to 90 cents after announcing an earnings decline for last year to $1,142,891 compared with $1,164,281 the previous year.

Selling was so heavy Friday, when the stock fell as low as 80 cents, that trading was delayed 17 minutes at the opening so some semblance of an orderly market could be maintained.

QUOTATIONS CONTROLLED

Under changes approved by TSE members at a special meeting, registered floor traders must be prepared to buy or sell a security to prevent the difference between bid and ask quotations from becoming excessively wide.

They will also be required to buy or sell odd-lot orders from the public even if the transaction is unprofitable for the trader. The trader will, however, be allowed to buy at a slightly higher price than the prevailing market.

'It's Attack On Province'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mayor William Rathie said Friday a New York business paper's attack on a new issue of B.C. Hydro bonds is an attack on the people of the province as well as Premier Bennett and the cabinet.

The mayor said in an interview the article in Barron's magazine failed to tell the whole story about B.C.'s development and the need for power from the Columbia and Peace River projects.

The article warned the New York money market to be aware of the premier, B.C. Hydro and the latest offering of $50,000,000 in Hydro sinking fund bonds. The publication was sharply critical of the government take-over of B.C. Electric and referred to a "potential waste of resources" in the Peace Project.

Mayor Rathie called on businessmen to try to offset the effects of the article by telling their American associates the truth about B.C.'s progress.

DESIGNED MONTHLY INCOME IN RETIREMENT

is not always easily arranged, as dividends or interest on investments often fail to tie in well with the monthly style of budget to which the retired man accustomed himself during the working years.

To meet this need, Victoria Mortgage Corporation will mail a monthly cheque applying on any investment of $10,000 or over, or any AMOUNT you SPECIFY, to ARRIVE PROMPTLY ON THE FIRST OF EACH MONTH. This can be for interest only at 7½%, or for an amount including part principal, as well as interest.

$10,000 at 7½% produces $62.50 earnings per month. $10,000 at monthly payments of $69 including 7½% interest would take 30 years to spend; $73 month—25 years; $80 month—20 years; $89 month—16 years; $100 month—13 years; $118 month—10 years; $138 month—8 years; $153 month—7 years; $200 month—5 years.

Terms of all 7½% Victoria Mortgage Debentures provide that the unused portion of your investment is repaid in five years—or earlier in the event of prior death, in which case your estate can cash the debenture.

To have prospectus mailed, phone Douglas Hawkes Ltd. EV 4-7128, 817 Fort.

Even if your Aunt Maude leaves you $3,000,000, can you actually do without "Realtor" service when you buy your next home? Perhaps. But just be sure you have an Aunt Maude.

If you don't have money to burn, you'll need the help and assurance that "Realtor" service can give when you buy a home. (Even if you have an Aunt Maude, chances are she got all that money by buying her property wisely. Through a real estate broker.)

Entry in ECM 'Is Years Away'

LONDON (CP)—John McEwen, Australia's deputy prime minister, said today he now is satisfied that Britain won't go into the European Common Market "for years."

McEwen, attending the Commonwealth trade ministers conference, told reporters that in all his discussions with British officials he found no one is talking in terms of early negotiations but "everyone is talking in terms of years."

He suggested that Britain likely will continue to make "soundings" on her efforts to join the trade bloc but concluded the decision lies essentially in Europe.

This seemed to be in line with views expressed in other Commonwealth quarters that France particularly still opposes Britain's membership and that this opposition will continue as long as Charles de Gaulle remains in power.

Britain informed her partners during the Commonwealth conference she would consult with them fully at all stages in common market negotiations. Britain said she was prepared to join the trade bloc provided the essential interests of Britain and the Commonwealth could be safeguarded. McEwen said Australia's views on Britain's position could only be determined in the light of the terms of negotiations whenever these take place.

Ministerial decisions at the conference suggested that despite the Commonwealth's split over Rhodesia, representatives are likely to speak with a more unified voice in world trade councils.

The ministers didn't make much headway in overcoming the many economic problems confronting Commonwealth trade but they did decide to keep looking for solutions. They agreed "that Commonwealth countries should act in concert wherever possible in wider international organizations concerned with international trade and trade policy."

That may mean that many of the 23 Commonwealth partners will stop fighting each other in such major bargaining arenas as the Kennedy round of world tariff negotiations, the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade and the United Nations trade conferences.

NIBBLED PROBLEMS

The ministers nibbled away at some of the problems by agreeing to pursue means of increasing Commonwealth trade co-operation through exchange of information on national planning so that production could be better geared to future market requirements, to seek a possible boost in tourist traffic and to study ways of reducing some shipping costs while increasing trade promotion.

Underdeveloped members got no more than agreement from wealthier members to look into the matter when the old cry was raised that the industrialized countries, such as Canada, were restricting imports of low-priced manufactured goods. This discouraged the less-developed areas from trying to raise earnings by switching from the plow to the factory floor.

Trade Minister Robert Winters maintained that some of the complaints are more imagined than real, though an Indian official said they certainly are real, particularly Canada's restrictions on imports of Indian textiles.

Talks Urged With Russians

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — A special two-state committee studying Russian fishing off the Washington and Oregon coast recommended Friday that the federal government meet as soon as possible with the Soviets to resolve the issue.

The 12-man governor's advisory committee on offshore fishing problems, appointed by Governor Dan Evans and Oregon Governor Mark O. Hatfield, also recommended that an increased and co-ordinated 24-hour surveillance of the Russian fishing fleet begin immediately.

The committee made eight recommendations in a report drafted Thursday at a staff meeting of governor's representatives in Longview.

The recommendations included:

- An increased and coordinated 24-hour inshore and offshore surveillance by the U.S. Coast Guard, bureau of commercial fisheries and state agencies, with telescopic photographs, and deputizing two American fishermen from each state to work their boats around the Russian fleet gathering information.
- Speedily disseminating full and comprehensive information to all concerned, particularly to the fishing industry.
- Declassify all information on all Russian fleet activities for dissemination.
- Urge the president and other officers and agencies to expedite the proposed meeting with the Russians and render all assistance possible.
- Urge implementation of the principles of the 1958 Geneva convention on fishing and conservation of ocean resources.
- Establishment of an international commission or council to study north Pacific fisheries resources as has been done in the north Atlantic.
- Advocating establishment of a wider zone to protect U.S. offshore fisheries stocks adequately.

Tries Paperbacks

LONDON (CP) — Canadian-born publisher Lord Thomson, already established in the hard-back book publishing field as well as in newspapers and magazines, is entering the paper-back market, a Thomson official said today. Thomson Publications, a subsidiary of the Thomson organization, is to purchase the firm of Consul Books, which is based in Manchester and has London offices.

Vacation Aid Wins Award for Designer

The award of design excellence was presented to Mr. Mandas for a map-viewing case containing five scaled color tour maps detailing routes, mileage, points of interest, and campsites of the Trans-Canada Highway.

The contest was a "nation-wide effort to raise the standards of industrial design in Canada."

Simon Reisman, deputy minister of the federal department of industry, commented: "We must appreciate that design effort is essential to the encouragement and development of our society and the growth of the industries that serve it.

"In many fields it is no longer a question of whether we can afford to invest in new design, but whether we can afford not to."

Mr. Mandas' entry was one of only 400 new designs selected out of the 2,400 submissions.

Bank Debits Increase

MONTREAL (CP)—Debits to Canadian bank accounts in May totalled $46,009,600,000, an increase from April and a substantial increase from May of 1965, the Canadian Bankers' Association announced today.

The figure for April was $43,403,100,000 and in May of last year was $40,015,600,000.

As reported for last month from all clearing points in Western Canada (in millions) they are:

Tax Ban Fails

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — The New Jersey senate overwhelmingly rejected a proposal Wednesday that would have paved the way for the New York Stock Exchange to operate tax-free in the state. The measure called for a public referendum to decide whether to ban forever stock transfer taxes in New Jersey. It would have required an amendment to the state constitution.

ECONOMIST FORECASTS

High Interest Rates to Stay

OTTAWA (CP)—High interest rates are likely to prevail in the Canadian economy for the next 10 years, says a consulting economist.

M. T. Welshans, professor of finance at Washington University, St. Louis, consulting economist for the U.S. National Association of Credit Management, told a business seminar funds are likely to be "tight" for most businesses because of the rapid expansion expected in the 1970s.

Addressing the closing session of a two-day seminar sponsored by the Canadian Credit Men's Association, Mr. Welshans said many smaller firms and new ventures will have to depend on so-called trade credit to finance their operations. This is short-term credit such as a householder gets in buying goods or services for which he is prepared to pay in full at the end of a month or two.

"It is among these firms that marginal risks are most apt to be found," he said.

"The anticipated growth of the Canadian economy promises to hold interest rates at relatively high levels for the next decade. The high levels of interest rates and the limitation of loanable funds by commercial banks will serve to increase further the reliance of many firms on trade credit as a source of short-term financing."

C. R. Cook, comptroller of Molson Breweries Ltd., told delegates the chief features of Canadian business during the next 10 years will be the funds made available for investment by government-sponsored pension plans and the speed with which financial and other computations will be made by data processing equipment.

Harvey S. Gellman, president of DCF Systems Ltd., a data processing and control functions firm, said the pace of technological change is being speeded up by computers.

Devaluation Out

OTTAWA (CP)—E. J. W. Hellmuth, prominent British international banker, said today there is no question of devaluing the pound sterling, following a move by several international banks to support it. "Devaluation is something we cannot contemplate either in our own interests or the interests of others," he told the opening session of an executive business seminar sponsored by the Canadian Credit Men's Association.

North Shore Link Study Advocated

VANCOUVER (CP)—The Port of Vancouver Development Committee wants an immediate study looking toward co-ordination of rail links serving this big port, with particular attention to those linking the north shore.

The committee, at a meeting Wednesday, also said attention should be given to the economic feasibility of creation of a causeway across Indian Arm at the upper end of Vancouver harbor.

AIRLINE OFFERS 150 DIFFERENT TOURS

Air Canada will offer more than 150 different tours of Canada to visitors this year in an expanded vacation package program developed and conducted in conjunction with 12 well-known tour wholesalers.

The tours cover virtually every part of this vast land from the Atlantic to the Pacific and cater to every taste and pocketbook.

New jet aircraft, more seats and a more diverse selection make this package tour program the biggest and best yet offered. The program includes independent and conducted itineraries and offers sightseeing tours, cameracades especially tailored for photography enthusiasts, and fishing and hunting packages for sportsmen.

A sample 12-day tour of the Rockies and Pacific Coast would include a visit to Calgary, the Rafter Six Ranch, an optional ride to the 7,500-foot summit of Sulphur Mountain, sightseeing in the Lake Louise area, a crossing of the Great Divide and motor coach journey through the Kicking Horse Pass to Yoho National Park, Glacier National Park, Roger's Pass, Kamloops, Thompson River and the Fraser River Canyon to Vancouver.

Participants will visit Stanley Park, cruise through the Gulf Islands to Victoria, visit Butchart's Gardens and cruise around Vancouver Harbor. On the return journey they will visit Jasper Park area, drive to Mount Edith Cavell, the Glacier of the Angel, the Columbia Icefields, Maligne Lake and then continue on to Edmonton for departure by Air Canada.

The cost per person for the 12-day tour on the basis of two people sharing double rooms, is $305, less air fare.

A sample eight-day tour of Ontario and Quebec would include visits to Toronto, Kingston, Old Fort Henry, a cruise through the Thousand Islands, a visit to Hill Island, Upper Canada Village, a power dam and St. Lawrence Seaway Locks, a tour of Montreal, including a trip to the top of Mount Royal, a visit to the Laurentian Mountains, a cruise on the Ottawa River, a tour of the City of Ottawa and a visit to the Rideau Lakes.

On the basis of two people sharing a double room accommodation, the cost per person of this eight-day tour is $139 U. S. and $150 Canadian, less air fare.

And these are just two examples of the more than 150 different Canadian tours available this year.

Tourist Workers On Tours

Tour and tourist people are being treated to a Cook's tour of Victoria Wednesday.

Employees of any local firm involved in tourism, tour planning, hotels and restaurants are invited to take one of two tours of the area.

Each 2½ hours long, the first starts at 1 p.m., the second at 5 p.m., using buses provided by London, Blue Line and Grey Line systems.

Guides will be Bert Enman and William Clark, who will comment on the sights and attractions visitors could be expected to see and which those in the industry could recommend.

Sponsor of the free tour is Victoria Chamber of Commerce, which is distributing to its members a form coupon for employees to fill out and return.

Father Thames To Sparkle

Old Father Thames, London's historic river, will blaze with glory on the evening of Friday, Sept. 9. For nearly two hours after dusk the river will be the stage for one of the greatest spectaculars ever seen on the mighty waterway.

The Thames Pageant, sponsored by the Evening News, and supported by the major authorities in London, and companies and societies associated with life on the river, will commemorate the tercentenary of the Great Fire of London and the centenary of the London Fire Brigade.

Plans include a procession of 50 or more river craft, gaily decorated for the occasion. This will be followed by a moving fireworks display which, flanked by the illuminated bridges and buildings along the banks, will transform the Thames into a "Rainbow River."

Once a Cemetery

NASSAU, Bahamas — The Western Esplanade of Bay Street, one of Nassau's most scenic harbor overlooks, was a cemetery long before the days of piracy. Carib Indians are believed to have buried their dead there.

SNAPSHOT CONTEST RULES — 1966

1. The contest is strictly for amateur photographers. Anyone is eligible excepting employees of this newspaper, or employees of any newspaper participating in the Newspaper National Snapshot Awards, employees of the sponsors and their families, and individuals who, personally, or any members of whose families are engaged in manufacture, sale, commercial finishing or professional use of photographic goods.

2. Pictures that have been made after July 1, 1965, are eligible.

3. Your snapshots may be made from any brand of negative-type black-and-white film, but not from color transparencies. Black-and-white prints from color negative-type films will be accepted. Any make of camera may be used. Developing and printing may be done by a photo-finisher or the entrant. No print or any enlargement more than 10 inches in the longer dimension will be accepted. No art work or retouching is permitted on prints or on the negatives from which they are made. No composite pictures, such as multiple printing or montages, are eligible. Pictures should not be mounted or framed.

4. To enter the contest, mail a print or prints of as many pictures as you desire, within the contest dates, to the Victoria Daily Times "Amateur Snapshot Contest Editor." On the back of each picture print your name and address clearly in ink, and the class in which you wish the picture entered. (See Classes.)

5. No black-and-white prints will be returned. Do not submit negatives with your prints. Keep them, until requested by the Amateur Snapshot Contest Editor. (Only original negatives accepted.) The Victoria Daily Times and the sponsors of the Newspaper National Snapshot Awards assume no responsibility for negatives or prints.

6. All pictures received in The Times office, by mail or personal delivery, by 12 noon of Saturdays ending with July 2, to closing week of August 6 will be entered in that weekly competition of $10.00 prizes in three individual categories. At the close of the contest, The Times will award Grand Prizes to the three pictures (one in each class) chosen by its judges as the best entered in its contest. These three winners then will be entered by The Times in the Newspaper National Snapshot Awards, where they will compete with the same number of entries from other participating newspapers for cash prizes totalling approximately $50,000.

7. All pictures shall be judged in the Newspaper National Snapshot Awards on general interest and/or appeal. Photographic quality, although important, may not necessarily be the deciding factor. The decision of the judges shall be accepted as final.

8. It is not permissible to enter pictures in the contest of more than one newspaper participating in the 1966 Newspaper National Snapshot Awards.

9. Before receiving the newspaper's final prizes in one or more of the three classifications, the entrant must submit the original negative with print, and sign a statement that his picture, or any closely similar picture of the same subject or situation, has not been and will not be entered by him in any snapshot contest, exhibit, or salon where prizes are awarded, other than the one conducted by this newspaper, and has not been and will not be offered for publication in any manner.

- PEOPLE OF THE WORLD
- ANIMALS OF THE WORLD

IMPORTANT

If you snap a picture which you expect to enter in the contest and in which a person or persons appear, be sure to get their names and addresses. This is necessary because before your picture can become eligible for entry in the Newspaper National Snapshot Awards, the written consent of such recognizable person or persons to the use of the picture for promotional purposes must be obtained.

All you do is take the pictures, read the rules and start sending in your entries. Watch for winners published each week in the

VICTORIA DAILY TIMES

SECOND OF A SERIES

By JOHN MIKA

It was the morning after Saturday night and all that.

We — some 42 travel writers, broadcasters and television cameramen from various states and provinces — straggled into the basement banquet room of one of the hotels in Terrace for a "bruncheon" hosted by the local council.

It was a bare plaster-walled, tiled-floor room, empty save for the usual end-to-end tables and rows of cheap plywood stacking chairs.

Behind us, our hosts and then a crowd of Indians, dressed in white-belted blue uniforms and carrying brass instruments, shuffled in.

* * *

The band bustled briefly, lining up chairs on a small squeaky dias and our hosts proudly told us they were fishermen from Aiyansh, 80 miles north, who could really whomp it up.

With sinking hearts and already-throbbing heads, we stared at each other — trapped in a basement with a 25-man brass band of full-lunged Indians before breakfast!

Several of us closed our eyes, others fashioned fixed smiles but one honest man dropped his head into his hands as the small, slim conductor raised his baton.

* * *

Fascinated, I watched the stick arc upwards, then poise . . . "1914, zero hour, carpet barrage, commence firing," I thought to myself . . .

Down swooped the signal hand out rolled the sweet and delicate strains of Kenneth Alford's "The Midi," flooding the room with music instead of drowning us in a racket of ricocheting sound.

It was unbelievable! Our applause was long, spirited and spontaneous. Here was a concert to raise the soul, performed by expert and well-rehearsed musicians.

Then it swung into a medley of Strauss waltzes that infected us with so much gaeity we suddenly had a conga-line weaving happily among the rows of chairs and humming lustily.

The band was almost as surprised by us as we were by them but, obviously unprepared for so much cheering, they were pleased to meet our demands for encores.

This was our introduction to the most surprising feature of the Totem Circle Tour — Victoria to Kelsey Bay, ferry to Prince Rupert, down Highway 16 to Prince George then over the Cariboo Highway to the Fraser delta — the genuine musical talent of the Indians.

* * *

We were to marvel at this talent in several more unusual places and involving a wide variety of instruments:

The precision marching and thoroughly delightful tapping-tootling music of the 32 boys in the red-and-white cadet uniforms of the Lejac School Fife and Drum Band, in the open air by the shores of Fraser Lake;

The pulse-quickening skirling of 18 girls wearing the RCAF tartan of the Cariboo Indian School Pipe Band complement the air cadet squadron at the residential school as they march proudly through the swirling dust of the stampede corral at Williams Lake;

The Totem Land Five, a Mersey-beat electronic guitar, sax and drums outfit of teen-aged bloods, filling the open air with foot-tapping music surrounded by a dozen tall, weathered totem poles in their quiet reserve village on the banks of swift-flowing Kispiox.

We had come to photograph the totems and tape record the interesting curiosity of aged Indians draped in colorful blankets wailing the old chants — but we lingered to enjoy the lively, pulsating outpouring of rhythm of the modern "with it" group not because it was ethnic but because it was good.

* * *

Later, in nearby Hazelton, we were similarly entertained by another combo calling itself The Telstars.

Yet the odds are, if you take a trip along this most scenic route, you won't hear any of these — or many other Indian musical groups. Aside from the very occasional appearance at a local fair, and even more rare sponsored tour, these bands play for their own enjoyment alone.

The are proud of their achievement and it is only through lack of opportunity that they do not display it more frequently. They certainly could use the boost to their ego and their funds if they were booked more frequently.

In a "dynamic" society which Premier Bennett says will see a new emphasis on the development of cultural life in the province, during a provincial centennial year to be followed by a national celebration, in a north country just beginning to open up to a tourist trade where the many existing colorful attractions still are lost in the vastness of the area — surely it is time for the government and local communities to invite these bands to perform frequently.

* * *

Our tour party of journalists was impressed but what we saw had to be especially assembled for us. Why can't these performances be arranged more often for the summer months?

There are scores of such groups sprinkled through the Indian communities, and certainly the Americans are beginning to appreciate them: witness the Chieftones, an instrumental group composed mainly of British Columbia Indians attending school at Edmonton who have cut several records and soon will appear on Ed Sullivan's television show.

"Our girls' band went coast-to-coast last year and there is some talk of going to the Calgary Stampede and Expo 67 next year," Father Hubert O'Connor, OMI, principal of the Cariboo Indian school told me.

* * *

But local bookings are hard to come by sometimes.

"Indians are naturally musical people," he said. "They have a keen liking for music and they obtain a great sense of achievement in their successes as bands."

Ervest J. Moorven, its sixth conductor since it was established almost 75 years ago, said it was a "hand-me-down" band — the uniforms, instruments and music training is handed down from one generation to the other.

* * *

It has won competitions and medals several times over its history but may only give a single performance outside of its fishing village in some years.

"We practice every Monday night and we play for ourselves. There would be more in the band if we could pay for the instruments and uniforms," he said.

"It pleased us to play for you. We hope that maybe during centennial year we can go on tour.

"We would like to be able to raise some money. Many of our instruments are more than 30 years old and very worn but it would take as much as $10,000 to buy all the new instruments we need."

* * *

Mr. Moorven, who works for a logging company, was quick to point out there are three more village bands — of comparable ability — among the Nishga Indian communities of his district.

"We hope some day to be able to organize a band from the whole Nass River area — with about 150 musicians," he said.

"We play at nearby carnivals and in parades but the boys would like more chances to perform," said Brother McCormick, another of the Oblate order, who leads the Lejac fife and drum group.

"The boys really enjoy all that goes with being in the band, the music, the drills, the visits to other places.

"There's a very simple reason why we chose fifes and drums. We wanted something different, and something that was very cheap so we could afford the instruments."

If you do visit the Skeena or Chilcotin country and arrive for a rodeo or fair, keep an eye out for the Indian musical entry if there is one — it will be worth cheering.

I imagine the same would hold true anywhere in the province

290,000 Visitors

NASSAU, Bahamas — An estimated 290,000 summer visitors will play in the sunny Bahama Islands in the months of June through September. The three-month total will be greater than the number who visited the islands in the entire year of 1959.

All-Mexico Highway

Mexico hopes to complete an 1,800-mile highway along the U.S. border by 1970. The $39 million road would link Matamoros on the Gulf Coast with Tijuana on the Pacific, and would enable motorists to make the entire journey within Mexico.

Currently, auto travellers need to cross over to U.S. road when making the trip.

Gilbey's reveal how the first Collins was made
It's entirely possible that the first Collins was made with Gilbey's London Dry.
HOW WAS THE first Collins made? It was made by the Headwaiter at a London restaurant. Not surprisingly, his name was Mr. Collins. It's entirely possible that he mixed the drink with Gilbey's London Dry Gin because this gin has been made by the Gilbey family for 109 years. Its perfect balance gives a fresh, clean tasting drink.
Original Tom Collins
My name is Mr. Collins,
Headwaiter at Limmers
Corner of Conduit Street,
Hanover Square
My chief occupation is filling of brimmers
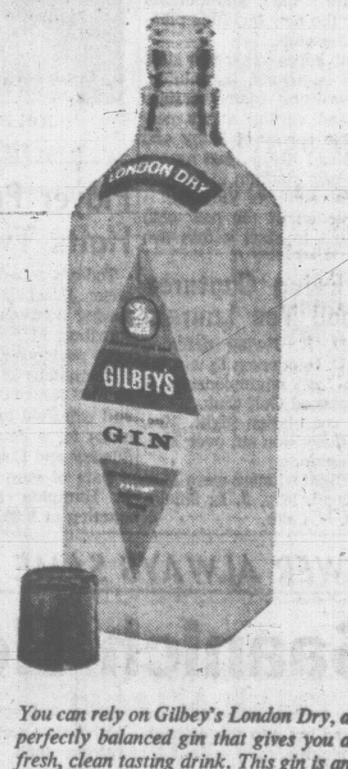
For all the young gentlemen
frequenters there.
Tallest of all the "brimmers" made by Mr. Collins was a mixture of gin, lemon juice, sugar and 'charged' water. Today, it is know the world over as the Tom Collins.
Speedy Tom Collins
Today of course you can mix your Collins much more speedily. Where Mr. Collins had to squeeze fresh lemons you can use frozen lemonade. And where Mr. Collins had to crack his ice from the block you can take yours straight from the freezer. But you still begin with Gilbey's London Dry. Its perfect balance gives a fresh, clean tasting drink.



You can rely on Gilbey's London Dry, a perfectly balanced gin that gives you a fresh, clean tasting drink. This gin is an international favourite, sold in 92 countries. It's been made by the Gilbey family for 109 years.

B.C. Amateur Playoff Between Man and Boy

VANCOUVER—An "old man" of 42 and "the boy" of 21, clubmates at Marine Drive Golf Club, teed off this morning in the 36-hole argument for the B.C. Amateur championship.

Johnston, consistent all week with scores at one-under-par 71, barged into today's final by defeating Victoria City Amateur champion Art Donaldson, 7 and 6, at Capilano Golf Club Friday while Vollmer, by far the most spectacular performer here this week, just made it with a one-up victory over Point Grey's Gordon MacKenzie.

Vollmer, admitting he is "getting tired" after seven rounds in five days, lacked his usual putting efficiency and vigor Friday. The nip-and-tuck match was all square after 18, 27 and 31 holes. Vollmer sewed up the match when he won the 32nd and 33rd holes to go two up and coasted home.

Johnston had it all his own way against Donaldson, scoring again in the 71 range. Johnston was three up after the morning 18 and coasted the rest of the way.

Appearance of Johnston and Vollmer in today's final practically assures both of berths on B.C.'s Willingdon Cup team.

Pet Driver Back in Bag And Palmer Back on Top

Unheralded Texan Steals Limelight With Great 64

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Arnold Palmer has his favorite driver back and with it a share of the driver's seat in the third round of the U.S. Open championship.

The muscular belter from Ligonier, Pa., fired a four-under-par 66 Friday for a two-day total of 137 and a tie for the lead with Billy Casper.

"I had a great driving round," Palmer said after his nines of 32 and 34.

Then he related that the driver he used was the same one with which he won the Tournament of Champions title in Las Vegas last April. He broke it later on.

"I just had it repaired," he declared.

"I've had only a couple of bad driving rounds lately and one of them was Thursday." That was when he shot a 38-33—71.

"This was one of my best rounds I have ever played and I was in good shape all the time," Palmer said. "I actually missed only two shots all day, one drive and the second shot on the 17th."

FIVE ONE-PUTTS

Palmer took 31 putts and had five one-putt greens. In addition, he had 15 putts of 20 feet or closer in the fast round.

Palmer's only bad moment came on the 17th. He drove into the rough on his second shot but hit a spectacular chip shot that stopped three feet from the cup. However, he missed the putt and had to settle for a bogey five on the 435-yard hole.

"I aimed for the centre but jerked it and hit it fat," he said.

On the bright side of the ledger, Palmer rammed home five birdies, three on the front nine.

STIFF CHALLENGE

Palmer readily admitted that the 6,719-yard Olympic course was a stiff challenge. "In two rounds, I have used every club in my bag except the one iron," he said.

Palmer's bogey on the 17th and a near birdie miss on the 18th prevented him from tying rookie tournament player Rives McBee of Midland, Tex., who equalled the Open's one-round total of 64.

"What in hell can I think about it," he commented on McBee's performance. "It's fantastic. But someone has done that before."

Casper and Palmer held a three-stroke lead over the unheralded McBee and Phil Rodgers as the 64 survivors of the starting field of 151 teed off for the third round.

RECORD ROUND

McBee, with nine birdies, shot a 64 which tied the Open record held jointly by Lee Mackey and Tommy Jacobs and set a new Olympic course record, breaking the old mark of 65 set by lighthorse Harry Cooper back in 1939.

At 143 were former U.S. Open champion Julius Boros, Australian Kel Nagle and Dave Hill, while Al Mengert, the first-round leader, and Bob Goalby were seven shots back at 144.

It took a score of 151 or better to qualify for the final two rounds of play today and Sunday.

There were a lot of big names who didn't make the cut, including former PGA champions Lionel and Jay Hebert and Jerry Barber, former Open kings Ed Furgol and Cary Middlecoff, Doug Ford, Mike Souchak, Bob Charles and Jacky Cupit.

FROM TROUBLE TO JOY in one easy stroke. That's what happened to Billy Casper after he found himself trapped at 17th green Friday in second round of U.S. Open golf tournament at San Francisco. Bill blasted out, watched ball run straight for cup, then disappear for birdie three. Elated Casper threw up arms and went on to tie Arnold Palmer for 36-hole lead at 137.

VAUGHAN SHARES LEAD IN WILLOW PARK EVENT

CALGARY—Bud Loftus of Calgary and Victoria's Vaughan Trapp fired two-under-par 69s Friday to share the first-round lead in the 54-hole, $12,000 Willows Park pro-am golf tournament.

Tied for second, at 70, were Frank Fowler of Calgary and Al (Tiger) Feldman of Auburn, Wash. Moe Norman, Alvie Thompson and Stan Homenuik shared third place with 71s.

Five golfers were tied at 72, including defending champion Bob Duden of Portland and former Victorian Dick Munn.

The opening round was highlighted by a hole-in-one by Bob Young of Toronto. He scored his ace on the 200-yard ninth, finishing the front nine in 33. He soared to a 40 on the back side, however, to finish tied with seven others in a group at 73. In the 73 group were Stan Leonard and CPGA champion Wilf Homenuik.

Bodien Manager At Racquets Club

H. E. (Joe) Bodien has been appointed the new manager of the Victoria Racquets Club.

The choice of the former air force wing commander was announced Friday by club president Kemble Greenwood.

Bodien, who retired in Victoria last October, brings a wealth of experience in management, supervision, and sporting activities into his new role as overall manager and supervisor of the club, said Dr. Greenwood.

CO-ORDINATOR

One of the new manager's main early efforts will be to co-ordinate the membership drive for the new facilities planned by the club.

The club hopes to sponsor such activities as tennis, badminton, squash, swiming, figure skating, hockey and curling at its new site on the corner of Ruby and Gordon Head Roads, just across from the new stadium to be built at the University of Victoria.

Construction of the new club is expected to start within two or three weeks and should be completed before the end of the year. In the meantime, the club will continue to operate at its Fort Street location until fall.

Today's scheduled Senior Amateur Baseball League double-header between Chemainus and Rawlings at Hampton Park has been postponed.

Chemainus is unable to field a team. However, Rawlings are still expected to travel to Chemainus for a double-header there Sunday and Courtenay will play a pair of games against Kings at Hampton Park on Sunday starting at 1:30.

Hot Stretch Doing Bit To Keep Giants Rolling

By UP International

The San Francisco Giants are s-t-r-e-t-c-h-i-n-g their National League lead behind the booming bat of Willie McCovey.

The six-foot-four McCovey, who has earned the nickname "Stretch" for the reach he displays picking off errant tosses from the Giant infielders, has been pure poison to rivals for the last month while pounding out 11 homers.

McCovey's white-hot bat dealt the fatal blow to the Dodgers Friday night when his 14th homer of the season, off loser Don Sutton, scored two mates ahead of him and handed Los Angeles a 4-1 setback.

EIGHTH VICTORY

They lead Pittsburgh Pirates by 3½ games.

Elsewhere in the senior circuit, Pittsburgh plastered Atlanta 4-2, Philadelphia rallied to beat St. Louis 6-5, and New York Mets took two from Cincinnati, 6-5 and 2-1. Houston and Chicago were idle.

In the American League, Baltimore bested Boston 5-3, Washington edged Cleveland 5-4 in 11 innings, New York Yankees trimmed Detroit 5-2, California clipped Kansas City 4-2, and Chicago White Sox shaded Minnesota 3-1.

The only run Perry permitted came in the fifth inning when Los Angeles tied the score on back to back singles by Jim Lefebvre and John Roseboro.

ALOU HOT

Pittsburgh's Matty Alou stroked four hits and drove in a run while brother Felipe hit his 15th homer of the year in a losing cause for Atlanta.

Eddie Bressoud helped the Mets win the second game with a two-run single and he slammed a three-run homer in the opener.

Graveney Sparks England's Rally

Graveney scored 65, and with 25-year-old Yorkshireman Geoff Boycott put on 115 for the second wicket as England ended the day with 145 for 2—only 124 runs behind the West Indies' first innings score of 269.

Earlier, Lancashire pace bowler Ken Higgs snuffed out the West Indies' batting resistance when he took three wickets for 11 runs. In the innings as a whole he claimed six wickets for 91 runs — a splendid performance on a pitch which gave him little help.

The West Indies batsmen went from 247 for 6 at lunch to 269 all out 40 minutes later.

Oxford University 102; Northamptonshire 103 for 6. (Match abandoned, rain.)

Surrey 302; Cambridge University 124 and 114. (Surrey won by an inning and 64 runs)

Senior Golf Buttons Shift to Gorge Vale

Gorge Vale partners, Moke Morgan and Clare Mitchell, collected the city senior golf buttons by defeating Victoria Golf Club holders, Pete McIntyre and John Sturdy, on the 18th hole at Colwood.

Next challengers will be the Gorge pair of Ray Spouse and Jack Brown.

Whitehouse Returning

REGINA (CP) — Reg Whitehouse, an offensive tackle who has played more games in the Canadian Football League than any other active performer, will try to lengthen his record with Saskatchewan Roughriders during the 1966 season. The Western Conference club announced the signing of the veteran Canadian in addition to Galen Wahlmeier.

Saanich Hockey Association Formed

A new hockey association is stick-handling into the district sports picture.

Formation of the Saanich Minor Hockey Association was announced Friday by Keith Lawrence, the group's first president.

And excuse them for back-checking, but the SMHA throws its first body-check at the Greater Victoria Association.

Earlier this week, the GVMHA went on record as saying it favored two not-too-elaborate rinks in Saanich rather than one expensive complex.

Saanich, you see, is thinking of building . . .

"We don't want to get into any argument," said Lawrence, "but our association doesn't agree with the Victoria Minor Hockey Association. We feel our chances for another rink in the district are better if we start with one.

"Even though we would like to think otherwise, minor hockey represents only a small majority of the public. And the public, which has to decide at the polls, might not be receptive to the idea of two rinks."

"Because we are affected directly, our association has put a great deal of thought and effort into what might best suit Saanich as a whole.

"From our many and lengthy meetings, discussions with a great many Saanich residents, and most important from an economical point of view, our answer has always been the same: Saanich needs one centrally - located sports centre."

The Saanich association, says Lawrence, was formed "with the realization that Saanich will have ice in the near future."

The Saanich association will make its first official bow into district sports at a luncheon on June 30. Guests at the affair, to be held at the Red Lion Inn, will include Reeve Hugh Curtis, Councillor Ed Lum, Buck Houle, Andy Hebenton, Ivan Temple, Joe Iannarelli and Jack Morgan.

Saanich residents interested in attending the luncheon are asked to telephone Lawrence (386-7581) for tickets.

Five Tied for Top In Par Competition

'RUINS TEMPO'

Speed Tactics Irk Nicklaus

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — An outraged Jack Nicklaus accused the U.S. Golf Association of ruining the tempo of his game with "speed-up policemen hanging around my neck."

"I have seldom gotten as angry as I did out there," Nicklaus fumed after taking a 71 Friday for a 142 total after two rounds of the U.S. open golf tournament at the Olympic Club.

The crux of the problem is an order from the USGA to speed up play. They instituted local option rules, requiring a golfer to putt out continuously and allowing him to clean and mark his ball only once.

But that wasn't Nicklaus' complaint.

"One of their officials came up to us and told us we were playing too slow and that we'd have to increase our speed," he said.

"If there was an official there," said Joe Dey, USGA executive director, "Nicklaus brought it on himself by slow play."

SLOW ROUND

Nicklaus, who played with Bruce Devlin and Tony Lema, said it took him four hours and 22 minutes to play the round.

"I'll admit we're not the quickest players on the tour," Nicklaus said. "But when you speed up, you ruin your tempo, and, in the long run, you play slower."

Nicklaus, the tournament favorite, said he was warned about slow play only once.

Skillings Hits Final With Sharp Display

Roger Skillings reached the final of the Victoria Racquet Club men's singles tennis championship Friday with an impressive 6-2, 6-0 performance against veteran Gordon Hartley.

Skillings, the youthful under-16 Canadian champion, was to meet Ray Aldeguer for the club championship today.

Roger and his brother Pat had to pull out their best shots in their final two sets to beat Chris Robbins and Donnie Marnell in a doubles' semifinal, 4-6, 6-1, 6-3.

Diana Lawrence reached the final in the ladies' singles with a 4-6, 6-2, 6-4 victory over Bernice Parrish. She faced Nancy Hill in the final.

Summer Hockey Had to Happen!

Perhaps it was bound to happen.

With expanded schedules and lengthy playoffs, the ice hockey trend has been toward warmer weather and it seemed only a matter of time until the sport invaded the summer.

Now it's happened.

Esquimalt Sport Centre officials have announced they will launch a summer hockey league this year to keep their ice surface busier than usual.

Named the Summer Commercial Hockey League, the new new shinny circuit will run through July, August and September. Plans are for doubleheaders on Tuesday nights and for top teams at the end of a 12-game schedule to meet in a best-of-three playoff for the league crown.

Officials hope to have clubs from up-Island points competing with Victoria teams and invite interested players to contact the Sports Centre office.

HOCKEY SCHOOL FULL

Returning to Esquimalt Ice for another season are a pair of popular skating schools — the summer hockey school and the summer figure-skating school.

The hockey school, now in its fifth year, is scheduled for three weeks from August 15th to September 3rd. The school has reached its limit for the usual two weeks with a total of 180 boys registered. A third week has been added in order to look after the overflow.

The school again is under the direction of head coach Andy Hebenton along with Gary Schall, a Montreal affiliate who scored 71 goals for Muskegon in the International League last year. They are supported by coaches Art Burton and Don White of Esquimalt, Don Reed, Ernie Jackson and Dave Halme of Victoria.

Terry Tobacco, a physical education instructor, will also assist at the school which will include boys from Seattle, Portland and Berkeley, California, for the first time.

Persons seeking additional information on registration for the week of August 15th should contact school director Joe Iannarelli at 386-3261.

CHAMPIONSHIP MEET

The sixth annual summer figure skating school, scheduled for July 3rd to August 20th, is expected to have one of its best seasons with 40 skaters already registered.

The course will be run by co-directors, professional James Macaulay and Guy Nick. They will be assisted by Sandra Couch and Mrs. Bob Barlow.

Highlight of the school once again will be the B.C. invitational skating and dance championships (July 30-31), the largest competition of its kind in North America. Over 200 skaters are expected to compete.

GARY PLAYER'S GOLF CLASS:

BEFORE WINNING THE BRITISH OPEN AT MUIRFIELD IN 1959 YOU PRACTISED HITTING SHOTS OFF THE BEACH, GARY. WAS THIS BUNKER PRACTICE?
NO, TOM, I HIT FULL IRON SHOTS OFF THE SAND TO ENSURE I WASN'T HITTING BEHIND THE BALL. THAT'S ONE OF THE WORST FAULTS IN GOLF
THE BEACH SAND IS VERY GOOD FOR TESTING THIS BECAUSE YOU'VE JUST GOT TO HIT THE BALL FIRST. IF YOU HIT BEHIND THE BALL IT WON'T GO ANYWHERE!
WHEN NO BEACH IS AVAILABLE I ADVISE PEOPLE TO PRACTISE HITTING FULL 7-IRON SHOTS OUT OF BUNKERS
THIS IS THE GREATEST TRAINING THERE IS! IT IS SOMETHING THAT WILL BE DONE A LOT IN THE FUTURE, AND IS WHY GOLF IS GOING TO GET BETTER AND BETTER!

PNGA TOURNAMENT

Don't Delay, Ladies; Entry Deadline Near

The ladies are more reluctant than the men to chase prizes in the annual Pacific Northwest Golf Association championships.

Male swingers were quick to fill the entry limit of 208 for their title race at the Royal Colwood course, July 4 to July 9.

There has been less eagerness exhibited by the ladies. Today there were about 30 names short of the entry quota of 176 for their championship chase on the Uplands fairways.

Tourney officials are hoping Vancouver Island players will boost the distaff entry to the top. Entries are due to close Monday, but it is possible the deadline will be extended if the limit is not reached.

36-HOLE QUALIFYING

Entry forms are available at Victoria clubs. In each event, contestants will play two 18-hole qualifying rounds and continue at match-play in championship and flight competition.

All entrants are assured of four days of play as well as practice rounds.

The PNGA invasion will be the start of a furious fairway fortnight in Victoria.

Victoria Golf Club will be the site of the B.C. women's championship tourney, July 16-22.

During the same week, southpaws will move in for the U.S. national lefthanders' tournament, being held for the first time outside the United States. The lefties will do their swinging at Uplands and Colwood.

Farmers Looking For Replacements

The Vancouver Island Juvenile League team will hold an organizational meeting Sunday in the Oak Bay Scout Hall, 1703 Monterey Avenue, starting 8 p.m.

Boys between 16 and 19 interested in playing for Farmers are invited to turn out.

Triples' Prize To Vic West

The draw:

Three Sharing Softball's Lead

Rick Rawnsley's shutout twirling and Ken Cunningham's bat laced three teams into one, tight pace-setting pack Friday.

Rawnsley checked in with a five-hitter and Cunningham's two-run homer looked after the scoring as Red Lions clipped Carlings 2-0 in a Senior Men's Softball League game at Heywood Avenue Park.

Carlings have a three-game exhibition series with Seattle Driscolls this weekend. They meet tonight at 6:30 and play two games Sunday, at 2 and 4 p.m.

Arthur Mayse

An hour or two after dark on Thursday evening, I arrived home from the Cowichan in borrowed pants and a sweater not my own.

Some wives would have exclaimed, 'You fell in the river!', but my dear one merely greeted a familiar situation with a casual question.

"Where," she asked, "did you fall in this time?"

"Oh, near Skutz Falls," I said. "Did you happen to save me some dinner?"

This mutual lack of concern stemmed from two facts with which she and I have grown familiar through the years. One is that trout fishermen, by the very nature of their sport, risk an occasional wetting.

The second is that some anglers go ears over a teacup into stream or river with monotonous frequency.

★

To this damp company I belong. Campbell River has received me, also the Oyster, both Qualicums, and numerous humbler creeks including Goldstream. I know the taste of New York State's Beaverkill, and have filled my pockets in the Little Missouri.

Why it should befall so, I can only guess. All I know for sure is that if it's deep enough to cover a trout's back fin, I will presently be wringing it out of my shirt.

That little eccentricity makes fishing in my company an interesting and often hilarious business.

My wife discovered this when I first ushered her into an up-Island waterbrook and warned her against wading too deep.

Seconds later, I was wringing out my hat, a couple of guys on the highway bridge were braying like donkies, and every trout in the vicinity had scurried for cover.

"You made such a splash!" said my bride, who looked suspiciously pink around the ears.

"Next time," I told her, "maybe I can just kind of ease in."

And so I did, before the week was over, stepping into a hole that certainly hadn't been in that spot the day before.

On various jaunts and in different streams, I have sought to stay dry by shoeing my hoofs with felt—which practically guarantees any normal angler sure footing—or with hobnails, caulks or chain-link sandals.

All were an improvement on the cleated rubber sole most waders or hip-boots come equipped with; but I still managed to take a dunking.

Once in the all but slip-proof Credit River of South Ontario, I got my feet tangled in a metal barrel hoop which some yahoo had tossed off the bank.

That, I'm told, was a truly sensational dive. First a forward step, then backward, then an arm-flailing pirouet.

There are in this fisherman's town two brothers of the angle waiting vulture-like for me to reveal precisely what happened Thursday night. I'd like to, especially since one loaned me the pants and the other the sweater, but it's all kind of vague.

One moment I was advancing eagerly into the river for a try at Old Bill, a resident brown trout so big you wouldn't believe it. The next, I was floundering in three feet of water, hoping Old Bill wouldn't rush in and bite my arm off.

Next time out, I will be equipped with felt soles, stout wading staff, and any other precautionary devices that come to mind.

But I know already what will happen.

The streambed will suddenly and treacherously sprout a boulder where none should be.

Or the riverside branch by which I steady myself will for no logical reason break.

One way or another, I am going to wind up with water in my eyes, and in my ears the hyena laughter of the fellows who come home dry!

YO-HO-HO and a bottle of soda pop, shout pint-sized pirates on Esquimalt's good ship The Buccaneer which sailed through Buccaneer Day parade this morning with more than 50 other entries. Waving wooden cutlasses and with water-pistols no doubt cunningly concealed are (from left, at rear) Ricky Hardy, Robert and Richard Doll, (front) Michael Briggs and Allan Cooper. The make-believe ruffians rode the float through drizzle which came on just in time for parade. (Bill Halkett.)

JUST A MOUTHFUL of pancakes, well-laced with butter and syrup, start the day off for four-year-old Janine Bryant, given a helping hand here by her father, Reeve Ray Bryant at Esquimalt Buccaneer Day celebrations. Janine was one of several hundred at Lions' Pancake Breakfast. Watching are Janine's grandparents, Coun. James Bryant and Mrs. Bryant. Lions Ken Hill and Al Smith look on.

'WANTED TO FRIGHTEN THEM'

Judge Reverses Plan To Interdict Indians

By BOB DONAHUE

Tahsis Magistrate H. A. Tasker has reversed his decision to interdict the Nootka Indians at Friendly Cove on northern Vancouver Island.

He said this morning in a telephone interview that he now does not plan to interdict one Indian on the reserve.

"I only wanted to frighten them," he said.

When asked if he had received any outside direction, perhaps from the provincial attorney-general's department, he said:

"I have no comment to make. Any further information will have to come from Dr. Gilbert Kennedy, the deputy attorney-general."

Dr. Kennedy denied there has ever been any direct interference by the department in connection with Magistrate Tasker's plan, although he said it was discussed at a recent magistrate's conference in Campbell River.

The deputy attorney-general said he has known for some time that Magistrate Tasker did not intend to interdict the Indians.

Magistrate Tasker first publicly announced his intention to interdict every adult in the 216-member band on April 19.

●

He had made the statement originally at a previous inquest into the death of a Friendly Cove baby who had burned to death in a house on the reserve in the aftermath of a drinking party.

Magistrate Tasker said alcohol had been involved in a series of serious crimes on the reserve during the past year.

It was also attributed to several drownings from Indian fishing boats.

Magistrate Tasker said today his plan to frighten the Indians into "pulling up their socks" was working well until the press got hold of it.

"After that all I got was a lot of abuse and unnecessary telephone calls."

He said he felt he has achieved something in that the federal government has now appointed a community development officer to look after the Friendly Cove Indians.

"There is a lot less drinking going on at the reserve now that there was before," he said.

"But maybe its only because the fishing season is in progress.

"I don't know what will happen when the fishermen go back to the reserve and have nothing to do.

"Perhaps they'll drink."

Just a Sniff Before the Whiff

By DON VIPOND

Phew!

To get wind of it, wrinkle your nose.

That means shaving lotions—before and after—special men's soaps, sun tan lotions, deodorants and colognes.

"They're really not shy anymore," says pert Ann Barker, who has watched the men react to the scented revolution from behind one of the city's best department store display counters.

Ranged on this counter are cologne bottles which let the passerby spray and sniff. All the samples are well used.

"They stop and try them all," says Ann. "Mostly it's the teen-agers but plenty of the older fellows too. And they all have their favorites."

INVITING

Royal Lyme—smells good enough to drink.

Bermuda Spice—spicy, naturally.

Then there's 007 and Brute. Sort of hard to put them into words. Try thinking of James Bond trapped in a perfume factory.

Sales are booming, she says, and with most of the top line colognes selling at about $1 an ounce, this has got to mean buyers are serious.

What with Father's Day coming up Sunday, the boom in men's grooming products means wives can have a ball choosing that new aroma for their husbands.

Getting father to use the stuff, well, that's another question.

Ask The Times

Q. Was there a life model for the Christopher Robin of A. A. Milne's Winnie the Pooh series? P.O.

A. Christopher Robin was in fact Milne's son, Christopher Robin Milne, who was five years old when the first book appeared.

Q. Is it an offence to cut down or pick dogwood in this province? I.O.D.

A. It most certainly is an offence, says the attorney-general's department. The maximum fine for picking, cutting down or destroying western flowering dogwood on Crown or municipal land is $25.

Course Offered

Registration time is 8:30 a.m.

Junior Warden N.S.-Bound

Donald St. Pierre, 18, of 940 Falmouth Road, has been named B.C. representative on a Canada-wide exchange program by the Canadian Forestry Association of B.C.

The Saanich junior forest warden will leave July 3 to attend a summer camp near Liverpool, N.S.

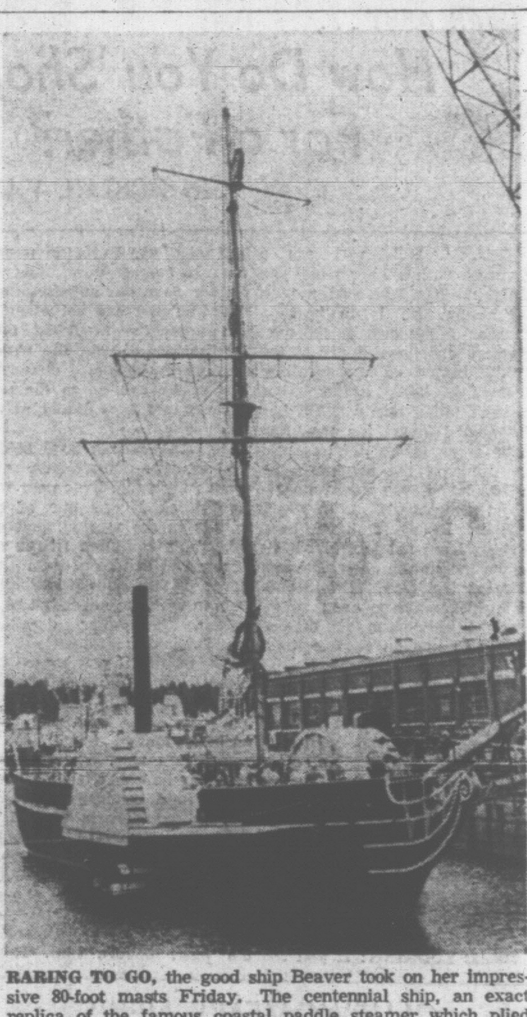
Donor of the scholarship is the Victoria Hoo-Hoo Club.



RARING TO GO, the good ship Beaver took on her impressive 80-foot masts Friday. The centennial ship, an exact replica of the famous coastal paddle steamer which plied local waters in the 1800s, will tour west coast ports this fall as part of B.C.'s centennial celebrations. A miniature floating museum, the Beaver will begin her tour in August. Here, her foremast is stepped at HMC Dockyard's drydock while members of B.C. Centennial Committee and navy personnel look on. An identical mast was stepped on her aft deck. Centennial medallion coins were placed at the bases of the masts.

Swinging Aldermen Eyed . . . At End of a Rope!

By TERRY IZZARD

The city fathers put their heads in a noose Friday when they turned down a suggestion to hold rock-'n'-roll dances in Centennial Square.

He disagreed with the recreation and community services committee which suggested the dances would attract "young hoods".

"I can't see it happening at a public dance of this nature," said 19-year-old Ray. "We've never had any trouble at other outdoor shows."

He shot down Mayor A. W. Toone's idea to hold teen-age hootenannys.

Bill Pick, 19, who plays organ for a group called the Take Four, supported Ald. Mike Griffin who suggested the young bands be allowed to play for a probationary period.

"I think it's unfair to turn the idea down flat," said Bill. "They're not giving the young people a chance. It could be a good deal."

The man who first thought of the idea, local showman and Greater Victoria centennial co-ordinator, Jerry Gosley, wasn't at all surprised at the committee's decision.

He said: "I kind of expected this reaction. A few rowdies can cause a lot of trouble but it would have been nice to give the youngsters a try.

"On the other hand I'd hate to start a riot in Centennial Square."

The dances were to have been held once a week between 7:30 and 9 p.m.

Conventional dances begin June 29 and will be held each Wednesday through July and August.

SCHOOL TENDER UNDER ESTIMATE

G. H. Wheaton Ltd. was low bidder on the proposed vocational school addition to Oak Bay Senior Secondary School.

The firm's tender was $373,581, $13,000 less than the Greater Victoria School Board's estimate, said a board spokesman.

Other tenders opened Friday were Bird Construction Ltd., $411,713; Farmer Construction Ltd., $383,970; R. A. Hall Ltd., $382,450.

All five Victoria region senior secondary schools are to have vocational facilities.

Construction has begun at three schools. Bids on the addition to Esquimalt Senior Secondary school have not yet been called.

IN STEP WITH STYLE By Nona Damaske

Impressions of Berlin

Recently returned from an overseas tour with other members of the Canadian Women's Press Club, Times' fashion editor Nona Damaske tells of her visit to Berlin.

Did you ever have an experience that was so unbelievable that it seemed like a dream?

The bus was roomy and we sat individually with our cameras, flightbags and other odds and ends beside us. It was late afternoon of a lovely sunny day and we had been driving for a couple of hours through lush green countryside.

Damaske

That noon we were graciously wined and dined in Potsdam at the beautiful Cecilienhof Castle (signing place of the Potsdam agreement in 1945). We all knew we were to cross the Berlin Wall at Checkpoint Charlie but personally I felt much of what I had heard was quite possibly Hollywood inspired.

Our flight from Munich had landed at Tempelhof airport in West Germany so we had already crossed the wall from West to East to spend the night in the German Democratic Republic.

It had all been friendly and so simple ... we had even waved at guards in the high towers on the eastern side ... they returned our salutations although binoculars were trained on us all the time we were in view.

As we joked about being interrogated and interned, the bus came to a stop beside a long line of passenger cars. The door opened to admit a heavily-built, ruggedly handsome, armed guard and instead of the smiling welcome, to which we had now become accustomed, we were greeted by one, harsh, spat-out word — pasports.

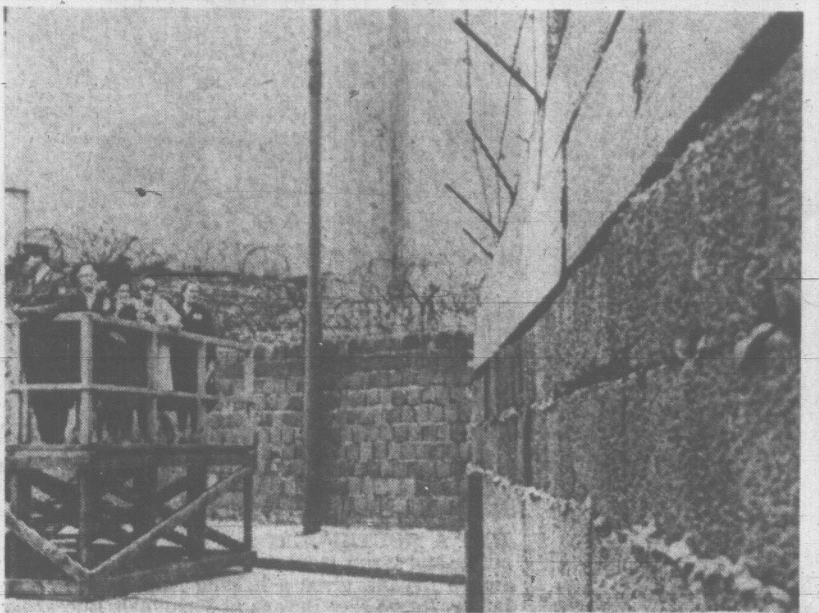
Our passports, which at this moment suddenly became the most valuable possession in the world, were scrutinized with the utmost care. From passport picture to live subject, steely eyes weighed the resemblance. Rita Greer Allen, of CBC Toronto, had relaxed that day by letting her long blonde hair drift around her shoulders. In the passport likeness her hair appeared darker and was neatly done into a French twist ... believe it or not Rita had to pile her hair high on her head to achieve some similarity to her photo!

Passports and visa accompanied "Herr Storm Trooper to a nearby office. Another guard inspected the bus interior but did not open our luggage. What you purchase in East Berlin is of no concern ... there is literally nothing to buy.

We were not allowed to leave the bus and this was one of the two places where picture taking was "verboten" .... the other was in the Moscow airport.

I was fascinated to watch a long low mirror being rolled beneath the bus ... apparently we had no hitchhikers!

Beside my window, civilian cars were being inspected from stem to stern. Engine hoods and trunk lids were up ... baggage opened and the upholstery was being prodded by a long, sharpened metal piercing instrument. I almost pinched myself to be sure I was not dreaming ... this melodrama must have an Alfred Hitchcock punch line. It almost did ... two of our group had American passports and this did not reconcile with the information the border guards had previously received that 20 Canadian journalists would be passing through Checkpoint Charlie.



A young West Berlin guard shares his observation platform with Margaret Zieman and Marjorie Freeman Campbell of Toronto, Nona Damaske, Victoria, and Winnifred Stokes Hill, Niagara Falls. Friendly and willing to pose for pictures, this guard in no way prepared us for the grim-faced, no-nonsense, jack-booted men we encountered the next day as we crossed Checkpoint Charlie from East to West.

This was of course "all German" to us, until some miles later when our guide explained the fuss.

It did happen, and I was there but you know I still think there should have been a beret-topped director shouting "Camera, lights, action."

In West Germany we were welcomed to the impressive Berlin Hilton by Garin Reich, public relations director, whose brother, Dr. Stephen A. Ryce, is a professor at the University of Victoria. Due to my scrawly longhand there was an error in names of Victorians I met at the Slavija Hotel in Belgrade. It was Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ruttan rather than Putton.

DEAR ABBY ...

How Do You 'Shop' For a Father?

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am a divorcee with a 13-year-old son. This lad has delivered me an ultimatum. He is to have a "father' of his own by the next Fathers and Sons dinner at the "Y." I have tried to assure him that I've been looking, but haven't found one yet. He has threatened to get his own, and believe me, Abby, if you could see some of the playmates he brings home, you would understand my concern.

When I say I have been looking I am not joking. I have joined the church choir, Parents Without Partners, Girl Scouts (leader), and have even volunteered to chaperone teen dances hoping to find an eligible male my age.

I have even gone to some of the better bars and lounges thinking I might meet a nice, lonesome guy who wants a ready-made family. No dice. There is one young man, however. He's my age. He doesn't drink and doesn't date. (He's shy.) I think I can wrangle a date with him. Should I go after him (subtly) or should I be honest and tell him what I have in mind for him?

LOOKING

DEAR LOOKING: If you tell him what you have "in mind," you are out of yours. Now you deliver your son an ultimatum. Tell him you are not about to sit across the breakfast table for the rest of your life with a hastily grabbed-off character just so he can go to the next Fathers and Sons dinner at the "Y."

DEAR ABBY: A good-looking woman, who doesn't have such a hot reputation, lives near me. Last week I saw one of my friends in the market, and she said, "I saw Milton (that's my husband) driving down the street with Bobbi (that's the woman with the not-so-hot reputation) the other day." I laughed it off.

When Milton got home that night I asked him how come he was riding around with Bobbi in his car. He said she was walking toward home, so he gave her a ride. When I asked him why he didn't tell me about it, he said he forgot. Do you think he could really forget? Or should I check with Bobbi to see what her story is?

SMELLING A RAT

DEAR SMELLING: Don't check with Bobbi. If your husband has behaved himself in the past, believe him. If he hasn't, believe him anyway. A man who is playing games with a woman of not-so-hot reputation is not about to parade her around in broad daylight.

DEAR ABBY: I am 19, Charlie is 21, and we have been married for 7 months. Last night Charlie's mother called us long distance and asked us if we could take her 13-year-old daughter off her hands and try to straighten her out. She says the girl is so wild and boy-crazy she can't handle her.

My mother-in-law has been married and divorced four times, and she isn't even 40 yet. I feel sorry for her, but I don't know how we can take the girl. Both Charlie and I work all day and we're living in a small apartment with only one bed. I hate to refuse to help my mother-in-law, but how can we tell her we just can't do it?

SOFT-HEARTED

DEAR SOFT: Have Charlie tell his mother that you are in no position to give the girl the time and attention required to "straighten her out." Suggest that she seek help from her local guidance clinic or Family Service association. The girl obviously needs professional counseling.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "WISHING:" Benjamin Franklin once said, "If a man could have half his wishes, he would double his troubles." (No wonder someone told him to go fly a kite.)

Practising Puts Fun Into Slippery Sport

By PENNY SAVER

The man who first slipped on the banana peel surely must have inspired one of the nation's most exciting water sports for youngsters. Anyone, I suppose, could have fun slipping on a banana peel if one could control the direction of the skid, as well as balance. All you have to do, really, is substitute the peel for a thin board, reasonably wet, and you have the same thing. Both are pretty slippery situations to find yourself in, but the latter just takes practice to control.

The sport is skimming, a take-off on surfing for youngsters who don't quite measure up to the size of a surf board. Skim boards only require water one inch deep to glide along. To get the most out of this sport, the board is placed in the water, and the skimmer races towards it, jumps on it, and away he goes. My efforts at this game are more of a big splash than anything else.

Skim boards made of fibreglass sell for $16.95. They come in every color, so have each member of your family pick his favorite color and there will be no battles over board identity.

Just thinking of swimming, or getting wet in our surrounding waters, makes my warm blood turn cold. When the owner of this shop told me of all the fun he has in mid-winter, in the ocean yet, I almost froze in my tracks. His secret is a suit made of synthetic sponge material. These warm, nylon-lined suits are built for safety, as they keep you above water all the time. They are so buoyant that one must wear weights in order to dive in them.

He pointed out that with one of these suits, a non-swimmer can enjoy such sports as water skiing without worrying about falling. The suit will keep you above the water if you do. They also protect smarting from the impact of the dunking.

These suits range in price from $29.50 to $35, designed for both men and women. There are different styles to choose from, and they come with yellow or blue decoration on the front.

For the utmost in water safety and a fun-packed summer, give Penny a call at 382-3131. She'll tell you where she found these.

Persuade Permanent Wave with Vitamin A

MARGO BEAUTY STUDIO, who introduced to Victoria the REDKEN SCIENTIFIC METHOD OF HAIRDRESSING, now proudly presents PERSUADE with Vitamin A. This wonderful now permanent wave was formulated by REDKEN LABORATORIES after independent Bio-Chemists had reported their findings on the action of Vitamin A on the hair. REDKEN was the first to market a Permanent Wave containing 15% protein by weight. And now REDKEN is the first to formulate a Permanent Wave containing Vitamin A.

PERSUADE was tested all across North America by members of REDKEN'S HAIR RESEARCH DIVISION, who now number more than nineteen thousand. The reports received by REDKEN were amazing. "PERSUADE causes less damage to the hair than any other acid-type permanent wave tested." By adding natural Vitamin A, REDKEN was able to reduce the amount of acid, and still have a permanent wave that processes quickly, causes less swelling of the hair shaft, and leaves the hair with beautiful, natural looking waves.

MARGO BEAUTY STUDIO predicts that within a very short time, PERSUADE with Vitamin A will be the most popular permanent wave in Beauty Salons across Canada.

Make an appointment now for your PERSUADE Permanent Wave at the MARGO BEAUTY STUDIO most convenient for you.

How-Ford Vows Exchanged Today At Ceremony in Oak Bay Church

Mr. and Mrs. Harry How travelled from their home in Cooksville, Ont., to attend the wedding, this afternoon, of Celia (Sally) Marjorie Ford and their son, Dr. Richard Keith How. Also from Cooksville was the groom's brother, Mr. Paul How.

Canon Hywel Jones officiated at the ceremony in St. Mary's Anglican Church. Gladioli in white and primrose tones decorated the altar and the chancel steps. Charles Palmer was organist.

The bride's ensemble was an ivory tapestry brocaded suit. The caped jacket which featured three-quarter-length sleeves, was trimmed with white summer fox. Her headpiece was a pill box hat of brocade with a circlet candlelight veil. She carried a cascade bouquet of yellow roses and stephanotis. Mr. Ford gave his daughter in marriage.

The bride's only attendant was her sister, Mrs. Ellery Littleton. Her outfit was a suit in primrose yellow tones, with matching hat trimmed with tulle. Deep blue cornflowers and white stephanotis were in her bouquet.

Paul How was best man, and guests were ushered by David Stocks and Timothy Hackett.

Arrangements of shasta daisies, antirrhinums and roses decorated the home of the bride's parents for the reception which followed. The three-tier wedding cake was topped with a silver loving cup, filled with cornflowers and orange blossoms. Arnold Edmonds proposed the toast to the bride.

Following their honeymoon, Dr. and Mrs. How will motor to Toronto where they will make their home.

Doing The Town

with DOROTHY FRASER

First of the new fall coats by Rodex . . .

"Now don't start writing about fall fashions until we've seen a bit of summer," certain of our friends have been warning us . . . but news of the new fall coats by Rodex of London . . . which they've just unpacked at Wilson's . . . is too good to keep to ourselves . . . (besides which, we don't expect they'll be around too long once our visitors get a good look!) . . . These tweed and lambswool coats, tailored on classic lines, simply exude quality and fashion rightness . . . If you buy one, you'll wear it for years . . . for town and country and travel . . . in fair weather and foul . . . and never cease to love it! . . . One is a deep coral tweed, very feminine and pretty . . . another tweed combines avocado with coral . . . There's a muted charcoal and violet Scottish lambswool . . . and an Irish tweed blending pale blue, avocado, yellow and gold . . . this one with high balmacan collar . . . A lovely beige tweed has a velvet collar, and you get a piece of the coat fabric with it so you can have an extra self-collar made up if you like . . . These are just the first of the Rodex coats for fall . . . others are expected any day . . . so if you hanker for a really good classic overcoat, we recommend you see the new Rodex coats soon at . . . W & J Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St., 383-7177.

For summer evenings: 2-piece pyjamas of white cotton lace over pink crepe . . . big blowy ruffles around the neck and ankles.

We adore scarves but find most of them too bulky for our particular type of neck . . . so were naturally delighted with the new ascots to be found at Madam and Eve . . . They're especially made by a Vancouver woman . . . of crisp taffeta sewn in diagonal bands of different shades blended with the eye of an artist . . . but the big thing is that they're slim and neat . . . just the right size to tuck into the neck of a dress or suit . . . Lovely colors, and only $2.50 . . . M and E have a very striking imported cotton bikini . . . tiny yellow flowers on a red ground, eyelet embroidery trim . . . and to top it, a matching long sleeved beach shift . . . whistle bait, if ever we saw it! . . . Some new Polly Peck dresses are also brightening up the shop . . . though not for long, because these charmers are snapped up with alacrity by gals who've done their fashion homework . . . A tailored navy chiffon has a white scalloped edged panel down the front . . . demure white collar. All except the sleeves completely backed with taffeta . . . Horizontal bands of white, camel and brown linen are used for a smart dress with the new cut-in armhole . . . There's a pink denim "baby doll" dress with lace trimmed sleeves and neckline . . . a real cutie pie! . . . Madam and Eve Shop, Trounce Alley, 383-7177.

White punctuation marks . . .

White shoes seem to be the perfect accent for so many of summer's clothes . . . in fact, even outfits which aren't particularly summery can be made to seem so when punctuated with white footwear . . . This past week we saw some particularly nice white shoes at Munday's . . . those popular Joyce shoes which are so comfortable and inexpensive . . . Quartermoon is a dressy smooth calf pump with slender illusion heel . . . Folk Song, in sweet kid, has a little shaped heel, open sides and back, and prettily bowed strap over the instep . . . Soft Fold, another dainty pump in smooth calf, has roll top edge, slim, lowish heel . . . State Fair and Con Brio have medium stacked heels . . . the former in sweet kid or white patent with perforated trim . . . the latter, same style but with a strap . . . And if you prefer real low heels, there's Casa Blanca, a smart, T-strap . . . and Derby Winner, well-fitting high-vamp pump . . . Easy Living and Double Time have hard-wearing composition ripple soles . . . Most of these shoes come in sizes 4A to B and 5½ to 11 . . . priced at $15.95 . . . We spotted a dressy new spectator sling pump in black patent and white as well as navy and white . . . illusion heel, soft bow trim . . . by Emile Gagnon, and priced at $17.95 . . . Munday's, 1203 Douglas Street, EV 3-2211.

Summer's the best time to buy furs . . .

What's warm as toast, wears like iron, is very light in weight—and fit for a queen? . . . Mink, that's what! Canada's most glamorous product! . . . But buying a mink coat, or jacket, or stole is something like buying a diamond . . . Few of us can tell the difference between a good one and the not-so-good ones . . . it takes the trained eye of an expert . . . That's why it's so important to buy mink from a furrier whose judgement and reputation are absolutely trustworthy . . . like Scuby Furs . . . whose collection of mink coats and jackets and stoles is at its very best right now . . . Mr. Scuby brought some beautiful new pieces back from a recent buying trip East . . . the finest Canada Majestic Mink, fashioned in the very latest styles . . . (We admired the small collars, set-on cuffs and sleek, pared-down look of so many of the new coats and jackets!) . . . We also admired the gorgeous Lammorie broadtail and sheered beaver jackets . . . wonderfully soft and luxurious with their mink collars . . . Summer is the very best time of the year to buy furs because the selection is so comprehensive . . . and prices are generally lower than they'll be later on . . . So if you're thinking of a fur of any description, go have a nice leisurely visit with . . . Scuby Furs Ltd., 911 Government St., 385-4361.

Starlet Reveals Secrets of Summertime Fun

Girls, are you ready to face the beach this summer? Is your tummy tucked in, your hair glistening, your skin ready to soak up the sun? This is the first of seven interviews with young Hollywood stars who share their beach-beauty secrets with you.

By BESSIE LITTLE and MARILYN BECK

Can a rather plain girl be beautiful? Can a pint-sized slip of a lass, not endowed with an abundance of curves, look like a knockout in a modified bikini? All the answers are YES if her name is Sally Field, of "Gidget" fame.

"I find it easy to keep in shape during the summer months," she told us. "I just don't think about it. Really, I apply the theory of the power of positive thinking, and keep telling myself that if I think thin I will stay thin. Of course I do manage to keep active all summer long, and I truly believe that if a girl goes all out as I do for stuff like swimming, water skiing and surfing, she'll burn up so many calories that she won't have to worry about dieting.

IGNORES SWEETS

"I do stay away from things like candy and carbonated soft drinks," admits Sally "but only because those foods tend to make my face break out. So maybe that's the secret: I keep my distance from sweets, keep active physically and refuse to worry about diets. I really think the last point is the most important of all.

"Have you ever thought about eating some mad, fattening sweet, then found you're suddenly on an eating binge and gorging yourself on the wrong foods? Well, that's what happens when you start dieting. You begin to think about food so much that it becomes an obsession and sometimes you find that you actually begin eating more than you ever did before.

"I suppose I use the same theory of non-absorption when it comes to my skin and hair, too." Unknowingly, Sally put her finger on her most adorable quality: her non-absorption of self.

"In the summer months, I just wash my hair a lot and apply a conditioner after every washing. At the beginning of the summer I treat myself to a styling that is designed especially for me. I'm not the exotic type and never wear anything just because it's the fad of the moment.

BRAIDS FOR FUN

"Once my hair has been styled by an expert, I take no special pains with it. Usually I just twist it into braids, hold them in place with colored rubber bands, then go on to the business of having fun without worrying about my appearance.

"In the evening, when a special date calls for a little more fancy look, I just undo the braids and brush my hair into a smooth, casual style, straight around my neck with shaggy-type bangs.

"I use the same play-it-casual attitude when it comes to my skin. I never use suntan lotion, just let ole Sol beat down on me full force for that golden tan look I love, the look that lotions and oils often prevent. However, I don't recommend this let-mother-nature-do-it beauty treatment for all girls, especially blondes, with super-sensitive skins. But for me it's part of the healthy, wonderful, natural look of summer.

NATURAL LOOK

"As far as makeup is concerned, I avoid the stuff as much as I can, with the exception of eyeliner and mascara and a light touch of lipstick.

"I play it natural, too, when it comes to nail care, using only clear polish on both my hands and feet. That doesn't mean, though, that I overlook giving myself regular manicures and pedicures. Nothing looks worse on the beach than fingernails and toenails that show you don't really care how you look."

Old-Time Costumes Worn

To the hundreds of guests who crowded the lawns of the Veterans' Hospital, Wednesday afternoon, it was just like taking a look at the past through grandma's old stereoscope.

The theme of the annual garden fete, sponsored by the hospital's Women's Auxiliary was to celebrate the centennial year and auxiliary members went "all out" to help create the illusion of 100 years ago. Their gowns looked as though they'd just stepped out of "Godey's Ladies' Book," the periodical which decreed fashion for North American women during the last century. Wearing outfits be-ruffled and bustled, trimmed with lace and given added interest with hoops, crinolines and pantaloons, it was hard to tell who was having the most fun, the members or the guests!

Everywhere about the grounds, there were stalls to tickle everyone's fancy, from home-baked treats and delicatessen delights featured at the stall convened by Mrs. A. R. Minnis, to the huge variety of books, pocket-size and hard-bound at the booth which Mrs. J. Lewis supervised.

HANDMADE BLOOMS

A table which caught the eye of many a guest and caused them to reach immediately for their pocketbooks was one laden to overflowing with dogwood blossoms, the emblem of British Columbia. Utterly realistic-looking, they represented the product of hundreds of hours work by many of the auxiliary members. Mrs. F. T. S. Sehl and Mrs. L. Mess were in charge.

Those with "green thumbs" had a difficult time choosing from the wealth of plants and beautiful flowers which were sold at a stall supervised by Mrs. W. Chisnall. Other stalls which never lacked for customers were the superfluity booth, convened by Mrs. Harold Russell; and the sewing stall, headed by Mrs. O. L. Pullen.

There was plenty to offer those guests who felt in the mood to tempt Lady Luck. A mystery raffle convened by Miss Jean Roberts stimulated the imagination of many a guest while Mrs. C. R. Fleming and Mrs. P. A. Hole offered a huge hamper of groceries to the person with a lucky ticket.

TEMPTING PRIZE

The thought of winning the exquisite tablecloth at the raffle convened by Mrs. E. Elliott wooed the fancy of many another housewife. Mrs. E. Vant was in charge of the tombola.

Always a welcome stall was one convened by Mrs. F. L. Crofton, who gave eager bargain-seekers a place to "park their parcels" before they moved off in search of other savings.

Accompanying all the shoppers as they moved about the grounds was music by the Royal Canadian Navy's band from the Canadian Forces Base, Esquimalt. Those weary from shopping found tables under the trees to relax and listen to the performance.

Another welcome retreat was the tea area, convened by Mrs. J. K. Murray, Mrs. M. Pilip and Miss Jenny Shypanski. In charge of the head table was Mrs. E. G. Hart, and presiding at refreshment tables were Mrs. A. J. Roberts, Mrs. K. N. Russell, Mrs. D. Kendall, Mrs. R. Bower, Mrs B. O'Reilly, Mrs. A. L. Bonner, Mrs. J. S. Adam and representing the armed forces, Mrs. C. L. Kirby, Mrs. F. C. Frewer and Mrs. R. C. Weston.

Convening the fete, which realized the sum of $2,500, was Mrs. H. E. Vyvyan and her assistant was Mrs. J. K. Murray. Greeting the guests with president Mrs. F. R. Roberts was Mrs. A. W. Toone, who opened the gala event.

Among the special guests who attended were Mrs. W. A. C. Bennett, Mrs. Waldo Skillings, Paul Pelletier, deputy minister for Veterans' Affairs; Canon A. J. Roberts, Lt.-Col. and Mrs. W. Murray, Mrs. Isabel Lindsey, Rev. D. Kendall, Dr. W. L. Coke, and Miss A. J. Puar, who added a bright note of color in her sari of printed mauve silk.

Of Personal Interest

BID BON VOYAGE

Former classmates of Miss Zina Rosso gathered in the Garden Park Court home of Mrs. Michael Green to wish Miss Rosso "bon voyage" at a recent coffee party. A 1963 graduate of St. Ann's Academy and a fourth year student at the University of Victoria, Miss Rosso left, Friday, for a six-week tour of Turkey, Greece and Italy. Others at the party were Mrs. A. Williams, Mrs. W. Atkinson, the Misses Donna Spohn, Fern Auclair, Mary-Lu Moreau, Myra Hall, Brenda Wood, Linda O'Connor, Mary Malenfant, Janet Mander and Eila Connor.

Here From Oregon

Here from Eugene, Ore., to attend the wedding, Friday evening, of Miss Carole Johnson and Mr. John Elliott were Mr. and Mrs. Howard Stenshoel and Dr. and Mrs. Keith Stenshoel. From Vancouver were Mr. and Mrs. John Young, Mr. and Mrs. Ken Bryden, Mr. and Mrs. D. G. Burden, Miss Alison Rice, Mr. Ed Toth and Mr. Dennis Stewart.

Orchids en Corsage

Mrs. Charles Ennals recently gave a shower in her Bermuda Place home in honor of her future sister-in-law, Miss Diana Van Adrichem. On arrival, the bride-to-be was presented with an orchid corsage. Her mother, Mrs. E. Van Adrichem, and the groom-elect's mother, Mrs. C. E. Ennals, received miniature china flowers. A miniature bride and groom, standing under an archway, topped the pink and white "bride's box" which contained the gifts. A pink and white cake, flanked by silver candlebra, centred the refreshment table. Guests included Mrs. H. Boothman, Mrs. S. McPherson, Mrs. W. McPherson, Mrs. C. McPherson, Mrs. P. Duncan, Mrs. D. H. Hill, Mrs. H. G. Hill, Mrs. B. Strom, Mrs. T. G. Griffiths, Mrs. V. Jones, the Misses Shirley, Chrissie, Betty-Jean and Ida McPherson, Linda Ross, Lori Ennals and Linda McBride.

ORGANIZER RECEIVES RECOGNITION

A membership certificate from the Dominion Council, United Empire Loyalists Association, has been presented to Victoria branch vice-president, Mrs. Olive Detlor Wilson. Mrs. Wilson, instrumental in reviving the branch, was also commended by council president E. J. Chard for her work in organizing the chapter as a centennial project.

Lt.-Cmdr. Carl Hortie and Mrs. Hortie, 1619 Wilmot Place, announce the forthcoming marriage of their eldest daughter, Brenda Margaret, to Mr. Richard R. Cooper, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Cooper, 1828 San Juan Avenue. The wedding will take place on Saturday, July 2, at 2:30 p.m. in St. Patrick's Church. Fr. A. E. Leonard will officiate. (Mr. Cooper's photo by Simpson Studio.)

Dainty Lace Accents Gown of Peau D'Ange

A floor-length gown of peau de'ange, enhanced with accents of Alencon lace, was worn by Carole Louise Johnson, Friday evening, when she became the bride of John Anthony Frederick Elliott.

The couturier sheath gown was styled with a lace-trimmed bodice, featuring a sabrina neckline and lily point sleeves. A chapel-length train swept back from the waistline. Lace bordered her fingertip veil of silk illusion net which misted softly from a small pillbox headpiece. Her jewelry was a diamond necklace, the groom's gift, and she carried a white prayer book, topped with an arrangement of gardenias and stephanotis.

Baskets of white gladioli, carnations and Esther Reed daisies decorated St. Mary's Church, Oak Bay, for the candlelit service at which Canon Hywel Jones officiated. The bride is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Roy Arnold Johnson, 3045 Uplands Road, and the groom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Charles Elliott, 2345 Hamiota Street. Dr. Johnson gave his daughter in marriage. During the signing of the register, the boys' choir sang Purcell's "Westminster Abbey."

ALSO IN BLUE

Little Sharon Neilson, Quesnel, wore a similar frock, and carried a colonial bouquet of the same flowers.

A three-tier wedding cake, flanked by silver candelabra, centred the head table at the reception following in the Royal Victoria Yacht Club. Dr. William Trenholme proposed the toast to the bride's happiness and Reginald Stone played music for dancing.

For travelling on a honeymoon trip touring the Gulf Islands on Mr. Elliott's sloop, "Maverick," the bride donned a Nina Ricci original dress suit in white blin and blin. She complemented the ensemble with a sapphire blue brooch and picture hat, and accessories of navy blue.

Lady Laurier Club Holds Successful Coffee Party

The skies were sunny, the wind warm and the atmosphere friendly. Add to these ingredients, a gracious home, large well-kept garden and delicious food and you have all that's necessary for a good party.

All these were at hand, Thursday morning, when the Lady Laurier Club of Oak Bay held its annual scholarship coffee party in the Uplands Place home of Mrs. Harold Olafson. The successful affair realized $125 toward the group's fund which provides a yearly $100 scholarship for a student studying political economy at the University of Victoria.

President Mrs. J. W. Gillis assisted the hostess in greeting the many guests at the affair which was convened by Mrs. A. F. Ellis. Mrs. A. B. McNeill was co-convener.

Many of the guests spent the coffee hour chatting with their friends at tables set on the patio or on the velvety lawns. Each table had an attractive nosegay of marguerites, shasta daisies, snapdragons and other flowers.

Inside, it was roses, roses all the way! Ruby red blooms gave a touch of glamor to the trays carried by serviteurs.

A huge brandy snifter was the setting for an arrangement of Helen Traubel roses on the main table. In exquisite pink tones, the roses nestled at the bottom of the snifter and were flattered with ferns to form a 'top-knot' as a final touch of the dramatic. The flowers were arranged by the hostess.

Presiding at the head table were Mrs. G. W. Kissick, Mrs. G. W. McPhee, Mrs. David Groos and Mrs. Douglas Turnbull. Among those who assisted as serviteurs were Mrs. Alec McDonald, Mrs. Ernie Peden, Mrs. P. A. Gibbs, Mrs. A. A. Chauvin, Mrs. H. Warren and Mrs. Harold Menzies.

Travelling from Nanaimo for the party was Mrs. Hugh B. Heath, who is president of the British Columbia Women's Liberal Association.

Mrs. John S. Hall was in charge of receipts.

Another Quiet Revolution

Glen Allen Talks to Mayor BILL ADAMS

This is Newfoundland's "Come Home" year.

And there was the mayor of St. John's, Bill Adams, in Victoria—as far from home as he could get and still be in Canada.

It's the sixth time in 10 years that Mayor Adams has come here for a vacation.

A weathered ("it's a west-coast sunburn," he said) solid man of 43, Mayor Adams had a few things to say about why people should have a look at the "B.C. of the Atlantic" even if they didn't come from there in the first place.

●

"It's as vibrant and as lively a place as you could find anywhere," he said. "It's got a kind of a thrust to it.

"And it's not all fishing villages, white picket fences and goats wandering all over the place."

Mayor Adams said there's supposed to be more Newfoundlanders in Toronto than in all Newfoundland. Same with Boston. "They left too soon, Newfoundland has its own 'quiet revolution,' too, you know," he said.

"Not until now, have we gone out and invited people to visit us.

"The tourist people used to say 'this stuff is here, but it's hard to get to, so better stay home'."

"It wasn't until I was in my 20s that I went back to school," he said.

"I was a 'drop-in.'

"I went on to Dalhousie in Halifax, studying there for five years and finally taking a law degree."

He practised law in St. John's and has had "a whale of a time so far" doing so.

There's a scarcity of lawyers in Newfoundland.

"For a long time people on the island didn't recognize such a thing as a title or a deed. A man just took some land and passed it on to his son, the mayor explained.

"You can imagine the amount of legal work there was when people finally broke their isolation.."

Newfoundland has been developing while the rest of Canada has been redeveloping, he said.

Lately the emphasis in his home province has been on education.

"The largest faculty at Memorial University in St. John's is the faculty of education," he said.

"The idea is to get teachers trained and send them back to the outports."

●

"Starting next year," he said, "St. John's students in fourth year will get $50 monthly. Those from out of town will get $100.

"In the next few years all students will be similarly subsidized."

ADAMS
. . . on vacation

Add to that the fact that the university-fees are paid in full by the provincial government and you have very few complaints from students.

Other forward-looking projects in what was once considered Canada's most backward province are in municipal development, roads and industry.

"While a few years ago," said Mayor Adams, "there were no more than three corporate municipalities there are now 130."

"And the whole economic pattern is changing."

"Where once we were a people who had to make our living by travelling—going out to sea, going off into the woods—now we can make cities and live in them."

●

Mr. Adams cited mining developments in Newfoundland and Labrador as examples of the shifting economic balance.

"That's not to say we've given up on fishing. We woke up one morning to find Portuguese, French and Russian fleets on our doorstep, but now we're determined to sell fish to those same countries and make money at it.

The day the little (the province still has only about 2.6 per cent of the country's population) Newfoundland boat was rocked came in 1949.

It was a long time coming.

Newfoundland had been a separate Dominion under Britain until it chose to become the 10th province of Canada.

"The Newfoundlanders are an independent people," said Mayor Adams. "Many of them knew they didn't like things the way they were but they weren't sure what they wanted instead."

As things turned out a popular vote favored joining Canada by a slim two per cent margin.

A people educated on and hardened by the sea are perhaps a long time learning to live in a world where there are no real islands.

●

"Yes, it's a very old place," the mayor said. "When Sir Humphrey Gilbert came there in 1583 he wrote home to England that the New Found Land was 'a much populous' place."

Settlers had already established themselves there.

And if Sir Humphrey had come the other way around the world?

Townsite Permit in Park Includes Penalty Clause

A park use permit authorizing Western Mines, Ltd., to erect a housing development on about 175 acres of land in Strathcona Park on central Vancouver Island was signed and handed over to company officials Friday.

It requires the company to post a $100,000 performance bond and includes a penalty clause under which the company can be fined up to $1,000 a day if it refuses to abide by the terms of the agreement.

The permit will remain in effect for as long as the company is operating in the park.

Indian rights to a small piece of B.C. costline will be restored today at Alert Bay after 32 years in highways department control.

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell said Lieutenant-Governor George Pearkes will sign orders-in-council turning back a strip of land about three quarters of a mile total length to Indian Reserves Numbers One and Two on Cormorant Island.

The land was taken Feb. 5, 1932, and a highway subsequently was built along the shoreline. Indians since then have not been able to control access and development along the foreshore, Mr. Campbell said.

* * *

NORTH COWICHAN—Responding to an appeal by Magistrate Lance Heard, municipal council has appointed a family court committee.

The members are expected to help the court and probation officers, principally in an after-care capacity with juvenile offenders.

* * *

The fire broke out in the modern three-bedroom home about 4:30 a.m. and the noise of it awoke Mrs. Wilson.

She roused her husband and they fled to neighbors, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Winteringham, where they phoned the fire department.

He is a retired North Cowichan municipal employee.

COBBLE HILL—Olwen Sanderson, 16, won the district Rotary contest in public speaking contest and a trip to Ottawa last month.

She and a 4-H companion, Maureen Kinney, joined 245 other Rotary winners between the ages of 16 and 19 from all over Canada.

Olwen attributes her success in public speaking to 4-H training.

In Ottawa the Rotary winners toured the Parliament Buildings and the National Art Gallery.

GANGES—Royal Canadian Legion badge for 35 years' continuous service was presented to Vernon Case Morris, charter member of Salt Spring Island branch No. 92.

* * *

GANGES — Public meeting of North Salt Spring Island oysters has been called for June 30 to elect a replacement for school trustee Dr. T. L. Jansch who is leaving Ganges shortly.

Dr. Jansch plans to take advanced medical training in the United States

* * *

Funds will be requested for construction of industrial arts wing for the new school; for dormitory on Salt Spring for high school students from other Gulf Islands, and for a teacherage on Pender Island.

Industrial arts wing, included in original plans for the new school, had to be eliminated due to rising costs.

SOUTH PENDER ISLAND — Mrs. A. E. Craddock has donated an acre of waterfront property on this island to the world-wide Save The Children Fund.

The British Columbia branch of the fund is selling tickets for a draw which will take place on or before June 15, 1967.

The lot is about 125 feet above the water and faces south with a magnificent view over the San Juan Islands.

"It is a paradise for yachting and fishing," Mrs. Craddock says.

COURTENAY — Crown Zellerbach has announced further extension of its Elk Falls plant.

Plans will broaden waste wood utilization and tap 150 tons per day of reserve pulping capacity at the mill.

What About The Church of Christ?

For about two weeks, an intensive evangelistic effort has been underway in Victoria. Those leading in the effort—businessmen, school teachers, college professors, ministers and college students—are members of the church of Christ.

The question that has been asked by many people is, "What is the church of Christ?"

What the Church Is Not

Well, for one thing, the church of Christ is not something new. It is not a new group of people nor does it offer any new teaching. In fact, instead of offering something new, it seeks to get men to return to the long-cherished fundamentals of the Christian religion.

Faith in God and Jesus as His divine Son, full acceptance of the Bible as the word of God, the dignity of man, reconciliation of all men in Christ, the importance of the church, the power of love—these are not new ideas or strange doctrines.

The church of Christ is not a human organization. Jesus Christ during His teaching ministry promised that He would build His church (Mt. 16:18). And Jesus did build His church. It first came into existence on the day of Pentecost after His resurrection, and thousands of people became members of it on that day (Acts 2:37-38, 41, 47). When built then, it was a divine institution. So it remains today, as long as the pure word of God is sown as the seed of the kingdom (Luke 8:11).

These are some of the things the church is not. In a day when so many people misunderstand the Bible, it is necessary to clarify these points.

What the Church Is Viewed positively, the church of Christ is a world-wide fellowship of believers. It is the body of Christ (Col. 1:18), a household or family (I Tim. 3:15), a kingdom from heaven (Mt. 16:19).

It has no earthly headquarters, for Christ is its only head. It has no human creed, for the New Testament is its only guide. It is completely un-denominational. Its members are simply Christians.

Christians through the centuries, in many nations, have believed and practised these things. On these basic principles men can attain an enduring unity, and by following them can find joy and contentment in life and the hope of a better world.

Would you like to learn more of this church which God sent His Son into the world to establish? The church of Christ which meets regularly at 3460 Shelbourne has invited Mr. Carl Spain, minister and college professor, to speak in a "Campaign for Christ." The services are daily at 8 p.m. in the Oak Bay Junior High Auditorium, continuing through Friday, June 24.

Beginning Monday night and continuing through Friday, Mr. Spain will speak on such vital and basic topics as, "The Divinity of Christ," "Inspiration of the Bible," "The New Birth," "The True Church," and "The Judgment Day."

9 IN MEMORIAM

GOODMANSON—In loving memory of Johny, our dear husband and father, who passed away June 18, 1958.

Memories keep you near.
and Joan.

—Sadly missed by your loving wife 'Lil and daughters Doreen, Audrey

CRAUSE—In loving memory of my mother, Rose Florence, who left us June 19th, 1965.

My lips cannot tell how I miss her,
My heart cannot tell what to say;
God alone knows how I miss her,
In a heart that is lonesome today.

In the Island of Memories.
He would not wish for sorrow nor tears
God's Grace and time will comfort
True hearts, that loved you all through the years.
He will always be with us
In loving, everlasting memories.

—By his loving wife Annie, Annlyn, Caroline, Phil and Bill and five grandchildren.

PHILLIPS—In ever loving memory of a dear husband, Grandfather and Great Grandfather, William Acton Phillips, who passed away June 18, 1965.

You cannot say, you must not say
That he is dead. He is just away!
With a cheery smile,
And a wave of the hand
He has wandered into an unknown land
And left us dreaming how very fair
It needs must be, since he lingers there;
So think of him faring on, as dear
In the love of There as the love Here.
Think of him still as the same, and say
He is not dead he is just away!
—James Whitcomb Riley.

YORK—John William Dickens York who passed away May 25, 1966.

NO FIELDS BEREFT
No fields bereft, before us lie,
If we but learn to live and die
As men of old! Who played a game
For love, and not to make a name!

At football or at cricket, say,
At bowls, at baseball, night or day;
At golf, at hockey—all the rest—
Yes, men of spirit, men of zest!

Why, so it is, with life and death,
From our first cry, to final breath;
No fields bereft, before us lie,
If we but learn to live and die!
—Alan Leslie Greig.

BRIDGE LESSON

By JACOBY AND SON

In our column we have occasionally reviewed hands played by the late George Reith, one of the few older generation auction players who was able to become as great at contract as in the earlier game.

Opening lead—♥ K

His oldest son, Rear-Admiral George Reith, USN retired, writes us occasionally. Today he comments on our hand of April 30. When played some 30 years ago each declarer in a team match played at six spades. South started ace of hearts, ace of diamonds, king of diamonds and came to a halt when West trumped the king. One West led the queen of hearts, whereupon his opponent made the rest of the tricks by means of a three-suit squeeze. The other West shifted to a club, broke up the squeeze and set the contract.

George points out that there is a way to make seven against that original heart lead. Of course, it does require knowledge of the location of all the cards but such an interesting play is worth repeating the hand.

South wins the heart lead and plays a spade to dummy's queen. Then he plays his ace and king of diamonds, ruffs a diamond with dummy's deuce of trumps, ruffs back to his hand with a heart and runs off all his trumps.

This play leads to the same squeeze that developed when West ruffed the diamond king and led a second heart.

On the last trump lead West must hold on to the jack of hearts and can't keep his king of clubs guarded. Then the ten of hearts is thrown from dummy so that dummy retains the ace and jack of clubs. Now East must unguard his queen of clubs to hang on to a diamond.

"Welcome aboard, Admiral."

Catch Up on Life at
SHAWNIGAN BEACH HOTEL

Moderate prices begin at $15 a day for TWO persons, comfortable room and delicious meals included, or $94.50 for a full week's stay—larger lakeview rooms slightly higher.

For one person prices begin at $9 a day or $56.70 for a week, room and meals included.

This kind of holiday means no meals to get, cheerful and friendly hospitality, most comfortable surroundings and pleasant companions.

If you are the outdoors type, our 30 acres of grounds include a delightful 3-hole, 500-yard mashie golf course with quick action greens, tennis court, badminton court, volley ball, shuffleboard, table tennis, "Sherwood Forest" trails, launch trips on the lake, free boats and fishing tackle, water skiing, swimming and safe sandy beach.

Indoors, we have two large lounges, coffee room, excellent library, "The Fire That Is Never Out." This is "The" place for children, play area, rumpus room, planned programme, baby sitters and much more.

We suggest driving out for lunch or dinner, the new highway just completed into Shawnigan is great!

OR BETTER STILL—

A HAPPY BUSINESS?

There are such things you know—do you like fishing? Do you like hunting? Do you like the water? Do you want your family to go to good schools, to live in a country atmosphere that all kids would love to do? Do you like to walk down the street and shake hands with the "padre," chat with the druggist, have the kids holler hi! to you? Would you like to get rid of your ulcers and learn to live like a human being again? Would you like a business where you work just five days a week, where you know all your customers by their first names, where credit is no problem, where business is good in this general type store? (You won't end up a millionaire in the true sense of the word, but you will certainly feel like one.) You can rent the building or buy the buildings, home on the water and all. A reliable person is more important than a heavy payment. Located in VANCOUVER ISLAND'S finest living area. To view please phone BOB TURNER at LAKE COWICHAN, 749-3404 or 749-3252. GOOD THINGS COME IN SMALL COTTAGES

Here is one of the quaintest combinations of garden, home, and complete seclusion we have seen. Hidden away in a lovely garden with a multitude of flowers, shrubs, small fruits, and its own miniature pool, is a rustic siding home consisting of a large comfortable living room with heatilator fireplace, two bedrooms, bathroom, compact kitchen and separate utility room. The construction is only eight years old. A paved drive winds up to the house that is completely hidden from the road. Paths wind through the garden with several screened patios and secluded areas. No other house invades the privacy of this delightful spot. Patches of sea view from the living room and kitchen, and if this is not sufficient, you are only a stone's throw from the beach! DON'T be misled by the price—you can steal this gem for only

Eric Graham, 386-7521, anytime.

RIVIERA of VICTORIA

Certainly the view from the heights is as good or better than that of the Riviera; its sandy beaches are the best and warmest in Victoria; the area is sheltered from cold sea breezes by Mt. Soviet Backs New Finnish Government

HELSINKI (AP) — Finland bids farewell today to Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin, openly relieved he has endorsed this neutral country's new cabinet.

Kosygin, here on a five-day visit, publicly approved the cabinet of Premier Rafael Paasio, whose Social Democratic party has been frowned upon by Moscow for more than a decade.

Paasio's party objected in the early 1950s to over-emphasizing friendship between Finland and the Soviet Union. As a result Moscow made clear it would not do business with any Social Democrats and the party was barred from the government until this year.

After the Social Democrats won more seats in parliament than any other party in the elections last March, Paasio managed to get enough support to form a government.

Speaking at a banquet Friday night, Kosygin put the seal of approval on Paasio's government by announcing that the premier had accepted an invitation to visit the Soviet Union.

Kosygin said his talks with Paasio and President Urho Kekkonen dealt with European security and the situation in Southeast Asia.

Pro-Peking Minister 'Quits' Post

Bhutto, 39, has been in the government since Field Marshal Ayub took power after a military coup in 1958. He has been foreign minister since 1963.

President Ayub said the minister was leaving for unspecified medical treatment. He did not say when, but it was presumed Bhutto would leave the government almost immediately.

The announcement did not say Bhutto was resigning, but reliable sources said he was unlikely to return to his post.

President Ayub was believed anxious to tone down any anti-West note in Pakistan's foreign policy, particularly since the United States announced last Wednesday that it would resume full economic aid to Pakistan and India. This aid was halted during last year's war between the two countries.

The president said today there would be no change in Pakistan's foreign policy.

Salvation Army CO Transferred To Alberta Post

Capt. Donald McMillan, commanding officer of Victoria Salvation Army Citadel, has been appointed commanding officer of the Citadel in Calgary.

He and his wife Dorothy and their daughter, Susan, 11, will leave here at the end of June.

Capt. McMillan came here from Halifax two years ago. He was born in Montreal and trained with the Salvation Army in New York City and the Gordon College of Theology in Boston.

He served with the Salvation Army in Boston and Springfield, Mass., and New Haven, Conn., before being transferred to Montreal because of his fluency in French.

In Victoria he has been active in young people's work.

40 Students Need Special Schooling

Forty area children are in serious danger of being educationally and socially crippled for life.

They are hard of hearing.

And according to the Vancouver Island Society for Hearing-Handicapped Children, they need a special training school.

A special class for hard-of-hearing children was recently opened in Marigold School. But far more assistance is needed, the society says.

Helped in time, a hearing-handicapped child can keep up with his fellows, but without special assistance he is in danger of falling further and further behind until even special training is of little help.

Last winter the society paid for the transportation of five school-age children to the Marigold School class, and this winter they hope to be able to hire a qualified teacher for pre-schoolers.

CLUBHOUSE DESTROYED

BALTIMORE, Md. (AP) — A spectacular six-alarm blaze destroyed the historic Pimlico clubhouse Thursday night, a landmark in American racing since 1870 and oldest clubhouse in the United States.

The frame structure, which houses the National Jockeys Hall of Fame, was engulfed in flames shortly after the first alarm was sounded.

Firemen were able to contain the fire and keep it from spreading to the grandstand and clubhouse.

Work Starts on Huge Garage

Work on a $100,000 truck maintenance garage for Heaney's division of Johnston Terminals and Storage began Thursday on a site adjoining the Douglas Street depot.

There will be five vehicle bays capable of handling the largest highway tractors and trailer units, which will have access to the property by way of Burns Road and Ardersier.

SAANICH CELEBRATIONS

'Neighs' Take Sunday Spotlight

It's horses, horses, horses next in Saanich's continuing program of Diamond Jubilee celebration events.

The neighs will have it Sunday in fields at the Pat Bay Highway entrance to Beaver Lake Park when Victoria Western Horsemen's Club stages a show on behalf of the municipality.

It will be a come-one, come-all show for both spectators and competitors alike, and officials in charge say there should be a lot of fun for everyone.

The show starts at 1 p.m. and there will be no entrance, nor entry fees. Open to all riders, entries will be accepted on the spot.

There will be trophies for first place and ribbons to fourth place, with seven events scheduled.

Mrs. Verle Morrow will judge English events and Bill Grimshaw will call the tune in Western games.

Program will include a trotting race for both English and Western riders, a hunter class, a stake race, open jumping, pole bending, fault-and-out jumping, and a barrel race.

In addition there will be a display of precision riding by a drill team of costumed horsewomen who have been practising for this special Diamond Jubilee feature.

Full-Scale War Promised Over Power Model on Pond

But he was ordered to take his 30-inch craft off Harrison Pond last week by police after a neighbor complained about the noise. The hydroplane is powered by a model airplane engine and generates better than one horsepower.

"I'll be back," Elves told the policeman, claiming there is no by-law which says the pond is just for model sailboats.

Power boat models on the pond was the subject of a council debate a few years ago, claims Mr. Elves. And the decision at that time was that the 80 by 150-foot pool was for model boats of all kinds.

NORMAN SNAPS BANFF RECORD

BANFF, Alta (CP) — Moe Norman of Toronto smashed a 14-year-old record Wednesday when he toured the Banff Springs Hotel golf course in 65 strokes, seven under par for the 6,704-yard layout.

Playing with Alvie Thompson, Bill Simpson and Bob Young, all of Toronto, Norman was preparing for a $12,000 pro-amateur event at Calgary.

Previous course record of 66 was set in 1952 by Banff club professional Malcolm Tapp.

Navy Poised to Act In U.K. Ship Strike

LONDON (CP) — The stage is set for an all-out struggle between the British government and the striking seamen's union.

The government is expected to call on the Royal Navy sometime next week to move strikebound British vessels and make room for foreign-manned ships carrying vital imports.

A week of hurried negotiations ended Friday with no sign that the month-old strike was any closer to a settlement.

Despite a pep-talk by Prime Minister Wilson and the first talks between union and shipowners since the strike began, the union executive voted to continue the strike.

The seamen won no concession to their demand for a 40-hour week immediately. Wilson stuck by his endorsement of a judicial inquiry formula which would give them the 40-hour week next year and a reduction to 48 from 56 hours in the meantime.

Two More Named To University Theatre School

Two appointments to the theatre division of the new school of fine arts have been announced by president Malcolm Taylor of the University of Victoria.

Frederick Edell of Omaha, Nebraska, and Edward Shoffner of San Diego, Calif., will join the division July 1. Courses in theatre previously offered by the department of English will be given by the school of fine arts, which will expand the program in this field and related ones.

Both newcomers have had wide theatrical experience. Mr. Edell, as assistant professor, has staged productions on both U.S. coasts and in Sweden, and is now a professional director and drama instructor. Mr. Shoffner, appointed as technical supervisor and part-time lecturer, was a television producer in Hollywood before moving to San Diego State College.

Jubilee Gets Federal Grant

The federal health department has approved a grant of $63,313 to the Royal Jubilee Hospital.

Administrator George Masters said the money is for completing the hospital's unfinished second floor west wing.

BRIDGE RESULTS

Second game of the All-masters Duplicate Bridge Club's summer six-week series, was held Thursday at Broughton Building clubrooms.

Winners were: north-south—1. Joan Strank and Tony Marsh. 2. Hilda Price and Walter Allen. 3. Mike O'Brien and Keith Stapleton. 4. Freda Small and Earle Dye. East-west — Chris Murray and Bud Waddington. 2. Laura Tinley and Molly Collins. 3. Gwen Graham and Bill Lamb. 4. Betty and Chuck Miller.

Section A — 1. Brenda Smith and Nick Tuele. 2. Babe and Homer Kolb. 3. Joy Glover and Iris Markstrom. 4. Kay Clark and Gladys Cropp. 5. Bobbie Thomson and Lilian Jones. Section B — 1. Florence and Percy Edwards. 2. Una Orme and Judy Langstaff. 3. Bob and Do McMynn. 4. Ray Martin and Art Barber. 5. Ann Roylance and Helen Tregellas.

ROSES were the big attraction at the Victoria Horticultural Society flower show at the Curling Rink today. Judy Sinclair, 15, of 853 Rundle Drive, is examining her favorite rose—Arlene Francis. The show is open all day Saturday.

NDP Chief New Labor Secretary

VANCOUVER (CP) — Raymond C. Haynes, 38-year-old veteran of the labor movement, Thursday was elected to the key post of secretary-treasurer of the B.C. Federation of Labor and immediately announced a policy of increased political action by labor.

Mr. Haynes, elected this year as president of the New Democratic Party in B.C., succeeds E. P. O'Neal as secretary-treasurer of the powerful federation, which embraces 300 unions across the province representing some 120,000 workers.

Declared Mr. Haynes, who first joined the IWA in 1948 and now is international representative for B.C. of the Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Union (CLC): "We will continue to press for drastic changes in (B.C.) labor legislation and we must intensify our efforts in the political field."

Collection Tin Returns Disappointing

Goodwill Enterprises distributed 40,000 collection tins throughout the Greater Victoria area to raise funds to aid the handicapped.

Filled with pennies, a collection tin contains $2.30, or 40,000 full tins contain $92,000.

Goodwill Enterprises hardly dared to hope for that much. Nor did they expect to have fewer than 500 partially-filled collection tins returned to them.

Unfortunately, that's exactly what happened.

"The amount of money turned in by way of the collection tins was disappointing," Goodwill director Samuel Rea said Thursday.

The money from the tins was to be used to buy needed tools and equipment to provide more opportunities for the handicapped, he said.

Goodwill officials are hopeful that many of the tins will still be returned to the enterprise's new building at 220 Bay.

NEWCOMER FINED $300

Stanford Smith, 1077 Modeste, was fined $300 when he pleaded guilty in central court today to impaired driving.

The youth, who moved from Manitoba just a week ago, was stoppd by police after his car was spotted weaving on Wharf Street just before noon Friday.

Smith was also barred from driving for six months.

Graham Tour Sparks Fight

LONDON (AP) — American evangelist Billy Graham cut short his tour of London's Soho district Friday night when fist fights broke out and two persons were arrested.

Graham had intended to take an hour-long walk through the area of coffee bars, movie houses and strip clubs, but he cut it to five minutes when he was met by more than 1,000 shouting and screaming people.

The fights broke out not over religious differences, but among people being pushed in the crowd.

Trucker Drowned

REVELSTOKE (CP)—A workman on the Columbia River power project was presumed to have drowned Thursday night after the truck he was driving plunged into the Columbia River near the Mica Dam site, 90 miles north of here.

A diver located the truck later on the river bottom, but there was no sign of Paice. He is believed to have been swept away in the strong current.

All Ferry Crews Have Problems Province Told

Workers on highway department ferries should be given the same treatment as those employed by B.C. Ferry Authority, the government was told Thursday.

E. P. O'Connor, executive secretary of the B.C. Government Employees' Association, wired Attorney-General Robert Bonner that some 200 highway department employees operating small river, lake and salt water car ferries have been forgotten.

He said they should receive the same improvements in overtime provisions, revised work schedules and bonus pay that was won earlier this week by 800 non-licensed workers on the authority's fleet of Queen ferries.

Indian Day Urged

OTTAWA (CP)—Conservative Leader Diefenbaker asked the government Friday to set aside a national day in 1967 centennial year to honor the Indian contribution to Canada.

STAMP CORNER

By REG. NAIRNE

Tonga is once more on the rampage with a long new set of "provisional" overprints, which, like most of this south-sea island's recent issues, will not be obtainable from the Crown Agents, as they will be issues is restricted quantities.

June 18 (today) is the day of issue, and if one can judge by past experience, it will probably turn out that even if you order immediately you will find that several of the denominations will be already sold out by the time your remittance is received in Tonga. The big London and New York dealers will have been ahead of you!

The set, which is ostensibly issued to celebrate the centenary of Toupou College and Secondary Education has been produced by overprinting the entire residue of the 75th Postage Stamp Anniversary issue, most of them being surcharged with new values as well.

The following comprise the series: (1) Regular postage — 1d, 3d, 6d, 1sh 2d, 2sh, 3sh. Airmails — 5d, 10d, 1sh, 2sh 9d, 3sh 6d, 4sh 6d. Official airmails — 10sh, 20sh.

In this last category only a little over 17,500 of each value were overprinted, which of course limits the total number of complete sets to that figure.

New Zealand's 1966 "Health Stamps" will again feature native birds, which will be shown in their natural colors. Date of issue will be Aug. 3.

Denominations will be 4d (3d postage plus 1d Health) and 5d (4d plus 1d). As before, miniature sheets of 6 stamps of each will be available, in addition to the ordinary sheets.

The 4d features the bell bird, the song of which Capt. Cook aptly likened to the sound of "small bells, exquisitely tuned." With the growth of population the bird was threatened with extinction, but it has now adapted itself to civilization and is again thriving.

The 5d shows the rewa, a bird which although furnished with wings only uses them when running. It is noted for its lack of fear and incurable inquisitiveness.

It is a very useful bird as its favorite dish is the rat!

●

British Solomon Islands — Decimal conversion issue: Because insufficient stocks were available for overprinting, a quantity of each value was specially reprinted for surcharging. As these show the watermark sideways, they really constitute an entirely new set, from a specialist's standpoint.

SQUARE SHOOTING DILEMMA

"So you were shooting your air rifle and accidentally hit the window. Well, we'll just take the cost of that out of your allowance, young man," said Jimmie's father. "How large did you say the window was?"

"It was a square, four feet from top to bottom," replied Jimmy. "At 75 cents a square foot that's exactly $6."

"You're not only a poor shot, but a poorer mathematician," sighed the boy's father. "Four times four is 16, times 75 is $12. At a dollar a week it will take you 12 weeks to pay it off."

"I don't like to contradict you, but you're wrong, Dad," replied Jimmy, and to his credit he proved it. How?

Answer: The window was diamond-shaped. The area of a square whose diagonal is 4 feet is 8 square feet. Eight times 75c is $6.

HOW OLD ARE THESE CHILDREN

Five years ago, Johnny was two and one-third times as old as Linda. Next year he will be one and four-ninths as old as Linda. How old are Johnny and Linda?

P.S.: Linda's in Grade School and John in Junior High.

Solution: Johnny is 12; Linda is eight.

HANDING YOU A LAUGH LINE

"How often do you stutter?" asked the doctor. What was the patient's reply?

"O-only w-when I-I t-t-talk."

What kind of a dragon breathes firewater?

A schnappsdragon.

What made the new executioner give up his job?

BUSINESS IS PICKING UP

Sandy Scrounge, caddy-master at the golf club, had 60 used golf balls, recovered from sand traps and water hazards, that he decided at first to sell at five for $2. At that rate he would have received $24 for the lot. But then he figured he could make more money by grading the balls into two lots of 30 each. Under this new scheme, five golf balls still brought $2, but the total amount he received was $25, or a dollar more than he would have collected the other way. How was that possible? That is to say, at what price were the balls in each of the two prospective lots sold to earn an additional dollar?

No fair peeking below.

Answer: One lot of 30 he sold at the rate of three for $1, the other lot of 30 he sold at the rate of two for $1. Thus he had 25 unit sales at $1 each. Under the other scheme, he would have had only 12 unit sales at $2 each.

AN UNCANNY COUNTING CAPER

It seems very peculiar but no matter what number is selected between 20 and 1,000, the answer will always be either 9 or 18 if you do the following:

First: Add the digits in the number and subtract the result from the number itself.

Let's take an example—721 is a number picked at random. Add its digits and you get 10. Subtract this from 721 and you get 711. Add these digits and the result is 9.

Now try it with a number of your choosing.

"Your picture," said the photographer, "in this handsome frame will be just 12 dollars, but if you prefer to take it in a frame costing only one-half as much, the price will be just 10 dollars." How much is the picture without the frame?

You should be able to solve this in your head.

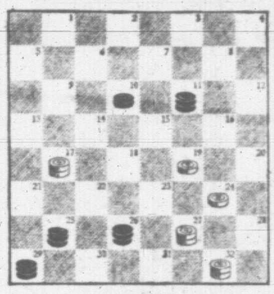
CHIP-DOWN CHECKER TEST



'Tis said the impossible takes a little longer. The checker contest at right is a case in point. White side, moving up the board, to move and win in seven moves is the challenge. How is it done?

Hint: It's all over but the shouting after five plays; the rest is mopping up.

Solution: White 19—16, Black 11—20, White 27—31, Black 20—27, White 31—22, Black 25—18, White 30—23—14—7, Black 29—25, White 7—10, Black 25—30, White 11—22.

SAUCER DEBATE

While en route home from the office outing the other day, a junior executive spotted a formation of flying saucers. There was a saucer before two saucers, and a saucer between two saucers. How many saucers did he claim to have seen in all?

Think this over a bit before answering.

Answer: He claimed to have seen three saucers.

STAR'S NO BARGAIN, OR IS HE?

A baseball slugger agreed to accept as his salary the value of his twenty-fourth home run based on the following reckoning: One cent for the first, two for the second, four for the third, eight for the fourth, etc. Did he make a good deal?

'Judges Should Not Be Used For Inquiries'

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservative Leader Diefenbaker was a thorn in the government's side in the Commons Friday as he criticized the Liberals' handling of Munsinger-type royal commission inquiries.

Later he softened his thrust in delivering an eloquent plea that the government save the Mistaseni Indian shrine from ending up at the bottom of the lake being formed behind the South Saskatchewan River dam.

Other opposition MPs attacked the government on the handling and the principle of the Combines Investigation Act.

Despite the cut-and-thrust, the Commons approved the spending estimates of the Indian affairs department and those of Guy Favreau, president of the Privy Council.

Mr. Diefenbaker, in his criticism of judicial inquiries said there were too many of them and too many judges were involved.

SEEN AS THREAT

Inquiries with political overtones were a threat to democracy. Rules of procedure were too loose. Judges, particularly from the Supreme Court of Canada, should not head inquiries into controversial political matters.

"We dare not, if democracy is to be preserved, allow for the setting up of royal commissions having essentially the characteristics of state trials," he said.

Rules of evidence used in courts of law should apply to judicial inquiries, he said. Any other course would destroy the judiciary and lead to harassment of politicians as in totalitarian countries.

Assurance was needed that citizens would not be slandered by hearsay evidence at inquiries.

Stressing he was not announcing government policy, Mr. Favreau said the Inquiries Act did not outline rules of procedure sufficiently and safeguards could be added to protect individuals. The powers of the commissioner could be strengthened.

Mr. Diefenbaker's handling of the Gerda Munsinger case is the subject of a current inquiry. The West German blonde, labelled a security risk, was alleged to have had liaisons with Conservative cabinet ministers when Mr. Diefenbaker was prime minister.

ATTACKS COMBINES

One of the strongest attacks on the combines matter came from Frank Howard (NDP—Skeena) who claimed the combines branch was being starved to serve political ends. It was not fulfilling its obligations because of influence exerted by friends of the Liberal party who hoped to control the financial affairs of the country.

Mr. Favreau said the act will be revised and more investigators hired. But despite its limited staff the branch was doing an enormous amount of work. Mr. Howard's charges were false.

The act imposes penalties on companies or businessmen who conspire to fix prices, undercut competitors unfairly or set up monopolies.

Later, Northern Affairs Minister Laing, piloting Indian affairs estimates, said the government plans to redouble its efforts to promote industrial development on Indian reserves.

Indian housing was also in a bad state. As a result the government had upgraded its program in this area to build 1,500 houses rather than the 1,150 planned earlier.

There is a power that surpasses all human might. This power is capable of helping man on each step of his journey to eternity. It can calm a troubled heart and lift a weary spirit. For centuries, unbelieving men have denied this power exists . . . but they have passed on, and the power remains. It is still the hope of a meaningful life for every man.

This power is found in a life of service in Christ . . . a power for today! Tonight, Dr. Carl Spain will discuss one part of this power. You will want to hear his timely lesson on:

ENTER JACKSON NEXT SATURDAY

King Promises Exciting Climax for Marchers

GREENWOOD, Miss. (AP) — Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., shaking hands with people who contributed $1 bills to aid the Mississippi march, urged them to be in Jackson when the march ends there a week from today.

King promised there would be entertainment at the end of the march, including, he said, Frank Sinatra, Marlon Brando, Burt Lancaster, Sammy Davis Jr., Gregory Peck and rock-'n'-roll singer James Brown.

Earlier, the rally heard Hosea Williams, director of voter registration and political education for King's Southern Christian Leadership Conference, urge them to "get that vote."

"If we can die in Viet Nam, we can die in Mississippi," Williams said. "I'm sorry I don't have but one life to give for this damnable place, Mississippi."

Said King: "You all know as well as I do an individual takes his life in his own hands when he asserts his rights in Mississippi."

During Friday's march, the demonstrators encountered children waving Confederate flags and a sound truck blaring a Ku Klux Klan song. A white man doused them with a hose and a poisonous snake was found in a truck carrying reporters along the march route.

King has said he expects 25,000 persons in Jackson June 26 for a final march on the state capital.

Williams exhibited a one-sentence letter from the president of Mississippi Valley State College at Itta Bena denying use of the college grounds. Mississippi Valley is a Negro college.

The refusal put today's march goal in doubt. The marchers, completing the journey begun by James Meredith, had planned to stay overnight in Itta Bena, a town of 2,000. They were only two miles away when Friday's trek left off, but were returned in trucks to Greenwood.

Williams told the rally of the need for money. "Put your hands in your pockets and pull out something green."

At this point some people drifted away, but hundreds dug out dollar bills and crowded past the trucks that had been the speakers' platform. They thrust up the money, then shook hands with King. Afterward, Williams said $342 had been collected.

Red Tape Snarls Masako's Dream

By DESMOND BILL
Times Staff Reporter

VANCOUVER — A pretty, 20-year-old Japanese girl who hoped to spend the summer in Victoria has been ordered deported by Vancouver immigration officials.

But Masako Endos' Victoria sponsor said he will immediately appeal the decision directly to the minister of Immigration in Ottawa.

Meantime, John Collins has offered to post a bond for her safekeeping and it is hoped she will be allowed to remain in the custody of the Collins family pending disposition of the appeal.

★ ★ ★

Miss Endo's "dream come true" turned suddenly into a nightmare Friday when she arrived on a flight shortly after noon.

She expected to go on to Pat Bay Airport to meet the Victoria family that had invited her to Canada for the summer.

It was the realization of a dream she has had for years.

Frightened and alone, barely able to speak English, she did not know what was happening to her or why the officials would not let her proceed.

Then a hastily-summoned interpreter soon explained the reason: She was coming to Canada for four months but did not have a visa, a requirement for Japanese visitors coming here for a period longer than three months.

Immigration officials sympathetically arranged to put her up in a Vancouver hotel instead of a jail cell while they looked at her case.

The Collins family met Miss Endo, whom they knew only by correspondence, in the corridor of the hotel about 7:30 p.m.

By then she had been in Canada seven lonely, upsetting hours and was close to tears.

By that time, too, Mr. Collins was in a rage over the foul-up.

The last-minute order was in keeping with earlier complications in Miss Endo's story.

★ ★ ★

They began earlier this year when she wrote to The Daily Times asking the paper to find someone to sponsor her on a visit to Canada.

Mr. Collins, a Liquor Control Board employee, read about her request.

The Collins, who have two children, Trudi, 7, and Deborah, 7, both students at Westerham Schol, felt they should make the offer to sponsor her.

Mr. Collins, a powerfully-built man with a personality to match, feels strongly that "the world has shrunk and we had better start making friends with the people in it."

But unlike others, he and his wife Myra did something about it.

They contacted immigration officials, found out the required procedure, and wrote Miss Endo, agreeing to sponsor her and offering to let her stay in their home and maintain her.

Then came word that she could not come because she did not have money for fare.

Friends who heard of the situation offered to assist financially to bring her here, but it transpired that the difficulty was not money but Miss Endo's father.

B.C. Ferries Face Tieup

By ROGER STONEBANKS

Five hundred ferry workers could be the next to go on strike in B.C.

The possibility of a strike against B.C. Ferries was raised today after deck and catering workers voted 78 per cent against recommendations of an employee-management committee on work schedules.

The vote was conducted over the last three days by secret ballot at meetings at the four major terminals—Swartz Bay, Tsawwassen, Horseshoe Bay and Departure Bay.

The committee's report was accepted earlier this week by the cabinet.

It recommended recognition rights for a union of unlicensed personnel, revised winter work schedules, a 10 per cent pay bonus for working the unchanged summer schedule, shorthanded pay, some extra staff and other benefits.

★ ★ ★

The employees told their representatives they want full collective bargaining "in its true sense," the union of their choice and dues checkoff.

In the past, the provincial government has refused to give collective bargaining rights to the B.C. Government Employees Association.

The employees have sent a telegram to Attorney-General Robert Bonner, chairman of a special cabinet sub-committee dealing with ferry problems, advising him of their rejection.

There was no immediate reply from Mr. Bonner, who was travelling today.

Further meetings with the government will be sought.

Said one spokesman: "We are hopeful we can have further talks with the government and resolve this problem."

Earlier, unlicensed personnel agreed to strike next month to back demands for full collective bargaining rights, their own union and dues checkoff.

★ ★ ★

This date was changed to last Thursday but called off when the committee's report was announced last Monday.

Troubles on the ferries extend back over at least the last three years.

The latest round began in December when new schedules were announced—10 days on and four days off in winter and 12 on with three off in the summer.

On New Year's Day, two crews at Swartz Bay walked off forcing the cancellation of three sailings.

They complained to the Civil Service Commission, which recommended no change in the schedules.

The crews then appealed for a board of reference arbitration, but the government declined to establish one.

Later the four-man joint committee was appointed.

FULL-SCALE STRIKE AHEAD?

Will it be a long weekend for woodworkers — or the start of a full-scale strike?

The answer will be known Monday morning.

By Friday, more than half the 26,000-coastal loggers and mill workers had gone on strike despite pleas from union leaders.

Saturday and Sunday, however, are days off.

The first indications will come Sunday midnight when graveyard mill shifts are due to report for work, followed by the 8 a.m. day shifts.

The contract between the International Woodworkers of America and Forest Industrial Relations, representing 120 companies, ran out last Tuesday midnight.

FOLLOWED ACT

The union had complied with all the terms of the Labor Relations Act, but leaders recommended the men take no action until the report of industrial inquiry commissioner Mr. Justice Nathan Nemetz is received next week.

But rank-and-file members said they were fed up with negotiation delays, and began walking out in growing numbers.

The union's 10-man negotiating committee met Friday and decided not to call a strike in the name of the IWA "until the commissioner's settlement proposals are available, provided such proposals are made within a week."

LEGAL RIGHT

The IWA said the men "voluntarily exercised their legal right to stop work" and blamed the spontaneous action of "aggravating delays in the negotiations for which the employers and not the union have been responsible."

An industry statement said the expired master agreement is still in effect.

"That master agreement says that the contract with the IWA shall remain in force until a new agreement is reached or until negotiations are discontinued by either party.

"The mediation process under Mr. Justice Nemetz is part of the negotiations which will continue until he hands down his report."

10 IN JAIL

In other labor news, 10 union leaders are in jail, negotiations involving 4,000 men at Cominco in Trail have adjourned and Vancouver's 1,500 civic outside workers started the seventh week of their strike.

Other strikes include inside and outside civic workers in North Vancouver and car salesmen at Dominion-Vancouver Motors.

Ten officials of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union chose three months in jail rather than pay fines for contempt of court.

The jailed men included most of the union's negotiating committee. The present contract covering 2,800 longshoremen expires at the end of next month.

At Trail, the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers said contract talks with Cominco have adjourned to allow the union to advise its membership of the latest company offer.

The union wants an extra 50 cents an hour and has rejected 18½ cents. Basic rate is $2.24½. The current contract runs out July 1.

12 Men Missing As Trawler Sinks

HALIFAX (CP) — Twelve men from the Nova Scotia fishing trawler Reliance are missing and feared dead following a collision early today between the trawler and the Liberian freighter Bordapian off Nova Scotia's south shore.

The air-sea rescue centre here reported the trawler sank immediately after the collision, which occurred in dense fog about 40 miles southeast of Shelburne, N.S.

RADIOES NEWS

The 5,711-ton freighter, owned by Bordagain Shipping Co. Ltd., radioed first word of the collision at 12:30 a.m. today.

The Canadian Coast Guard cutter Rally was dispatched from Shelburne and reached the scene about 4:30 a.m.

She was being assisted in her search for possible survivors by an unidentified trawler, but dense fog shrouded the area and little hope was offered for the missing seamen.

The rescue centre here said an aircraft would be sent to help in the search as soon as visibility cleared, but an officer at the centre added: "It doesn't look too good for the rest of the day."

The Bordapian, whose port of registry is listed as Monrovia, Liberia, was headed for Halifax when the collision occurred.

The Reliance sailed from Lunenburg, 70 miles southwest of Halifax, at 7 p.m. Friday for a nine-day fishing trip to George's Bank, off the southern tip of Nova Scotia.

Robert Allan, owner of the 298-ton trawler, said he normally goes to sea as her skipper, "but I broke a couple of ribs ashore and so remained behind this time."

CIA Director Resigns Post

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson announced today the resignation of retired Admiral William F. Raborn as director of the Central Intelligence Agency and said he will be succeeded by his deputy, Richard Helms.

There had been reports of unhappiness at high levels within the CIA about Raborn's direction of the super-secret agency.

As the new head of the CIA, Helms inherits a controversy between Raborn and Senator J. W. Fulbright (Dem. — Ark.), chairman of the Senate foreign relations committee. It was disclosed Friday that Raborn had refused to discuss CIA "sources and methods" at a briefing last February for the foreign relations committee.

His refusal triggered the current Senate battle over whether members of the Fulbright committee should be added to the existing Senate group which supervises the CIA.

Johnson also volunteered a new statement on the Vietnamese war and said that, as a result of almost daily reviews of the situation, "we sincerely feel that the national interest requires that we persist in our present policy."

He hinted at further intensification of U.S. military efforts by saying later that the Pentagon was trying to step up the pace of military hardware purchases this month. That way, he said, the United States could "get earlier deliveries and increase our efforts."

That Snap May Be a Passport To Trip Around the World

By CANDIDE TEMPLE

A picture of a baby, a puppy, a sunset scene — these or a host of other subjects caught on film could take you on a fun-filled, globe-circling trip for two with all expenses paid and $1,000 spending money.

All this just by entering the photo in The Times Amateur Snapshot Contest starting June 25. You could be the lucky grand prize winner, or take one of the weekly cash prizes in the six-week contest.

You could also come out on top in one of the three categories — The World in Which We Live, People of the World, and Animals of the World — which qualifies your picture in the national competition.

Only black and white prints will be accepted, made from any type of film.

You may develop and print the pictures yourself, or have them done professionally.

No pictures will be returned.

Mail the print or prints, with your name and address printed clearly on the back, to the Amateur Snapshot Contest Editor, at the Victoria Daily Times.

It's not necessary to send the negatives too, but if you are named final prize winner in one of the three categories, you will be asked to produce the negative.

The contest is geared for amateurs — photographers who do it just for fun, although they may have sold pictures to a publication or

Civic Workers Set To Veto Wage Offer

VANCOUVER (CP) — A provincial government inquiry commissioner Friday night proposed a settlement that would give Vancouver's 1,500 striking outside workers a basic wage of $2.60 an hour by July 1, 1967.

The union executive announced immediately that it will urge rejection of the recommendation at a general membership meeting Sunday.

Basic rate now is $2.28½.

Professor Ray Herbert of the law department of the University of British Columbia, appointed last week to investigate the dispute recommended a 13-cent increase retroactive to Jan. 1, 1966, six cents more on July 1, another six cents next Jan. 1 and a final seven and one half cents on July 1, 1967.

The union wants a 70-cent increase over three years. It struck at midnight May 6, after rejecting a final city offer of 28½ cents over two years.

Labor Minister Peterson said the Herbert report was "fair and reasonable" and he urged acceptance by both parties "as quickly as possible."

Stock Split Proposed

A stock split and increase in common share authorization is proposed as a means of raising new capital for Johnston Terminals and Storage Ltd.

Stockholders of the firm, whose subsidiary is Heaneys Cartage and Storage Ltd., are being asked to approve the measure at the annual meeting in Vancouver at 11 a.m. Thursday, June 23.

Formal notice of the intention to split shares three-for-one and to raise the authorized issue to one million shares is given in a letter to stockholders.

The split itself would raise the number of authorized shares to 750,000 from 250,000, and it is further proposed to increase the total by another 250,000.

There are 140,844 shares issued, which would increase to 422,532 with the split, leaving 578,000 shares in the treasury that could be used for new financing or acquisition of new properties.

Haddock Nominated

VICTORIA REAL ESTATE BOARD

is not always easily arranged, as dividends or interest on investments often fail to tie in well with the monthly style of budget to which the retired man accustomed himself during the working years.

To meet this need, Victoria Mortgage Corporation will mail a monthly cheque applying on any investment of $10,000 or over, or any AMOUNT you SPECIFY, to ARRIVE PROMPTLY ON THE FIRST OF EACH MONTH. This can be for interest only at 7½%, or for an amount including part principal, as well as interest.

$10,000 at 7½% produces $62.50 earnings per month. $10,000 at monthly payments of $89 including 7½% interest would take 30 years to spend: $73 month—25 years: $80 month—20 years: $89 month—16 years: $100 month—13 years: $118 month—10 years: $138 month—8 years: $153 month—7 years: $200 month—5 years.

Terms of all 7½% Victoria Mortgage Debentures provide that the unused portion of your investment is repaid in five years—or earlier in the event of prior death, in which case your estate can cash the debenture.

To have prospectus mailed, phone Douglas Hawkes Ltd., EV 4-7128, 817 Fort.

VICTORIA, B.C., SATURDAY, JUNE 18, 1966—PAGE 21

Arthur Mayse

An hour or two after dark on Thursday evening, I arrived home from the Cowichan in borrowed pants and a sweater not my own.

Some wives would have exclaimed, 'You fell in the river!', but my dear one merely greeted a familiar situation with a casual question.

"Where," she asked, "did you fall in this time?"

"Oh, near Skutz Falls," I said. "Did you happen to save me some dinner?"

This mutual lack of concern stemmed from two facts with which she and I have grown familiar through the years. One is that trout fishermen, by the very nature of their sport, risk an occasional wetting.

The second is that some anglers go ears over a teacup into stream or river with monotonous frequency.

★

To this damp company I belong. Campbell River has received me, also the Oyster, both Qualicums, and numerous humbler creeks including Goldstream. I know the taste of New York State's Beaverkill, and have filled my pockets in the Little Missouri.

Why it should befall so, I can only guess. All I know for sure is that if it's deep enough to cover a trout's back fin, I will presently be wringing it out of my shirt.

That little eccentricity makes fishing in my company an interesting and often hilarious business.

My wife discovered this when I first ushered her into an up-Island waterbrook and [illegible] her against wading [illegible]ep.

[illegible]nds later, I was wringing [illegible] my hat, a couple of [illegible] on the highway bridge [illegible] braying like donkies, and every trout in the vicinity had scurried for cover.

"You made such a splash!" said my bride, who looked suspiciously pink around the ears.

And so I did, before the week was over, stepping into a hole that certainly hadn't been in that spot the day before.

On various jaunts and in different streams, I have sought to stay dry by shoeing my hoofs with felt—which practically guarantees any normal angler sure footing—or with hobnails, caulks or chain-link sandals.

All were an improvement on the cleated rubber sole most waders or hip-boots come equipped with; but I still managed to take a dunking.

Once in the all but slip-proof Credit River of South Ontario, I got my feet tangled in a metal barrel hoop which some yahoo had tossed off the bank.

That, I'm told, was a truly sensational dive. First a forward step, then backward, then an arm-flailing pirouet.

And finally, the inevitable.

There are in this fisherman's town two brothers of the angle waiting vulture-like for me to reveal precisely what happened Thursday night. I'd like to, especially since one loaned me the pants and the other the sweater, but it's all kind of vague.

One moment I was advancing eagerly into the river for a try at Old Bill, a resident brown trout so big you wouldn't believe it. The next, I was floundering in three feet of water, hoping Old Bill wouldn't rush in and bite my arm off.

Next time out, I will be equipped with felt soles, stout wading staff, and any other precautionary devices that come to mind.

But I know already what will happen.

The streambed will suddenly and treacherously sprout a boulder where none should be.

Or the riverside branch by which I steady myself will for no logical reason break.

One way or another, I am going to wind up with water in my eyes, and in my ears the hyena laughter of the fellows who come home dry!

The make-believe ruffians rode the float through drizzle which came on just in time for parade. (Bill Halkett.)

Just a Sniff Before the Whiff

By DON VIPOND

Phew!

To get wind of it, wrinkle your nose.

Some of the biggest stores in Victoria are putting a shoulder behind the campaign to push men's "toiletries."

That means shaving lotions—before and after—special men's soaps, sun tan lotions, deodorants and colognes.

"They're really not shy anymore," says pert Ann Barker, who has watched the men react to the scented revolution from behind one of the city's best department store display counters.

Ranged on this counter are cologne bottles which let the passerby spray and sniff. All the samples are well used.

"They stop and try them all," says Ann. "Mostly it's the teen-agers but plenty of the older fellows too. And they all have their favorites."

INVITING

The names really invite a try.

Royal Lyme—smells good enough to drink.

Bermuda Spice—spicy, naturally.

Then there's 007 and Brute. Sort of hard to put them into words. Try thinking of James Bond, trapped in a perfume factory.

Sales are booming, she says, and with most of the top line colognes selling at about $1 an ounce, this has got to mean buyers are serious.

What with Father's Day coming up Sunday, the boom in men's grooming products means wives can have a ball choosing that new aroma for their husbands.

Getting father to use the stuff, well, that's another question.

Ask The Times

Q. Was there a life model for the Christopher Robin of A. A. Milne's Winnie the Pooh series? P.O.

A. Christopher Robin was in fact Milne's son, Christopher Robin Milne, who was five years old when the first book appeared.

Q. It is an offence to cut down or pick dogwood in this province? I.O.D.

A. It most certainly is an offence, says the attorney-general's department. The maximum fine for picking, cutting down or destroying western flowering dogwood on Crown or municipal land is $25.

'WANTED TO FRIGHTEN THEM'

Judge Reverses Plan To Interdict Indians

By BOB DONAHUE

Tahsis Magistrate H. A. Tasker has reversed his decision to interdict the Nootka Indians at Friendly Cove on northern Vancouver Island.

He said this morning in a telephone interview that he now does not plan to interdict one Indian on the reserve.

"I only wanted to frighten them," he said.

When asked if he had received any outside direction, perhaps from the provincial attorney-general's department, he said:

"I have no comment to make. Any further information will have to come from Dr. Gilbert Kennedy, the deputy attorney-general."

Dr. Kennedy denied there has ever been any direct interference by the department in connection with Magistrate Tasker's plan, although he said it was discussed at a recent magistrate's conference in Campbell River.

The deputy attorney-general said he has known for some time that Magistrate Tasker did not intend to interdict the Indians.

Magistrate Tasker first publicly announced his intention to interdict every adult in the 216-member band on April 19.

●

He had made the statement originally at a previous inquest into the death of a Friendly Cove baby who had burned to death in a house on the reserve in the aftermath of a drinking party.

Magistrate Tasker said alcohol had been involved in a series of serious crimes on the reserve during the past year.

It was also attributed to several drownings from Indian fishing boats.

Magistrate Tasker said today his plan to frighten the Indians into "pulling up their socks" was working well until the press got hold of it.

"After that all I got was a lot of abuse and unnecessary telephone calls."

He said he felt he has achieved something in that the federal government has now appointed a community development officer to look after the Friendly Cove Indians.

"There is a lot less drinking going on at the reserve now that there was before," he said.

"But maybe its only because the fishing season is in progress.

"I don't know what will happen when the fishermen go back to the reserve and have nothing to do.

Junior Warden N.S.-Bound

Donald St. Pierre, 18, of 940 Falmouth Road, has been named B.C. representative on a Canada-wide exchange program by the Canadian Forestry Association of B.C.

The Saanich junior forest warden will leave July 3 to attend a summer camp near Liverpool, N.S.

Donor of the scholarship is the Victoria Hoo-Hoo Club.

He disagreed with the recreation and community services committee which suggested the dances would attract "young hoods".

"I can't see it happening at a public dance of this nature," said 19-year-old Ray. "We've never had any trouble at other outdoor shows."

He shot down Mayor A. W. Toone's idea to hold teen-age hootenannys.

Bill Pick, 19, who plays organ for a group called the Take Four, supported Ald. Mike Griffin who suggested the young bands be allowed to play for a probationary period.

"I think it's unfair to turn the idea down flat," said Bill. "They're not giving the young people a chance. It could be a good deal."

He said: "I kind of expected this reaction. A few rowdies can cause a lot of trouble but it would have been nice to give the youngsters a try.

The dances were to have been held once a week between 7:30 and 9 p.m.

Conventional dances begin June 29 and will be held each Wednesday through July and August.

SCHOOL TENDER UNDER ESTIMATE

G. H. Wheaton Ltd. was low bidder on the proposed vocational school addition to Oak Bay Senior Secondary School.

The firm's tender was of $373,581, $13,000 less than the Greater Victoria School Board's estimate,

Other tenders opened Friday were Bird Construction Ltd., $411,713; Farmer Construction Ltd., $383,970; R. A. Hall Ltd., $382,450.

All five Victoria region senior secondary schools are to have vocational facilities.

Red Tape Snarls Masako's Dream

By DESMOND BILL
Times Staff Reporter

VANCOUVER — A pretty, 20-year-old Japanese girl who hoped to spend the summer in Victoria has been ordered deported by Vancouver immigration officials.

Masako Endo was released on $500 bond in custody of the John Collins family, pending disposition of an appeal to the immigration appeal board in Ottawa.

She was to arrive in Victoria this afternoon.

Miss Endo's "dream come true" turned suddenly into a nightmare Friday when she arrived on a flight shortly after noon.

She expected to go on to Pat Bay Airport to meet the Victoria family that had invited her to Canada for the summer.

It was the realization of a dream she has had for years.

Frightened and alone, barely able to speak English, she did not know what was happening to her or why the officials would not let her proceed.

Then a hastily-summoned interpreter soon explained the reason: She was coming to Canada for four months but did not have a visa, a requirement for Japanese visitors coming here for a period longer than three months.

By then she had been in Canada seven lonely, upsetting hours and was close to tears.

By that time, too, Mr. Collins was in a rage over the foul-up.

The last-minute order was in keeping with earlier complications in Miss Endo's story.

★ ★ ★

They began earlier this year when she wrote to The Daily Times asking the paper to find someone to sponsor her on a visit to Canada.

Mr. Collins, a Liquor Control Board employee, read about her request.

The Collins, who have two children, Trudi, 7, and Deborah, 7, both students at Westerham Schol, felt they should make the offer to sponsor her.

Mr. Collins, a powerfully-built man with a personality to match, feels strongly that "the world has shrunk and we had better start making friends with the people in it."

But unlike others, he and his wife Myra did something about it.

They contacted immigration officials, found out the required procedure, and wrote Miss Endo, agreeing to sponsor her and offering to let her stay in their home and maintain her.

Friends who heard of the situation offered to assist financially to bring her here, but it transpired that the difficulty was not money but Miss Endo's father.

B.C. Ferries Face Tieup

FULL-SCALE STRIKE AHEAD?

Will it be a long weekend for woodworkers — or the start of a full-scale strike?

The answer will be known Monday morning.

By Friday, more than half the 26,000 coastal loggers and mill workers had gone on strike despite pleas from union leaders.

Saturday and Sunday, however, are days off.

The first indications will come Sunday midnight when graveyard mill shifts are due to report for work, followed by the 8 a.m. day shifts.

FOLLOWED ACT

The union had complied with all the terms of the Labor Relations Act, but leaders recommended the men take no action until the report of industrial inquiry commissioner Mr. Justice Nathan Nemetz is received next week.

But rank-and-file members said they were fed up with negotiation delays, and began walking out in growing numbers.

The union's 10-man negotiating committee met Friday and decided not to call a strike in the name of the IWA "until the commissioner's settlement proposals are available, provided such proposals are made within a week."

LEGAL RIGHT

The IWA said the men "voluntarily exercised their legal right to stop work" and blamed the spontaneous action on "aggravating delays in the negotiations for which the employers and not the union have been responsible."

An industry statement said the expired master agreement is still in effect.

"That master agreement says that the contract with the IWA shall remain in force until a new agreement is reached or until negotiations are discontinued by either party.

"The mediation process under Mr. Justice Nemetz is part of the negotiations which will continue until he hands down his report."

10 IN JAIL

In other labor news, 10 union leaders are in jail, negotiations involving 4,000 men at Cominco in Trail have adjourned and Vancouver's 1,500 civic outside workers started the seventh week of their strike.

Other strikes include inside and outside civic workers in North Vancouver and car salesmen at Dominion-Vancouver Motors.

Ten officials of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union chose three months in jail rather than pay fines for contempt of court.

The jailed men included most of the union's negotiating committee. The present contract covering 2,800 longshoremen expires at the end of next month.

At Trail, the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers said contract talks with Cominco have adjourned to allow the union to advise its membership of the latest company offer.

The union wants an extra 50 cents an hour and has rejected 18½ cents. Basic rate is $2.24½. The current contract runs out July 1.

By ROGER STONEBANKS

Five hundred ferry workers could be the next to go on strike in B.C.

The possibility of a strike against B.C. Ferries was raised today after deck and catering workers voted 78 per cent against recommendations of an employee-management committee on work schedules.

The vote was conducted over the last three days by secret ballot at meetings at the four major terminals—Swartz Bay, Tsawwassen, Horseshoe Bay and Departure Bay.

The committee's report was accepted earlier this week by the cabinet.

It recommended recognition rights for a union of unlicensed personnel, revised winter work schedules, a 10 per cent pay bonus for working the unchanged summer schedule, shorthanded pay, some extra staff and other benefits.

★ ★ ★

The employees told their representatives they want full collective bargaining "in its true sense," the union of their choice and dues checkoff.

In the past, the provincial government has refused to give collective bargaining rights to the B.C. Government Employees Association.

The employees have sent a telegram to Attorney-General Robert Bonner, chairman of a special cabinet sub-committee dealing with ferry problems, advising him of their rejection.

There was no immediate reply from Mr. Bonner, who was travelling today.

Further meetings with the government will be sought.

Said one spokesman: "We are hopeful we can have further talks with the government and resolve this problem."

Earlier, unlicensed personnel agreed to strike next month to back demands for full collective bargaining rights, their own union and dues checkoff.

★ ★ ★

This date was changed to last Thursday but called off when the committee's report was announced last Monday.

Troubles on the ferries extend back over at least the last three years.

The latest round began in December when new schedules were announced—10 days on and four days off in winter and 12 on with three off in the summer.

On New Year's Day, two crews at Swartz Bay walked off forcing the cancellation of three sailings.

They complained to the Civil Service Commission, which recommended no change in the schedules.

The crews then appealed for a board of reference arbitration, but the government declined to establish one.

Civic Workers Set To Veto Wage Offer

VANCOUVER (CP) — A provincial government inquiry commissioner Friday night proposed a settlement that would give Vancouver's 1,500 striking outside workers a basic wage of $2.60 an hour by July 1, 1967.

The union executive announced immediately that it will urge rejection of the recommendation at a general membership meeting Sunday.

Basic rate now is $2.28½.

Professor Ray Herbert of the law department of the University of British Columbia, appointed last week to investigate the dispute recommended a 13-cent increase retroactive to Jan. 1, 1966, six cents more on July 1, another six cents next Jan. 1 and a final seven and one half cents on July 1, 1967.

The union wants a 70-cent increase over three years. It struck at midnight May 6, after rejecting a final city offer of 28½ cents over two years.

Labor Minister Peterson said the Herbert report was "fair and reasonable" and he urged acceptance by both parties "as quickly as possible."

Fawns were found this morning by Robert Coburn, left, and John Lindsay beside body of mother on highway near Sooke. 12 Men Missing As Trawler Sinks

HALIFAX (CP) — Twelve men from the Nova Scotia fishing trawler Reliance are missing and feared dead following a collision early today between the trawler and the Liberian freighter Bordapian off Nova Scotia's south shore.

The air-sea rescue centre here reported the trawler sank immediately after the collision, which occurred in dense fog about 40 miles southeast of Shelburne, N.S.

RADIOES NEWS

The 5,711-ton freighter, owned by Bordagain Shipping Co. Ltd., radioed first word of the collision at 12:30 a.m. today.

The Canadian Coast Guard cutter Rally was dispatched from Shelburne and reached the scene about 4:30 a.m.

She was being assisted in her search for possible survivors by an unidentified trawler, but dense fog shrouded the area and little hope was offered for the missing seamen.

The rescue centre here said an aircraft would be sent to help in the search as soon as visibility cleared, but an officer at the centre added: "It doesn't look too good for the rest of the day."

The Bordapian, whose port of registry is listed as Monrovia, Liberia, was headed for Halifax when the collision occurred.

The Reliance sailed from Lunenburg, 70 miles southwest of Halifax, at 7 p.m. Friday for a nine-day fishing trip to George's Bank, off the southern tip of Nova Scotia.

Robert Allan, owner of the 298-ton trawler, said he normally goes to sea as her skipper, "but I broke a couple of ribs ashore and so remained behind this time."

SPY AGENCY ROW

CIA Director Resigns Post

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson announced today the resignation of retired Admiral William F. Raborn as director of the Central Intelligence Agency and said he will be succeeded by his deputy, Richard Helms.

There had been reports of unhappiness at high levels within the CIA about Raborn's direction of the super-secret agency.

As the new head of the CIA, Helms inherits a controversy between Raborn and Senator J. W. Fulbright (Dem.—Ark.), chairman of the Senate foreign relations committee. It was disclosed Friday that Raborn had refused to discuss CIA "sources and methods" at a briefing last February for the foreign relations committee.

His refusal triggered the current Senate battle over whether members of the Fulbright committee should be added to the existing Senate group which supervises the CIA.

Johnson also volunteered a new statement on the Vietnamese war and said that, as a result of almost daily reviews of the situation, "we sincerely feel that the national interest requires that we persist in our present policy."

He hinted at further intensification of U.S. military efforts by saying later that the Pentagon was trying to step up the pace of military hardware purchases this month. That way, he said, the United States could "get earlier deliveries and increase our efforts."

WIRE BRIEFS

Violent Quake

JOHANNESBURG (UPI) — A violent earthquake shook South Africa today along a broad east-west belt stretching from the coast deep into the interior. There were no immediate reports of damage or injuries.

Shot to Death

VANCOUVER (CP)—Ottmar Hanatscheck, a 45-year-old marine engineer, was killed in a shooting incident in a city apartment early today. A 25-year-old woman who telephoned police to report the shooting is being held by police for questioning.

Terms Accepted

MONTREAL (CP)—The Montreal branch of the Air Canada Sales Employees Association has voted to accept the terms of a new contract with its employer, an association spokesman said Friday night.

That Snap May Be a Passport To Trip Around the World

By CANDIDE TEMPLE

A picture of a baby, a puppy, a sunset scene — these or a host of other subjects caught on film could take you on a fun-filled, globe-circling trip for two with all expenses paid and $1,000 spending money.

All this just by entering the photo in The Times Amateur Snapshot Contest starting June 25. You could be the lucky grand prize winner, or take one of the weekly cash prizes in the six-week contest.

You could also come out on top in one of the three categories — The World in Which We Live, People of the World, and Animals of the World — which qualifies your picture in the national competition.

Only black and white prints will be accepted, made from any type of film.

You may develop and print the pictures yourself, or have them done professionally.

No pictures will be returned.

Mail the print or prints, with your name and address printed clearly on the back, to the Amateur Snapshot Contest Editor, at the Victoria Daily Times.

It's not necessary to send the negatives too, but if you are named final prize winner in one of the three categories, you will be asked to produce the negative.

The contest is geared for amateurs — photographers who do it just for fun, although they may have sold pictures to a publication or

Voice From Afar

THE VITRIOLIC ATTACK ON Premier Bennett and his Hydro empire which is published in the latest issue of Barron's, the very conservative, highly regarded New York financial and business weekly, raises some questions which British Columbians have long been asking.

Much of the Wall Street newspaper's anger, of course, stems from the B.C. Electric take-over of five years ago — a closed chapter for most residents of this province. But the paper's comments on the costs and prospects of the vast Peace River and Columbia hydro complex echo those of many local observers over the past few years.

In his latest essay into the New York money market, Mr. Bennett is seeking funds at a time when he must offer very high interest rates. Almost coincident with the Hydro issue, for instance, was an American utility offering which reportedly yielded a record high return to investors. A day later came a $530 million issue of United States government securities which will pay 5.75%. Mr. Bennett must be feeling a financial pinch to be driven to enter such a race for funds. Local investors will recall that his last issue here dropped $2 almost before the certificates were mailed.

In recent months Mr. Bennett and his colleagues have been voicing rather unusual warnings about rising costs, particularly in connection with the Peace and Columbia River projects. This is as close as the ebullient premier can come to a public expression of concern, and we should take it as a fair indication that there are problems ahead, dynamism or no.

The Barron's editorial raises the question of the eventual price of Peace and Columbia power in the light of the increasing cost of financing the projects. Much of the power rate must be dependent on the cost of borrowing capital—and the latter cost is rising steadily. The New York paper complains that the premier's submission is not very informative — a complaint which British Columbians have long been uttering. We have only Mr. Bennett's optimism to satisfy our worries about the disposal of the eventual power output, and the rate which we will have to pay for it. Meanwhile the debt for which the people of British Columbia are responsible is rising to unprecedented heights, and the annual charge for interest increases in proportion.

Discounting some of the journal's attack on the grounds of undying resentment of the B.C. Electric expropriation, there is still much in its criticism which demands close attention. In any case Mr. Bennett's position in the bond market has by no means been improved by the widely published attack. Is it not time now for some frank and candid answers?

A Far East Council

ALTHOUGH CAREFULLY avoiding any reference to China, a 10-nation conference has established an Asian regional organization which could be the stiffest roadblock yet erected in the way of Communist expansion plans.

The Asian and Pacific Council, as the organization is to be known, was formed at a meeting last week in Seoul, South Korea, for the purpose of "a continuing process of consultations, on a regular basis on political, economic, technical, social and information matters," according to the official communique.

At the insistence of Japan and several other nations—and against the wishes of South Korea, South Viet Nam, The Philippines and the Nationalist Chinese regime on Taiwan—there was no mention made of a formal military alliance, and the organization is to have no formal charter and operating secretariat.

In hard cold war terms this may seem to be a disadvantage in some respects, but it also is useful in that the council cannot easily become a focus for Chinese attack on the grounds that the member nations are conspiring against the dominant Asian power. It is one of the facts of life that Asian nations must come to terms with the continued presence for many years of a Communist-ruled China and provocative acts are definitely out of order. Australia and New Zealand, along with Japan, are reported to have brought this wise counsel to the meeting.

The primary job of the council, in fact, should be to promote not military alliances in Asia but economic and social progress which should form a far more solid barrier to Communist expansion. Militarily the area is now dominated by United States power and a military alliance of the council's member nations could only serve to put the council under American hegemony, thus increasing the tensions.

The council hopes in the future to attract other "free countries in the Asian and Pacific regions to participate in future consultations" and the sentiment was expressed that some day it could even include Communist nations.

This organization deserves the whole-hearted support of the West—but in practical ways suited to the area it is intended to serve. The time has passed when the West could impose on Asian countries the type of dominance in military and economic matters inherent in an organization such as the South-East Asia Treaty Organization. Asians must be free to take the lead in handling their own affairs rather than be led in ways which outsiders think would be best for them.

B.C. and Air Pollution

THE BRITISH COLUMBIA branch of the Canadian Bar Associaion sees some deficiencies in the recent laws against air pollution passed by municipalities. For that reason it seeks provincial legislation on the issue, assuming that the senior government is in a stronger position to make such laws stick.

That, at least, seems to be the point made by the sponsor of the recommendation passed by the bar association. "Present regulations passed, but not always enforced, by cities and municipalities do not really solve the problem," he says.

The spokesman has some justification for his statement, though as far as this region is concerned, tardiness in enforcement does not appear to be the wilful intent of the city or municipalities. It is possible to bring an offender into court under regulations now established here. The offender seldom is so summoned. In the first instance, few municipalities wish to jeopardize the payroll of an operating plant in their jurisdiction. They exercise a leniency that blunts and frequently removes the penalty implicit in their laws. Prosecution is delayed to permit installation of proper burning equipment. The offender keeps on offending often beyond the deadline prescribed for him.

Passage of an appropriate provincial law could eliminate delay in enforcement. Moreover, as the sponsor suggests, industrial expansion in British Columbia creates an air pollution problem that extends beyond municipal jurisdiction. Only provincial authority would be broad enough to cover it.

The points are well taken. This community has had enough experience with the difficulties of curbing air pollution to appreciate the need for a strong provincial law covering the problem.

At the last session of the provincial legislature Mr. Tony Gargrave's advocacy of such a provincial law was side-tracked by a ministerial reference to the possible outcome of a pollution conference in eastern Canada this summer. With or without the findings of such investigation, the province should be prepared to act.

"First we wanted to give it to you at 5 o'clock, but we decided to let you sleep in for half an hour more."

To the Editor

A "Thank-You" to School

A little while ago, one of your staff members, Desmond Bill, wrote an article with a rather cynical outlook on graduation. Many of the students at this school, Victoria Senior Secondary, if not all, were somewhat irritated to find a mere spectator voice what seemed to be the indifferent attitude of one student as representing the whole of the sentiments of the '66 graduating class.

It would be somewhat naive not to expect criticism from some students, but they are by no means the majority. To a grade 12 boy or girl who has contributed both a part of his personality and his efforts to a high school, graduation is the culmination of a long and tedious process of growing up. Granted for many the process will continue for years to come, while for others it only lacks practice and experience. But at least, the race has begun and everyone is running.

As for the "flunkies" who stand up and receive recognition, their fate has yet to be determined by examinations and after all if we are to base an entire law system on "the benefit of the doubt" why not practice what we preach. They have as much right as anyone to be there.

Graduation is the grand expression of a thank-you, not only for what we have received in 12 years of school, but also to those people who have given it to us. You wouldn't criticize a church for the same thing.—A Grad of '66.

FROM LONDON

Waiting, and Waiting, to Be a Canadian

By MARTIN DEWEY

NEXT to getting married, the most important step that a British citizen is ever likely to take is to walk into one of the immigration offices scattered about the country. If he decides on a Canadian immigration centre, as close to 100,000 are expected to do this year, and if he lives in the London area, the adventure—for it is an adventure, no matter how we pad the corners—will begin at the entrance to a large, multi-windowed building that looks across Grosvenor Square to the gleaming, glassy expanse of the American embassy.

Dewey

If his notions are typically British, and if he stops to think about it, he might find that these two buildings and their juxtaposition are peculiarly appropriate to his own ideas about the North American relationship. The American building, its ultra-modern facade surmounted by a great golden eagle, strikes a note of brash irreverence amid its genteel surroundings. With its traditional design, the Canadian building is more familiar and comfortable. Yet it lies so very close to the American building—not in its shadow, perhaps, but appearing to bask in its boldness and strength.

That same British citizen will find, too, that meeting his first Canadian is not all that easy. Inside the main doors he will be directed by an oh-so-British commissionaire to the immigration centre on the first floor (it is not yet time for him to learn that Canadians call this the second floor). There, after queuing up in the best British manner, he will be asked in the best of British accents to fill out a preliminary form.

This done, and because it is now the busy season for immigration, he will take his place is the waiting room among hundreds of his countrymen and their ever-restless children and their ever-squalling babies and he will wait. And wait. He hasn't brought anything to read (that might look off-hand) so he will likely go to the pamphlet-rack in search of clues about what could well be home for the rest of his life.

Clues About Canada

What he can't know is that the waiting room itself holds at least some of the clues about the Canadian way of doing things. It is in fact a distinctively Canadian place, decorated in a style that might be called Unemployment Insurance commission Modern.

A little stiff and hungry, perhaps, our British citizen is finally called by an immigration officer. He has been observing his first live Canadians as they scurried about the waiting room with files under their arms and overwork on their faces. He has noted the youthful short-back-and sides and the occasional crew-cut, the snappy North American cut of the jackets and, occasionally, the North American waistline. But he is totally unprepared for the overwhelming North American folksiness of the greeting: "I guess you must think it's time to put on the feedbag!"

Feedbag or no, he follows the officer into a glass-enclosed cubicle. He sits, trying to look twice as sincere as he did in the waiting room, while the Canadian satisfies himself that this particular candidate has the necessary high school education, that he has a skill that is required in Canada (only two per cent are admitted from Britain without such skills) and that he is, in general, the kind of person that will "fit in."

Mutually Impressed

The immigration officer likes what he sees and the candidate likes what he hears about his own particular prospects in Canada. At one point, it is mildly suggested that the candidate's intention of settling "somewhere in the Ontario area" is not as precise as he might have thought. Too, the plan to "drive around Canada to get an idea of the country" might be a little ambitious, but the interview goes well and both agree that the candidate is now ready for the next step in the immigration process.

Another session in another waiting room (he learns from a glass case on the wall that bus drivers hand out things called transfers and that Canadian coins are few and tiny) and he is led into a cubicle for a medical examination at Canadian government expense. Having been pronounced healthy enough to enjoy the Canadian way of life without clogging up our hospitals, he reports back for a final interview where he is told, yes, Canada would like to have him. He agrees to a suggestion that he keep his little nest egg intact and that he accept a travel loan to be repaid, interest-free, within two years of getting a job in Canada.

One of the Multitude

It is done. In the space of one day, our British citizen has become one of the 500,000 who are expected to arrive in Canada this year as immigrants. But he has been lucky. He was not sent home for additional documents. He filled out his forms correctly and passed his medical. He was not among the 40 to 50 per cent of initial inquiries who, for one reason or another, fail to complete the immigration process.

More to the point, he was not among the 10 to 12 per cent of applicants who are turned away outright for reasons of poor health, inadequate qualifications or because of what might be called sociological factors (for example, it is not unknown for colored applicants to be advised that they would find it hard to pursue this or that particular calling in the Canadian environment).

He is, for all practical purposes, a new Canadian.

Problem of the Alien 'Helpers' in Mississippi

By CHARLES BARTLETT

THE raciall ice is melting in Mississippi and the most immediate sign of it is the ill-concealed unhappiness of the state's native Negro leaders at the intrusion of the Meredith marchers.

"We're tired of being everybody's good thing," said Charles Evers of the state NAACP in echoing the solid view of leading local Negroes that the march carries a potential for damage which is unmatched by its constructive possibilities. Mississippi has quietly moved beyond the stage in which outside militants are useful.

This mood was implicit in the memorial march for Medgar Evers in Jackson last Sunday. Some 1,000 Negroes, who endured the broiling sun with little decomposure of their spruciness and dignity, seemed to be saying that this was their struggle and that they are confident of its outcome. Their most emphatic chorus of "amens" underscored Roy Wilkins' admonition: "When it is all over, we must live with the white people in mutual respect."

The summer of 1966 seems in Mississippi to be almost a generation removed from the summer of 1964 which was the last grim stand of the irreconcilables. The fact that much must still be done before the races live in mutual respect does not shatter the broad recognition that immense strides have been accomplished, thanks to the new civil rights laws and the subtle efforts of thoughtful men.

In these circumstances there is an instinct to tone down the stridency of the freedom movement. Projects like the Delta Ministry, whose white staff members seem to be telling rural Negroes to work for a future in which they are free of dependence on white men, are attracting heavy criticism from Negro leaders and white moderates.

Tougaloo, a private Negro college, is losing some of its reknown as a flaming activist center under an impressive new president, Dr. George Owens. The Negroes' indisposition to cut loose from the white race was empahsized by the low vote for FDP candidates — only some 40,000 of the 120,000 Negores who are registered turned out for the primary on June 7.

The civil rights push is still on because the Negroes know they must keep pushing or their momentum will cease. But much of the preoccupation has been diverted into the opportunity of the poverty programs and even into a new campaign to forge a political alliance between the Negroes and organized labor.

Those working on both sides recognize that from this point extremists of the left can menace progress more severely perhaps than extremists of the right. Thus the mixed couples who made a point of attending the first bi-racial services of the Gallaway Methodist Church last winter enlarged the shock of the transition and discouraged its imitation by other churches .

Having moved to take absolute control of the Mississippi freedom movement away from radical outsiders, the Negro leaders are dismayed at the slowness of the whites in realizing that they must build up the stature of the local leadership in order to keep out the aliens. "They talk of dealing with responsible leadership," the complaint goes, "but they don't give us anything to show for our responsibility."

The moderate whites recognize that these Negro leaders need far more recognition than they have been given. They need, in order to hold their standing among their people, to sit on bi-racial committees with leading citizens and to be able to show evidence that their opinions are counted as signficant.

Unhappily this is a stage in the evolution of Mississippi in which manifestations of this kind are difficult. "Segregation is still fashionable," as one man put it, and the important citizens working against it will sacrifice their effectiveness if they show their hand too blatantly.

Mississippi is balking at the step of open bi-racial consultation which the Negroes desire as the next tender of their equality. But the atmosphere is ripening and the step will not be delayed for long because it is essential to the bi-racial goal of allowing Mississippi's problems to be negotiated by Mississippians.

FROM SASKATOON

An Indian Shrine Unknown to the Indians

By JAMES H. GRAY

ONE of the quickest ways of getting an argument going in Saskatchewan today is to stand up in a meeting and shout: "Mistaseni!" For those who came in late, Mistaseni is the name of a 5,000-ton boulder sitting in the valley of the Saskatchewan River. It is allegedly a Cree Indian shrine which will be buried under 100 feet of water with the completion of the Saskatchewan River Dam.

Gray

The argument swirling around the rock is quite simple. Is the rock in fact an Indian shrine or an elaborate practical joke? The resident Indian expert at the University of Saskatchewan department of anthropology says it's a shine. He is Professor Zenon Pohorecky. Most other people seem inclined to the notion that the uproar over the stone may be somebody's practical joke.

Whatever the answer, some huge sums of money are being talked about. A Committee - to - save - the - Mistaseni has been organized in Saskatoon. It wants somebody to pick up the rock and move it to higher ground ten miles away. The Committee even rounded up comedian Dick Gregory to headline a protest meeting and raised $1,500. Other donations totalling $2,000 were scrounged and the Saskatchewan government kicked in $3,000.

Most of the money has been spent on telegrams, telephone calls and publicity in a drive to get the federal government to contribute $75,000 or $200,000 which it will cost to move the rock. Estimates of the cost of the movement vary widely, depending on the estimaters. Thus the Prairie Farm Rehabilitation Administration, the federal agency building the dam, placed the cost at $200,000 while local committee members favor the smaller figure.

Meanwhile the Canadian Historical Sites and Monuments Board has been called in, probably to try to authenticate the claims that the big rock has some religious significance to some Plains Indian tribe. This is likely to take some doing.

The Saskatoon Star Phoenix, for example, sent a correspondent out to interview the Indians in the area. She got nowhere, and could find only a single Indian who had ever heard of the big rock, And his memory of it was exceedingly vague. He thought he recalled having heard that the rock meant something to the Assiniboines. It meant nothing to the Crees. On that all the Indians were agreed.

In Alberta, Indian lore buffs seem agreed that the Plains Indians, being nomads of the first order, were not given to shrine building or shrine worshipping. If the big rock had any significance, it might have been as a meeting place where the bands of a tribe could come together.

As against this, however, is the experience of the Palliser expedition which found it difficult to talk any Indians into venturing into the South Saskatchewan River country on any pretext. It was a sort of no-man's-land between the Cree and the Blackfoot and discretion was regarded as the better part of valor on both sides.

The big stone is probably a glacial erratic, dumped in Saskatchewan by the last retreating ice age.

Perhaps the most curious aspect of the whole agitation is this — the only people getting excited about the Mistaseni are the white people of Saskatoon. The Indians are reacting to the uproar with stoical indifference.

Nature Rambles

By FREEMAN KING

FOR a rugged afternoon's scramble go to Matheson Lake at Metchosin. On the dry banks beside the lake you can find the Commandra growing. This plant has a woody stem and is not very common in this part of the Island.

Along the shallow marshy edges of the lake you can find the Marsh Cinquefoil with its dark purple flowers that have sharp pointed petals and long pinnated leaves. Strange as it may seem, this plant belongs to the Rose family.

Growing on some very old logs that reach out into the water there are a number of Sundews. This plant is an insect-eater and captures its prey by the sticky hairs on its spatulate leaves.

There is a bay in the lake that is covered with the Pond Lily, about three acres in extent. The pads form an almost complete cover over the water.

On the pads there are hundreds of cases from which dragon and damsel flies have emerged. Some of the adult dragon flies are of normal size, others with almost black wings are extremely large.

Also on the pads are many tiny beetles with brilliant metallic green wing covers. If you turn them in the sunlight they seem to change to a purplish red. There are very many other fascinating insects around this lake.

Frogs and salamanders abound. This is a very "rich" piece of water, for there are many gullys leading into it which add minerals and other material from the higher ground during the rainy seasons.

'Judges Should Not Be Used For Inquiries'

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservative Leader Diefenbaker was a thorn in the government's side in the Commons Friday as he criticized the Liberals' handling of Munsinger-type royal commission inquiries.

Later he softened his thrust in delivering an eloquent plea that the government save the Mistaseni Indian shrine from ending up at the bottom of the lake being formed behind the South Saskatchewan River dam.

Other opposition MPs attacked the government on the handling and the principle of the Combines Investigation Act.

Despite the cut-and-thrust, the Commons approved the spending estimates of the Indian affairs department and those of Guy Favreau, president of the Privy Council.

Mr. Diefenbaker, in his criticism of judicial inquiries said there were too many of them and too many judges were involved.

SEEN AS THREAT

Inquiries with political overtones were a threat to democracy. Rules of procedure were too loose. Judges, particularly from the Supreme Court of Canada, should not head inquiries into controversial political matters.

"We dare not, if democracy is to be preserved, allow for the setting up of royal commissions having essentially the characteristics of state trials," he said.

Rules of evidence used in courts of law should apply to judicial inquiries, he said. Any other course would destroy the judiciary and lead to harassment of politicians as in totalitarian countries.

Assurance was needed that citizens would not be slandered by hearsay evidence at inquiries.

Stressing he was not announcing government policy, Mr. Favreau said the Inquiries Act did not outline rules of procedure sufficiently and safeguards could be added to protect individuals. The powers of the commissioner could be strengthened.

Mr. Diefenbaker's handling of the Gerda Munsinger case is the subject of a current inquiry. The West German blonde, labelled a security risk, was alleged to have had liaisons with Conservative cabinet ministers when Mr. Diefenbaker was prime minister.

ATTACKS COMBINES

One of the strongest attacks on the combines matter came from Frank Howard (NDP—Skeena) who claimed the combines branch was being starved to serve political ends. It was not fulfilling its obligations because of influence exerted by friends of the Liberal party who hoped to control the financial affairs of the country.

Mr. Favreau said the act will be revised and more investigators hired. But despite its limited staff the branch was doing an enormous amount of work. Mr. Howard's charges were false.

The act imposes penalties on companies or businessmen who conspire to fix prices, undercut competitors unfairly or set up monopolies.

Later, Northern Affairs Minister Laing, piloting Indian affairs estimates, said the government plans to redouble its efforts to promote industrial development on Indian reserves.

Indian housing was also in a bad state. As a result the government had upgraded its program in this area to build 1,500 houses rather than the 1,150 planned earlier.

There is a power that surpasses all human might. This power is capable of helping man on each step of his journey to eternity. It can calm a troubled heart and lift a weary spirit. For centuries, unbelieving men have denied this power exists...but they have passed on, and the power remains. It is still the hope of a meaningful life for every man.

This power is found in a life of service in Christ... a power for today! Tonight, Dr. Carl Spain will discuss one part of this power. You will want to hear his timely lesson on:

ENTER JACKSON NEXT SATURDAY

King Promises Exciting Climax for Marchers

KING
. . . some funds

GREENWOOD, Miss. (AP)—Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., shaking hands with people who contributed $1 bills to aid the Mississippi march, urged them to be in Jackson when the march ends there a week from today.

King promised there would be entertainment at the end of the march, including, he said, Frank Sinatra, Marlon Brando, Burt Lancaster, Sammy Davis Jr., Gregory Peck and rock-'n'-roll singer James Brown.

Earlier, the rally heard Hosea Williams, director of voter registration and political education for King's Southern Christian Leadership Conference, urge them to "get that vote."

"If we can die in Viet Nam, we can die in Mississippi," Williams said. "I'm sorry I don't have but one life to give for this damnable place, Mississippi."

Said King: "You all know as well as I do an individual takes his life in his own hands when he asserts his rights in Mississippi."

During Friday's march, the demonstrators encountered children waving Confederate flags and a sound truck blaring a Ku Klux Klan song. A white man doused them with a hose and a poisonous snake was found in a truck carrying reporters along the march route.

King has said he expects 25,000 persons in Jackson June 26 for a final march on the state capital.

Williams exhibited a one-sentence letter from the president of Mississippi Valley State College at Itta Bena denying use of the college grounds. Mississippi Valley is a Negro college.

The refusal put today's march goal in doubt. The marchers, completing the journey begun by James Meredith, had planned to stay overnight in Itta Bena, a town of 2,000. They were only two miles away when Friday's trek left off, but were returned in trucks to Greenwood.

Williams told the rally of the need for money. "Put your hands in your pockets and pull out something green."

At this point some people drifted away, but hundreds dug out dollar bills and crowded past the trucks that had been the speakers' platform. They thrust up the money, then shook hands with King. Afterward, Williams said $342 had been collected.

Ferry Walkout Threatens

Red Tape Snarls Masako's Dream

By DESMOND BILL
Times Staff Reporter

VANCOUVER — A pretty, 20-year-old Japanese girl who hoped to spend the summer in Victoria has been ordered deported by Vancouver immigration officials.

Masako Endo was released on $500 bond in custody of the John Collins family, pending disposition of an appeal to the immigration appeal board in Ottawa.

She was to arrive in Victoria this afternoon.

It was the same immigration officer who ordered her deported who released her on bond.

★ ★ ★

Miss Endo's "dream come true" turned suddenly into a nightmare Friday when she arrived on a flight shortly after noon.

She expected to go on to Pat Bay Airport to meet the Victoria family that had invited her to Canada for the summer.

It was the realization of a dream she has had for years.

Frightened and alone, barely able to speak English, she did not know what was happening to her or why the officials would not let her proceed.

Then a hastily-summoned interpreter soon explained the reason: She was coming to Canada for four months but did not have a visa, a requirement for Japanese visitors coming here for a period longer than three months.

An official explained that Japanese are allowed to stay in Canada three months without a visa. However, Masako planned to stay four months.

The Collins family met Miss Endo, whom they knew only by correspondence, in the corridor of the hotel about 7:30 p.m.

By then she had been in Canada seven lonely, upsetting hours and was close to tears.

By that time, too, Mr. Collins was in a rage over the foul-up.

Masako said after the hearing she was exhausted but "terribly grateful" to the Collins family.

She was particularly impressed with Mr. Collins' handling of her defence at the hearing before special inquiry officer C. K. Scatchard.

She said she is worried about the outcome of the hearing but resigned to the situation in which she finds herself.

The last-minute order was in keeping with earlier complications in Miss Endo's story.

They began earlier this year when she wrote to The Daily Times asking the paper to find someone to sponsor her on a visit to Canada.

Mr. Collins, a Liquor Control Board employee, read about her request.

★ ★ ★

The Collins, who have two children, Trudi, 7, and Deborah, 7, both students at Westerham Schol, felt they should make the offer to sponsor her.

Mr. Collins, a powerfully-built man with a personality to match, feels strongly that "the world has shrunk and we had better start making friends with the people in it."

But unlike others, he and his wife Myra did something about it.

They contacted immigration officials, found out the required procedure, and wrote Miss Endo, agreeing to sponsor her and offering to let her stay in their home and maintain her.

Friends who heard of the situation offered to assist financially to bring her here, but it transpired that the difficulty was not money but Miss Endo's father.

FULL-SCALE STRIKE AHEAD?

Will it be a long weekend for woodworkers — or the start of a full-scale strike?

The answer will be known Monday morning.

By Friday, more than half the 26,000 coastal loggers and mill workers had gone on strike despite pleas from union leaders.

Saturday and Sunday, however, are days off.

The first indications will come Sunday midnight when graveyard mill shifts are due to report for work, followed by the 8 a.m. day shifts.

The contract between the International Woodworkers of America and Forest Industrial Relations, representing 120 companies, ran out last Tuesday midnight.

FOLLOWED ACT

The union had complied with all the terms of the Labor Relations Act, but leaders recommended the men take no action until the report of industrial inquiry commissioner Mr. Justice Nathan Nemetz is received next week.

But rank-and-file members said they were fed up with negotiation delays, and began walking out in growing numbers.

The union's 10-man negotiating committee met Friday and decided not to call a strike in the name of the IWA "until the commissioner's settlement proposals are available, provided such proposals are made within a week."

LEGAL RIGHT

The IWA said the men "voluntarily exercised their legal right to stop work" and blamed the spontaneous action on "aggravating delays in the negotiations for which the employers and not the union have been responsible."

An industry statement said the expired master agreement is still in effect.

"That master agreement says that the contract with the IWA shall remain in force until a new agreement is reached or until negotiations are discontinued by either party.

"The mediation process under Mr. Justice Nemetz is part of the negotiations which will continue until he hands down his report."

10 IN JAIL

In other labor news, 10 union leaders are in jail, negotiations involving 4,000 men at Cominco in Trail have adjourned and Vancouver's 1,500 civic outside workers started the seventh week of their strike.

Other strikes include inside and outside civic workers in North Vancouver and car salesmen at Dominion-Vancouver Motors.

Ten officials of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union chose three months in jail rather than pay fines for contempt of court.

Work Plan Rejected

By ROGER STONEBANKS

Five hundred ferry workers could be the ne to go on strike in B.C.

The possibility of a strike against B.C. Ferries was raised today after deck and catering workers voted 78 per cent against recommendations of an employee-management committee on work schedules.

The vote was conducted over the last three days by secret ballot at meetings at the four major terminals—Swartz Bay, Tsawwassen, Horseshoe Bay and Departure Bay.

The committee's report was accepted earlier this week by the cabinet.

It recommended recognition rights for a union of unlicensed personnel, revised winter work schedules, a 10 per cent pay bonus for working the unchanged summer schedule, short-handed pay, some extra staff and other benefits.

★ ★ ★

The employees told their representatives they want full collective bargaining "in its true sense," the union of their choice and dues checkoff.

In the past, the provincial government has refused to give collective bargaining rights to the B.C. Government Employees Association.

The employees have sent a telegram to Attorney-General Robert Bonner, chairman of a special cabinet sub-committee dealing with ferry problems, advising him of their rejection.

There was no immediate reply from Mr. Bonner, who was travelling today.

Further meetings with the government will be sought.

Said one spokesman: "We are hopeful we can have further talks with the government and resolve this problem."

Earlier, unlicensed personnel agreed to strike next month to back demands for full collective bargaining rights, their own union and dues checkoff.

★ ★ ★

This date was changed to last Thursday but called off when the committee's report was announced last Monday.

Troubles on the ferries extend back over at least the last three years.

The latest round began in December when new schedules were announced—10 days on and four days off in winter and 12 on with three off in the summer.

On New Year's Day, two crews at Swartz Bay walked off forcing the cancellation of three sailings.

They complained to the Civil Service Commission, which recommended no change in the schedules.

The crews then appealed for a board of reference arbitration, but the government declined to establish one.

Later the four-man joint committee was appointed.

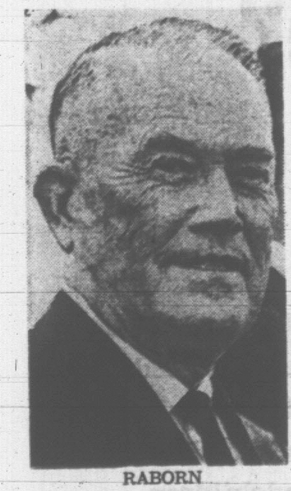
SPY AGENCY ROW

CIA Director Resigns Post

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson announced today the resignation of retired Admiral William F. Raborn as director of the Central Intelligence Agency and said he will be succeeded by his deputy, Richard Helms.



RABORN
. . . triggered fight

There had been reports of unhappiness at high levels within the CIA about Raborn's direction of the super-secret agency.

As the new head of the CIA, Helms inherits a controversy between Raborn and Senator J. W. Fulbright (Dem.—Ark.), chairman of the Senate foreign relations committee. It was disclosed Friday that Raborn had refused to discuss CIA "sources and methods" at a briefing last February for the foreign relations committee.

His refusal triggered the current Senate battle over whether members of the Fulbright committee should be added to the existing Senate group which supervises the CIA.

Johnson also volunteered a new statement on the Vietnamese war and said that, as a result of almost daily reviews of the situation, "we sincerely feel that the national interest requires that we persist in our present policy."

He hinted at further intensification of U.S. military efforts by saying later that the Pentagon was trying to step up the pace of military hardware purchases this month. That way, he said, the United States could "get earlier deliveries and increase our efforts."

12 Men Missing As Trawler Sinks

HALIFAX (CP) — Twelve men from the Nova Scotia fishing trawler Reliance are missing and feared dead following a collision early today between the trawler and the Liberian freighter Bordapian off Nova Scotia's south shore.

The air-sea rescue centre here reported the trawler sank immediately after the collision, which occurred in dense fog about 40 miles southeast of Shelburne, N.S.

RADIOES NEWS

The 5,711-ton freighter, owned by Bordagain Shipping Co. Ltd., radioed first word of the collision at 12:30 a.m. today.

The Canadian Coast Guard cutter Rally was dispatched from Shelburne and reached the scene about 4:30 a.m.

She was being assisted in her search for possible survivors by an unidentified trawler, but dense fog shrouded the area and little hope was offered for the missing seamen.

The rescue centre here said an aircraft would be sent to help in the search as soon as visibility cleared, but an officer at the centre added: "It doesn't look too good for the rest of the day."

The Bordapian, whose port of registry is listed as Monrovia, Liberia, was headed for Halifax when the collision occurred.

The Reliance sailed from Lunenburg, 70 miles southwest of Halifax, at 7 p.m. Friday for a nine-day fishing trip to George's Bank, off the southern tip of Nova Scotia.

Robert Allan, owner of the 298-ton trawler, said he normally goes to sea as her skipper, "but I broke a couple of ribs ashore and so remained behind this time."

That Snap May Be a Passport To Trip Around the World

By CANDIDE TEMPLE

A picture of a baby, a puppy, a sunset scene — these or a host of other subjects caught on film could take you on a fun-filled, globe-circling trip for two with all expenses paid and $1,000 spending money.

All this just by entering the photo in The Times Amateur Snapshot Contest starting June 25. You could be the lucky grand prize winner, or take one of the weekly cash prizes in the six-week contest.

You could also come out on top in one of the three categories — The World in Which We Live, People of the World, and Animals of the World — which qualifies your picture in the national competition.

Only black and white prints will be accepted, made from any type of film.

You may develop and print the pictures yourself, or have them done professionally.

No pictures will be returned.

It's not necessary to send the negatives too, but if you are named final prize winner in one of the three categories, you will be asked to produce the negative.

The contest is geared for amateurs — photographers who do it just for fun, although they may have sold pictures to a publication or
